NEARLY 1500 MEN WERE REGISTERED

None, So Far As Known, Failed to Present Themselves In Garrett County

The first Federal registration in the history of the country occurred on Tuesday, and from every section of the land reports come that the young manhood of the nation presented themselves without protest to be enrolled and be made subject to the draft for army purposes,

Garrett county is proud of her young men. They turned out en masse and without protest were enrolled as probable soldiers for the defence of their country. It is questionable if an individual in the county coming within the ages specified in the draft measure failed to register, or if there is an instance of this it was through ignorance and not because of cowardice or the fear that the law would be invoked.

As is well known the bone and sinew of Garrett county has sprug from German stock. Especially is this true of certain sections of the county and in those sections where the German blood predominated the registration buildings were crowded from the hour of the opening until the booths closed at nine o'clock in the evening.

The registration, by districts, for those of the caucasian race, was as follows:

District No. 1, Swanton	58
District No. 2, Friendsville	125
District No. 3, Grantsville	181
District No. 4, Bloomington	73
District No. 5, Accident	79
District No. 6, Sang Run	59
District No. 7, East Oakland	132
District No. 8, Gorman	44
District No. 8, Red House	89
District No. 9, Johnsons	61
District No. 10, Deer Park	87
District No. 11, The Elbow	28
District No. 12, Bittinger	62
District No. 13, Kitzmiller	174
District No. 14, West Oakland	179

CIRCUIT COURT IS IN SESSION

At Which Chief Judge Boyd Makes Eloquent Address.

The June Term of the Circuit for Garrett convened in Oakland last Monday morning, with Chief Judge A. Hunter Boyd presiding. Judge Boyd in his address upon the opening of court made a most eloquent address, in which he took the opportunity of reminding all of the duty we as citizens owe our country at this time, and we are sorry we are unable to publish his talk in full, for it contained much that could not but be of value to each and every one of us, and more especially to the younger men who will most likely be called upon to take up arms for the nation. He also called the attention of the grand jury, of which Mr. George W. Weitzell is foreman, to the various infractions of the law which it would be required to investigate and up to the time of going to press that body has found and returned about 20 indictments.

The week so far has been taken up with the appeal and trial dockets, a number of cases being disposed of and quite a large number continued.

The grand jury is still in session and will probably not reach an adjournment until the end of the week. The criminal docket will come up next Monday.

STIFF FINES IMPOSED

Two Cases Involving Operation of Traction Engine on Road Tried

On Friday afternoon last Alvey Long of Washington county, and Luther Keller, of Garrett county, were arrested upon a warrant issued by Justice West upon information furnished by Resident Engineer Downey of the State Roads Commission, charging the two men with having operated upon the State road at a point near Hoyes a traction engine equipped with cleats upon the wheels which did the road bed much damage and injury.

The men, so it transpired at the trial, were using the machine to transport material over the road and when it struck a grade the wheels buried themselves into the top dressing and macadam, tearing out large pieces. They were both arrested by Sheriff Ashby and at the conclusion of the hearing a fine of $25 and costs against each was assessed by the Justice. An appeal to the Circuit Court was noted but later the fines and costs were paid.

Among the prosecuting witnesses were Roads Commission Uhl and Engineer Downey, both of whom stated that in future every violation of the road law will be prosecuted to the fullest extent.

Mr. Thomas J. Browning returned home on Thursday last from Washington, D. C., where he had gone to interview the Secretary of the Navy on behalf of his son, who is a machine gun man on one of the battleships of the navy.

EMPLOYERS FIND THAT "FIRING" HELP INVOLVES WASTE

Shift Inefficient Workers About to Find Job They Can Fill.

NEW SYSTEM WORKS WELL

Tendency Among Progressive Manufacturers to Reduce Discharging to Minimum—Some Have Practically Eliminated It, Thereby Saving Money and Increasing Output.

A new era has dawned in industrialism—an era in which the human element is paramount. Wise employers of labor have come to realize that the spirit of their employees is more valuable as an asset than the material and the machinery in their plants. Methods are being adopted by the leaders in the industrial world for conserving and nourishing the loyalty and energy of their working forces.

One of the strongest indications of this upward trend in the industrial field lies in the progress that has been made in the method of hiring help and adapting that help to the work for which it is best fitted. In their efforts to reduce discharging to a minimum many of the biggest manufacturing concerns in the country have established employment departments headed by experts who are fitted by instinct and education to deal with human beings and get the best out of them. After long and careful study these employment experts have come to the conclusion that almost any worker, no matter how inefficient he or she may seem at first, can eventually be taught to do some useful work and that the time spent to make the worker efficient is negligible when compared with the appalling economic waste due to the indiscriminate discharging of employees.

From the standpoint of economy this new aspect to the employment question is a long stride forward, for loose methods of "hiring and firing" constitute the greatest leakage in modern business. The tremendous proportions which this leakage has assumed are reflected in figures compiled by Magnus W. Alexander, one of the engineers of the General Electric company.

Figures Show Appalling Loss.

In an address delivered at the twentieth annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers of the United States Mr. Alexander cited the case of twelve metal factories located in six different states. At the beginning of the year these factories employed 37,274 persons and at the end 43,971. Their normal increase in employees that year, therefore, was 6,697, and if the proper system had been in force the factories would have had to take on 6,697 persons, plus an extra complement of 13,843, to provide for unavoidable reductions in the working force due to deaths, sickness, temporary employment due to extra work and other causes of a similar nature.

In reality, however, the factories took on during the above mentioned year 42,571 employees, or 22,031 persons more than were absolutely necessary, and each of those 22,031 persons cost the factories from $50 to $200 for broken tools, spoiled work, the reduced rate of production and the additional office expenses incurred through the necessity for the maintenance of an extra clerical force to keep track of the temporary workers and the hiring of foremen and assistants to instruct them. Altogether, it was computed, the unnecessary engagement of 22,031 employees caused the factories in question an aggregate loss of $831,030.

Another manufacturer estimated that he had to hire 1,000 men in a single year to get fifty employees, which means that he has to pay for a certain length of time salaries to the 950 who fail to make good. He estimates that this reduces his profits by $150,000.

Examine Applicants Carefully.

The substitution of scientific methods in place of the old haphazard system of employing and discharging bids fair to stop this leakage, however. It is the chief function of the modern employment department to give every applicant a thorough examination with a view to determining what sort of work the latter is most likely to be fitted for. The applicant's record is carefully consulted for any light that it may throw on the nature of the task at which he may or may not be successful. His mental attitude, his ambitions and even his failures are taken into consideration. As an added precaution many of the plants give the applicants a physical examination as well.

If the head of a certain department in one of these progressive plants requires help he makes out a written requisition for the same, and the superintendent of the employment department furnishes him with the necessary number of workers. If the men supplied prove unfit for the type of work to which they are assigned they are not dropped from the payroll, but are merely sent back to the employment department and are tried in some other line of work. In extreme cases the misfits are shifted about from one department to another until they land in some place where their peculiar qualities can be used. Under this system a man or woman is given every conceivable opportunity to make himself or herself of use to the concern in some niche or other.—Industrial Conservation, New York.

LABOR AND CAPITAL MUST PATCH UP DIFFERENCES

Better Understanding Between the Two Factors Essential to Business Prosperity.

"More than anything else in this country we need a better understanding between capital and labor," says George E. Roberts, former director of the United States mint. "The wage earner must come to see that the problem of increasing production and lowering costs is his problem as well as the employer's. An appeal must somehow be made to his spirit, to his creative powers, which will enlist his willing co-operation and develop his latent capabilities.

"We have the highest wage scale in the world, and we want it to be still higher, but you cannot make wages higher by increasing production costs. Higher costs and prices simply go around to the rear entrance and settle down on the same premises."—Industrial Conservation, New York.

MUST ELECT BUSINESS MEN.

Country Needs Them as Officeholders, Says E. W. Rice.

"If our government is to continue to regulate business," says E. W. Rice, president of the General Electric company, "it is essential that the men we elect to the legislatures and to government offices should be possessed of accurate knowledge of modern business.

"Modern business is highly complex. Our political bodies as at present constituted cannot possibly administer such a delicate and intricate situation with success.

"It is also vital that we should take an interest in those whom we select to represent us in our government offices."—Industrial Conservation, New York.

WHY IS INDUSTRY LIKE A THREE LEGGED STOOL?

For a Solution of the Conundrum Read the Following Terse Interviews.

Andrew Carnegie, who since his retirement from active life has devoted himself to the study of human relations, was recently asked which he considered the most important factor in industry—labor, capital or brains? The canny Scot replied, with a merry twinkle in his eye:

"Which is the most important leg of a three legged stool?"

For all the factors in industry there is a tabloid sermon in the steel man's terse reply, a sermon which brings home more effectively than any lengthy discussion could possibly do, the interdependence of employers and employees and the necessity for their working together with the public to protect the prosperity of industry.

But Mr. Carnegie is only one of the many authorities who have laid stress upon this theme. Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel corporation and president of the American Iron and Steel institute, recently expressed the same idea from another viewpoint—namely, the value of loyalty in employees and the necessity for cultivating this loyalty.

"It is well," said Judge Gary, "for the large number of employers to bear in mind that they cannot successfully carry on their affairs without having the labor and loyalty of their employees. The work of multitudes will always be needed for the successful operation of business, but it is clear that the skilled laborer or the highly educated or experienced employees would not without abundant capital accomplish pronounced success."—Industrial Conservation, New York.

BETTERED CONDITIONS DUE TO EMPLOYERS

Demagogue Deserves No Credit For Improving the Lot of the Wage Earner, Says Manufacturer.

"Manufacturers as a rule are not opposed to the highest wages consistent with personal efficiency, decent hours and the necessary provisions of social legislation," says a prominent Milwaukee manufacturer. "Employers as a class have have come to realize that the contented, healthy workman is the most efficient workman and that in consequence high wages, reasonable hours, good regulation for safety, sanitation, welfare, etc., are splendid investments.

"The trouble is that the demagogue does not give the manufacturer credit for bringing about better conditions, but with silvery tongued oratory leads the workman into pitfalls from which he is unable to recover for years. Undoubtedly every employee can do better by stating any grievance which he may have to his employer instead of preaching it to men who have no interest in him or in the industry in which he is working."—Industrial Conservation, New York.

CONSERVATION TRUTHS.

Capital has found that it is good business to be honest with labor, and the time is now ripe for labor to adopt the same businesslike attitude to capital.

How can we hope to give stability to our great national asset, industry, when from 1909 to 1916 our state and national assemblies enacted 78,748 new statutes, many of which related to business?

Neither employer nor employee can expect benefits from a business where the balance sheet does not show dollars and cents to pay with.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Young Men's Responsibility For Their Influence.

Let me speak now of your influence on society. This, like that of the home circle, is active and reflex and in its extent and force is greater or less according to circumstances. The time when this begins may be different with different persons, though it may be said to begin with boys when they trudge off to school. He is a study then. If ever you see men in embryo it is on the school ground. Watch the lads. How they scan the newcomer and the teacher especially. They weigh him; form their estimate of his character and determine how far they can go with him. Here is the commencement of his social influence which continues on through his academic and collegiate course, when armed with his diploma, he enters the great world as an integral part of it. His destinies are bound up in the future and to unfold this is now his aim, In doing this his influence for which society holds him responsible is felt in a wider sphere than formerly. This leads him to speak of his influence on the great departments of law, medicine, science arts, commerce, in short every department is open to and must be manned by young men. Even now young women are forcing their way into these various sph res of life and they are to be the world rulers of the future. It is their influence that must mould the world and turn it in an upward or downward course. What the politics of the future is to be, rests largely with the young men and here they have a splendid opportunity of making themselves felt in wresting it from the hands of demagogues and forever keeping it out of the reach of Bossism. The lawyer, the doctor, the banker, the merchant, the teacher have great responsibilities resting upon them, so has every one in as much as they cannot live to themselves nor die unto themselves, but must render an account for their influence. Every man in public office is responsible to posterity for his influence. Each of us is a link in a great chain of existence and it is ours to see that one link in this chain is kept bright so that it may do its duty to other links of the chain of existence, which begins in and returns to the supreme Ruler and the Creator, the holy God in Heaven.

Let me remind you of the personality of this influence. It is our own, it rests upon us always. No one can be sick for us, neither can anyone take our place in death. It does not spend itself on our individuality, but it is increased by our mingling with others.

Down in the ocean bed little insects begin to work and after long and patient toil their work is visible above the waters. It is permanent and may become very beautiful and attractive. Such may be our influence in its character and permanence on the world.

The bread that feeds the millions, is the aggregate harvest of individual labor. The gold of the nation's treasuries and its business is the aggregate, dug by individuals from the mountains.

Waterloo, Sebastopol and the great victories of the world, were the result of individual courage the combined re-result of each one doing his part, under the guidance of an efficient leader.

So it is in the battle of life. Every man has his victory to win for himself and society. Mountains of prejudice are to be leveled; a highway is to be opened over plains of selfishness; ignorance is to be enlightened; suffering is to be relieved; agony soothed; earth is to be filled with the glory of the Lord and the uttermost parts of the world are to hear the joyful sound, and upon whom shall this duty devolve so much as upon young men. They to are to fight the battles that will save the repulic and establish the principles of right and justice. From their ranks must come the Davids to slay with the smooth pebbles of truth, the giants of skepticism and infidelity. They are the Joshuas to lead the hosts against the ensigns of God and his cause.

Young friends, you are so placed as to receive and transmit influence and your opportunities are greater than were those of your fathers. What the next age shall be depends on the character of the young men of this present one. When older men have passed away, you will stand in their place and when you in turn have fallen, younger men must take your place. Let me then exhort you to be careful what your influence on society shall be, Consider it, as arising not so much from the fact that it is great and wide spread, but that it is Immortal. Generations come and go. All things earthly fade, but man lives forever. His works follow him when the mortal part of him is laid in the tomb.

Where are the ruins of the East; the cities of fame; the Empires of the past with their teeming populations who have had their loves and hates, their joys and sorrows as we do now. Where are the masters who superintended the buildings of colossal structures. All gone. But has the influence of the men of former days passed away? They live yet in history, in the deeds they have done; in the influence they exerted on the ages that succeeded them. They still live and the mighty dead who speak to us through our libraries are "the glass wherein our noble youth do dress themselves." They live on the canvass; in the works of art that decorate our public buildings; in the paintings which fresco our walls; in the institutions they have founded and in everything that tends to elevate the race.

When Pharaoh sat on the throne of Egypt building obelisks, conquering people and making himself a terror to the nations there was a poor Hebrew young man wandering through the deserts of Midian looking after Jethro's flocks, and withall, making love to his employer's daughters (a thing, by the way, that young men are very apt and which is their right to do) but that young man was preparing to exert an influence, which has outlived all the glory of Egypt. In spite of his armies and slaves his chariots and horsemen, Pharaoh's last resting place was the sea, while Moses lives in the heart of every Hebrew, and in the hearts and habits, the laws and customs and in the daily business and future hopes of civilized nations.

Our influence like the rays of the sun are never lost. Though it is taken up into the general system it is always in operation somewhere, but its individuality is never merged into another nor is its identity confused.

The Minutemen of the Hour

"It is evident to every thinking man that our industries, on the farms, in the shipyards, in the mines, in the factories, must be made more prolific and more efficient than ever, and that they must be more economically managed and better adapted to the particular requirements of our task than they have been; and what I want to say is that the men and the women who devote their thought and their energy to these things will be serving the country and conducting the fight for peace and freedom just as truly and just as effectively as the men on the battlefield or in the trenches."—From President Wilson's Proclamation, Issued April 15.

Two Men In a Boat: Or the Parable of the Foolish Rowers

The illustrations accompanying this parable tell the story of two men, Wage-Earner and Wage-Payer, who found it necessary to embark in the same boat in order to cross the river of Competition to the shore of Success. The weather was fine and the water was smooth, so that the trip, if made

"That is the way!"
"No, this in the way!"

under the proper conditions, should have been comparatively easy.

Wage-Earner and Wage-Payer had made the trip many times before. Knowing all the dangerous eddies and currents in the river, Wage-Payer had always assumed the leadership. At the same time he had come to place great reliance on the Wage-Earner's skill and strength as a rower. There was every reason why these two men should have continued on the most friendly terms. They were absolutely dependent on each other's help to get them across stream, but in matters requiring co-operation human beings often show less wisdom than some of the lower animals.

Through one trivial cause or another a difference had grown up between the two men, and the ill-feeling had been fostered by a third man named Agitator, who had his own ax to grind and had found it to his advantage to pose as Wage-Earner's friend. Of course you can't find Agitator in the boat of Industry. Naturally he can't waste his time rowing when he has so much talking to do. Talking is pretty arduous work. Even insurance solicitors will admit that.

"Well, you go your way and I will go mine."

"You're a fool," whispered Agitator to Wage-Earner. "Don't you see that Wage-Payer is imposing on you. Next time you get in the boat just watch the way he rests on his oars and lets you buck the tide of competition, while he pretends to be guiding the boat. When he reaches the shore he'll eat the lion's share of the profits and you can go hungry. You know the eddies and currents in the river by this time. Go ahead and do your own steering and make Wage-Payer sweat. He needs the exercise."

The next time the two men embarked on the trip across the river of Competition Wage-Earner decided to take the advice of his false friend, Agitator, so that when Wage-Payer indicated the course they had best take to avoid the currents and eddies Wage-Earner snapped out:

"It's a waste of time and strength to take that course. You just want to see me work overtime. I'm going to pull this boat the other way."

"Say, we're not getting anywhere this way."

Whereupon Wage-Earner, instead of seating himself with his back to Wage Payer, plumped himself down with his face to the prow of the boat and began to pull strenuously at the oars.

Wage-Payer remonstrated, insisting that the course Wage-Earner wished to take was dangerous and if pursued would lead to the destruction of the boat. Then finding that words were of no avail, Wage-Payer angrily seized the oars and began to pull with all his strength in the direction he thought was right.

For some time the men continued to row violently, and their misdirected efforts almost capsized the boat, which see-sawed back and forth but made no definite progress in either direction. But perspiration is a great mental clarifier, and after the boat-mates had sweated profusely they stopped rowing, mopped their brows and took account of their bearings.

"Say, we are not getting anywhere this way," blurted out Wage-Payer.

"I guess not," reluctantly admitted Wage-Earner. "Maybe we can come to some understanding."

"This IS EASY."

A parley followed, during which Wage-Earner and Wage-Payer frankly stated their grievances against each other and came to the inevitable conclusion that they had allowed trifles to estrange them. Gigantic grievances have a disconcerting way of dwindling into pygmies when subjected to dispassionate scrutiny. The upshot of the matter was that Wage-Earner acknowledged Wage-Payer's superior knowledge of the river and permitted him to guide the boat. The trip was made in better time than ever before because the spirit of co-operation lent strength to the rowers' strokes.

When it came time for the feast on the shore of Success, Wage-Earner was agreeably surprised to find that his dish of profits was generous enough to appease his appetite.

If the accompanying illustrations showed a birdseye view of the shore from which the rowers started you would notice that Agitator was conspicuous by his absence. Modesty is one of Agitator's chief virtues. He's always willing to give Wage-Earner the credit for any trouble that has been started.

Personally we think it would be safer for Agitator to refrain from hanging around the water front anyhow, for if he is anywhere within pushing distance of the river there's going to be an awful splash when Wage-Earner gets back.—C. A. Rieser, Industrial Conservation, New York.

"We've made it."

Finzel's Finest Flag.

The Ladies' Sewing Circle of the patriotic little town of Finzel, Garrett county, has very nearly completed an American Flag of material and construction that will stand the "wear and tear" of the winds for a long time. It is nine feet long and about five feet wide, and in all respects a substantial and beautiful piece of needlework.

Mrs. Margaret Warner is president of the Circle and her husband, Frederick A. Warner, is one of the citizens whom the Circle has delegated to find in the surrounding forests the tallest pole in Garrett county that all the community around may see the "Star Spangled Banner" or Finzel's idea of a glittering emblem of our Nation's glory.

Reasons Why You Should Patronize this Horse.

He is an extra good individual and represents the most popular breed in the country today. His pedigree represents the best blood of his breed. His quality is unsurpassed and he has the best disposition of any stallion in the country. He transmits this disposition to his colts. He is a tried horse and a sure foal getter. His colts are easy to sell and bring good prices; they have high life, plenty of vim, but are easy to handle. He will stay here and give you a chance to breed to him again.

We will exercise the greatest care in handling mares, but will not be responsible for accidents.

Will stand for the season of 1917, until July 1, at the following places: Hutton, at M. G. Mellot's, Mondays and Tuesdays of each week, beginning April 23rd and 24th. McHenry, at Jonas Glotfelty's, Wednesday and Thursday of each week. Oakland, at the Fair Grounds, Friday and Saturday of each week.

TERMS—To insure a mare with foal, $12.00.

ALL CLASSES HIT WHEN RAILROAD PROFITS DECLINE

Industry Feels Most Keenly Effect of Railroad Poverty.

UNWISE LAWS MAKE TROUBLE

Millions of Dollars Lost by Railroads In Meeting Maze of Legislative Requirements—Laws Contradict Each Other.

"A man is as old as his arteries," says a prominent health authority.

With equal truth it may be said that a country is as prosperous as its railroads, for industry is the life of a country, and the railroads bear the same vital relation to the industrial system that the big blood carrying tubes bear to the human body.

There was a time in the history of industry when manufacturing was a one man affair, when every laborer owned his own tools and made goods for his neighbors. That system passed away with the invention of the steam engine, and no sane man today would wish for its return. The modern highly developed industrial organism depends absolutely on the facilities for distribution provided by the railroads.

But how have the railroads been rewarded for making possible the evolution of industry? In recent years they have been made the subject for all sorts of legal vivisection. They have been chloroformed and cut open, and, as usual in such cases, the surgeons have differed as to the nature of the malady and the necessary cure. The prevailing theory, however, was that the railroads were suffering from an abnormal growth of the income, so their income had to be amputated. From a professional point of view the operation was eminently successful, but in a number of cases the patient died. Recent mortality statistics show a total of 34,652 miles of steam railroad in the hands of receivers, the roads involved having a total capitalization of $1,730,488,210.

One Road Spends $19,000,000.

The avalanche of adverse laws directed against railroads has been so overwhelming that since 1906 the Pennsylvania railroad on its lines east of Pittsburgh alone has spent $19,000,000 complying with the legislative enactments. Approximately that sum is equal to 6 per cent income on $300,000,000.

Interstate railroads are exposed to contradictory laws enacted by the legislatures of the states through which they run. About nineteen states are trying to regulate the issuance of railroad securities by different methods. Twenty-eight states specify headlight requirements without any co-operation with one another. Fourteen states have different safety appliance acts. Sometimes the orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission, so far as they concern intrastate matters, are practically nullified by the failure of the states to approve them. It is estimated that the railroads of the country are required to make over 2,000,000 reports a year to various state or federal authorities.

Of course the railroads do not bear the burden of this legal yoke alone. It rests as heavily on the shoulders of the 1,500,000 or more owners of American railway securities, many of whom are women dependent for support upon the income from these securities. Insurance companies, representing 30,000,000 policy holders, have $1,500,000,000 invested in railway securities, and savings banks, representing 11,000,000 depositors, have $800,000,000 invested in railroad stocks and bonds.

Wealth of Roads Benefits Many.

According to the statistics of railways in the United States issued in 1914, the railroads then employed 1,710,296 persons, to whom they paid approximately $1,381,117,292 per year in wages and salaries. The expenditure of that sum is certainly a substantial contribution to the income of all mercantile and manufacturing enterprises. But, while the railroad situation claims the attention of all classes of citizens, it must appeal to the industrial worker in bread and butter terms, for he is the first to feel the effects of railroad impoverishment. This was evidenced in 1914 and 1915, when the railroad situation was most acute and when thousands of men were out of work and the industries of the country were in a serious condition.

How can the industrial worker help to put the railroads on a sounder working basis? By joining in a general protest against the legislative avalanche, by voting against the legislator who is instrumental in the passage of the burdensome and taxatious laws that reduce railroad profits and the income on railroad securities. It is vitally necessary that these securities should be made more attractive to the investing public so that the railroads can increase their credit and obtain enough money to make improvements and increase their equipment.

Sound Credit Essential.

"Railroad regulation must encourage sound credit or regulation is a failure," says A. J. County, vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad. "Sound credit is just as essential in the railroad business as in mercantile affairs, and a railroad cannot have sound credit without the earning power to produce a credit basis."—Industrial Conservation, New York.

THE OPPORTUNITY.

The tasks which confront America may be arranged in a program after this style: To beat the U-boat, to organize and maintain the food supply, to mobilize financially and industrially so that our superiority in money and munitions shall be overwhelming, to create an army which will back up the Pershing advance guard, and finally to take advantage of the combination of circumstances which, as The New Republic says, "has given President Wilson and the United States a leverage and prestige of first-class strategic importance." We are doing the first four things. The situation is such that America is now called on to play a major part in the politics of Eastern Europe. Russia presents a picture of what may be termed a new and bewildered democracy. And Russia reposes a confidence in America today such as is given to no other nation.

It is quite plain that Russia, as represented by the vigorous forces which overthrew the autocracy of the Romanoffs, is actuated by the same motives, the same disinterested, international spirit which the President has proclaimed and on which we act. But the Russian government does not function smoothly. It is indeed bewildered and in need of a steadying, friendly hand. What more natural than that the new Russia, "fit partner in a league of honor," should turn to America. To Russians, Poles, the submerged Slavs of Austria-Hungary, the President can speak out of a common spirit. It is a situation which holds out the highest hopes. To fail to take advantage of it is to repeat the blundering of German diplomacy. There are psychological factors in the equation which must be appreciated and acted on. The right kind of diplomacy—and by that we mean the American kind exemplified by John Hay and once more alive—will solidify the Alliance of which we are a part and at the same time weaken the mid-European empires whose people listen for words of understanding from the New World.

A SOLDIERS' DEPENDENTS FUND

In its recommendation that the Federal Government should with the least possible delay formulate a plan for the creation and administration of a fund for the dependent families of soldiers and sailors, a provision that should in a measure supplement but not displace the aid to be given by large employers of labor, the report of the committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce marks an important step forward in social legislation in this country. The program outlined is in its main features in line with what Great Britain has found necessary in dealing with the same problem.

It is only logical that since the liability to service has been made universal the nation as a whole should fulfill its full obligation to those upon whom it lays the injunction to abandon their ordinary avocations and to serve the nation in its organized military and other agencies. The draft involves as a necessity, a serious dislocation of industry and of employment, and while there is no lack of patriotic self-sacrifice on the part of the majority of employers able to bear the burden, the care of dependents created by the raising or large armies is one that primarily and properly rests upon the same authority which summons the wage-earners to public service.

Pensions for the maimed or the widowed and orphaned do not meet the requirements of the present. And voluntary relief efforts are all too likely to prove inadequate to the strain that is going to be put upon them. We have been tardy, in this country, in facing the serious problems of social amelioration Federal and State Governments alike have not yet recognized as they should the duty that rests upon the community, in its collective capacity, to remove the causes of distress and suffering. This is a function vastly more important than mere relief for the victims of social and industrial conditions that are a disgrace to our vaunted civilization. Call it "socialism" or what you will, this movement for the establishment of separation allowances and for funds for dependents is in line with modern progress and must be adopted if this country is to profit by the bitter lessons of the war and to keep pace with the advances of humanity.

NOT TAX DODGERS.

The promoters of the Baltimore annexation plan have endeavored to spread the belief that most of the people living in the suburbs of Baltimore are "tax dodgers." It has been said of them: "they sleep in the country and make their money in the city."

It is contended by those opposed to annexation that a more fitting phrase would be: "They sleep in the country and make money for the city." A great majority of the suburbanites are hard working people, without whose help many of the city's lines of business would languish sadly, and without whose patronage the city stores would find business very dull.

From the time the electric cars begin running in the morning until after 8 o'clock one may see crowds of workers going to their daily toil in the city. They do not look like tax dodgers. Most of them are young men and women without whom the city's offices and workshops would fare badly. After the main rush of the working brigade is over, one will see the shoppers in the cars, and in the evening both workers and shoppers make their way home laden with bundles. Upon casting up accounts at the end of the year, the average suburbanites find they have spent practically their whole income in the city.

These people have located their homes in the suburbs because of the cleaner and pleasanter surroundings and because they could not afford to own homes in the city, where a four-room flat in a convenient and respectable location rents for from $30 to $40 a month and the taxes and other expenses are so high that ownership of real estate is practically prohibited to the wage earner. In many cases they have paid a small sum down on their homes and are finishing the payments through building associations, having balanced their expenses to their incomes to a nicety. Opponents of the annexation scheme assert that it would be a gross injustice to double their taxes without their consent by simply placing them under another jurisdiction.

There are a few wealthy men who reside in the county for a larger portion of the year than they remain in the city, and these quite naturally prefer to pay their personal taxes, as they legally should do, in the cheaper jurisdiction. Most of them also pay heavy taxes in the city. But if the saving in taxes is sufficient consideration, in these days of rapid transit they can easily move on and escape annexation while the poor man must remain where he is, unless sold out by the tax collector.

THE SENATE'S DUTY MADE PLAIN.

It is just as well, perhaps, that the proposal to put a war tax of $2.50 a bale on cotton was made and defeated in the House in just the way it was done. The whole country will regret the display of sectionalism, regardless of the merits of the tax proposed by Representative J. Hampton Moore. But it will do good in that the disclosure of an intolerable condition may be expected to stiffen the determination of the Senate to revise the bill to something like reasonable and just terms. The way the Southern members flocked to the support of their special interests was humiliating to the patriotic who have been trying to persuade themselves the ruling spirits in Congress have been striving sincerely, if lamely, to promote the welfare of the whole country. The effect of the partisanship exposed on Monday is to place upon the Senate sole responsibility for rescuing us from a tax bill monstrosity. In the end, it is to be hoped, the bill will provide for no excessive direct taxation and that the levies made will bear not injuriously upon the business of the nation. Indeed, the sectionalism manifested in the House imposes a stern duty upon the Senate.

As the bill now stands it will raise very much less than the $1,800,000,000 aimed at by the Ways and Means Committee. Ruinous impositions on some industries have been eliminated; some unchanged will prove wreckers rather than income producers. The bill is as much as if not more of a hodge podge than when it came from the committee. Only general and very careful revision will make it practical to the country. If the Senate so amends the bill that it will yield a billion a year in a manner to inflict the minimum of injury on business it will perform a patriotic service and the House no doubt will accept the result of its labors. Later on, if it becomes necessary to increase direct taxation, the House may be found in a soberer mood. Then, possibly, the Ways and Means Committee will address itself to its task in a national rather than a sectional spirit. If it does it will find the country back of it. Nothing less than a change of front by the Southern Democrats will develop the full might of the country for the grim work ahead.

KITZMILLER F. O. E. MEMORIAL SERVICES

Leo Weinberg, of Frederick, Delivers Spirited Patriotic Oration.

The ninth annual memorial services, Kitzmiller Aerie, No. 1838, Fraternal Order of Eagles, were held Sunday afternoon at the Maryland Theatre at Kitzmiller. An elaborate program was rendered most impressively.

Mr. Leo Weinberg, of Frederick, delivered the oration in masterful manner, his patriotic expressions being received with profound attention, the audience even rising to applause at memorial services.

The eulogy was delivered by Dr. H. P. Copeland.

The departed members for whom the memorial was held follow:

Archibald Lee, Jesse Hartley, Chas. M. Wilson, Denis Eagan, John P. MacAnally, Cleaver H. Pool, Stephen A. Lake, Geo. W. Lipscomb, Albert McRobie, Bud True.

At the conclusion of his spirited patriotic address, Mr. Weinberg said:

"The supreme test of humanity has come. The fate of nations is hanging in the balance. Dynasties are a menace to liberty. No man has a right to rule over another man without that other man's consent. The United States is now bearing the rainbow of hope to the peoples of the earth—torn from the stormcloud and flung to the breeze. It stands like a solemn temple, a gorgeous fabric amid a world on fire. The great game of destiny is being played upon the vast table of time and the grandest Redublic on earth will soon lift up the gates of civilization, shaping the world anew, dinging the tall spires of freedom to Heaven and rising fallen humanity to the rising sun. The boys in khaki are ready to fight for freedom, not glory, to blot out the last vestige of tyranny and remove forever the curse of slavery, and the trampling of their marching hosts will shake palaces and thrones and release from their captivity, the victims of despotism, sprinkling their foreheads in Liberty's name from the fountain of blood touched by the finger of fame.

"Men of America, Sons of Maryland, thou wilt not falter nor cower in the dust, but inspired by the memory of the founders of our government, true to the traditions and the deals of the nation, imitating the spirit of the men of '61, when in response to the call of President Lincoln they said: "We are coming, Father Abraham, six hundred thousand strong," the sturdy, stalwart, brave, manhood, of the country will rise to the heights of patriotic grandeur and glory, exclaiming, we are coming, Father Woodrow, ten hundred thousand strong.' Then a grand and perfect democracy will be established on earth, the elevated brows of Emperors will lose the impress of regalia, the slave will wear, his individualty free beside the masters, while the ensigns of union in triumph unfurled, hush the tumult of war and give peace to the world."

Married.

BOWERS—MEADE—At the parsonage of St. Paul's M. E. church, by the Rev. W. M. Shultz, on Saturday evening last, in the presence of a few friends and relatives of the groom, Miss Marie Helen Meade, of Zoar, Ohio, became the bride of Mr. Cecil McKinley Bowers, youngest son of the late John Bowers, of near Oakland. The couple became acquainted while the groom was employed at Canton, Ohio, and came to the latter's old home to have the ceremony performed.

NAYLOR—MICHAEL—At the hour of six o'clock Monday morning, a very quiet wedding occurred at the parsonage of St. Paul's M. E. church in Oakland when Miss Beulah Ruth Michael, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Michael, of Oakland, became the bride of Mr. Arthur Naylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Naylor, also of Oakland. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. M. Shultz, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church in the presence of the immediate relatives of the bride and groom. The principals are well known and highly esteemed young people of Oakland who will make their home here upon their return from a wedding journey to eastern points.

Heavy Wool Clip.

Reports from wool producers in Garrett county indicate a heavy yield this spring, and at prices never before reached in this country. Yesterday quotations were in the neighborhood of sixty cents per pound. At this rate Garrett county will receive many thousands of dollars for her wool this season, not withstanding the fact that the sheep industry has been cut to a minimum. A few years ago nearly every farmer in the county had his drove of sheep, but on account of the ravages of dogs and other causes the proposition became a losing one.

A heavy fleece was clipped a few days ago by Mr. W. H. Knepp, of the Red House, when he sheared a yearling male Lincoln. The fleece weighed 14¾ pounds and the wool measured from 11½ to 12¾ inches in length. The animal weighed 140 pounds. From a two-year old ewe of the same strain he clipped 12 pounds of wool.

THE DEATH RECORD.

PATRICK HENRY SHAFFER.

Patrick Henry Shaffer, the youngest son of the late Benjamin and Marie Shaffer was born May 10, 1876 on the farm on which hedied, May 31, 1917, after attending the Mason school he attended a private school at Oakland for several termsand taught school for one winter. Just as he reached manhood his health failed and for eighteen months he was seriously ill, but his splendid vitality, coupled with the treatment received at Johns Hopkins Hospital under Dr. Osler, enabled him to recovey in a a measure his former health. About twenty years ago he opened a jewelry store in Bayard, W. Va., and later removed to Hambleton and Hendricks on the Western Maryland. Finding that his health was again failing he decided to try other climates and visited many places in the South and in the far West except for about two years spent at Payson, Utah, and Great Falls, Montana. He never remained long in one place, for the lure of the old Alleghenys always brought him back. He had just returned from a trip to the Pacific coast when he was taken ill last December. When he failed to respond to treatment he was removed to the Davis Hospital where he underwent an operation that gave only temporary relief. He was then taken to his old home and lovingly tended by his sister and brothers until the end came.

In spite of ill health he was always optimistic and cheerful and had a host of warm friends. He possessed mechanical ability far above the average but ill health prevented its full fruition.

On Sunday he was laid at rest in the cemetery at Red House beside his parents. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Adams. The burial services of the Knights of Pythias was used at the grave. A large number of Knights of the Bayard Lodge, of which he was a member, attended his funeral. In spite of ill health his life work was peculiarly distinctive and he has left a lasting impression upon all who knew him and the world is poorer for his going. A half brother, David E. Hauser, a sister, Minnie M. Shaffer and three brothers, Franklin B., John A., and Charles H., survive him.

MRS. JOHN SPOERLINE.

Mrs. John Spoerline died at her home in Accident Monday afternoon after more than three months' illness as the result of cancer of the stomach. She is survived by her husband and a large family of children, nearly all grown to young manhood and womanhood. She is also survived by a brother, Mr. James Dodge, of near Thayerville and other relatives. Mrs. Spoerline was most highly esteemed for her motherly qualties which were developed to a high degree and for those other qualities of womanhood which will make her taking away all the more painful to her family and friends.

Arrest For Boot-legging.

David R. Denning, of Swanton, was arrested at Piedmont on Tuesday by Prohibition Officer H. R. Stottler, charged with carrving an excess amount of whiskey into the State. The liquor was concealed in the basket under some onions and other vegetables. He was fined $100 and sentenced for two months in the county jail. Officer Dornon took him to the Keyser jail.

Patriotic Resolution.

At a recent meeting of Youghiogheny Tribe No. 151, Improved Order Red Men, a resolution was passed providing that if any member of the Tribe volveteered or was drafted into the army or navy of the United States the Tribe would keep the dues of such members paid up during such period as he may be actually in the service of his country.

Card of Thanks.

Through your valuable paper we wish to sincerely thank our many friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathies during the sickness and death of Theopolius George.

Very respectfully,
MRS. GEORGE and FAMILY.
Swanton, May 31, 1917.

Deaf Pupils Coming.

All the students of the State School for the Deaf, of Frederick, numbering 100 from Allegany and Garrett counties will be brought to the Queen City Hotel, in Cumberland, on Wednesday, June 13, by an official of the school. Among the number will be Jane Dillon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dillon, of Frostburg, and Hazel Durst, whose parents reside on the National Pike about five miles west of Frostburg in this county.

Finger Cut Off.

William McRobie, lath sawyer at the Kendall Lumber Company's mill at Crellin, had one of his fingers cut off by the saw just as he started to work this morning. He was brought to Oakland in an automobile and given surgical attention by Dr. McComas.

Road Petition.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first publication hereof application will be made to the Board of County Commissioners of Garrett county for the appointment of viewers to view and locate a winter road, beginning for the same at a point on the River road leading from Oakland to Sang Run known as the "Stone Cow," and running thence through the lands of J. B. Cheuvront, Harley Bowers, William Sowers, J. O. Hinebaugh, Samuel Aronhalt and others, and to continue to the corporate line of the town of Oakland.

Mr. W. A. Gonder who recently leased the storeroom in the Ravenscroft building vacated by James P. Treacy, is moving his stock of goods and fixtures into the room this morning. The room has been repaired and improved very much and in it Mr. Gonder will be glad to welcome his trade.

Last night this section experienced a series of rain and hail storms which, while being of short duration, were quite severe. Along the roadway leading from Oakland to Hoyes evidences of the storms' fury were plainly to be seen by the leaves covering the road which had been cut from the timber by the hail stones. In other sections conditions were almost identical, but at this hour reports indicate that no serious damage resulted.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Helbig and children, who have been residing at Durgon, West Va., for the past two or three years, where Mr. Helbig has been engaged in lumbering operations, returned to Oakland one day last week and are occupying for an indefinite period the old Helbig homestead in town.

The executors of the will of the late Notley B. Browning advertise for sale in this paper today the home of the late Mr. Browning, located on Green street, and his small farm adjoining Oakland. Mr. B. F. Browning, his son, who resides in Terra Alta, should be communicated with by any one interested.

Among the new advertisements appearing in The Republican today is that of the Enterprise Painting Company, of which Mr. E. S. Slabaugh is manager. The new concern is prepared to do all kinds of interior work to the satisfaction of their customers.

Rev. A. D. Appleton, rector of St. Matthew's church, left Oakland Sunday afternoon for Philadelphia, where he will visit a few days, and then go to northern Pennsylvania to visit his family who have been in that section for some weeks, expecting to return to Oakland the latter part of this week.

Prof. and Mrs. C. Edward Bender left Oakland on Saturday for Grantsville where they will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob J. Bender until the latter part of the present week, when they will leave that point for Williamsburg, Pa., Mrs. Bender's former home. Mr. Bender expects to attend Columbia University during a portion of the summer at least.

Mr. Preston DeBerry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clark DeBerry, of near town, arrived home Sunday night and will probably remain during the summer. It was his intention to enlist with a party of Oakland boys and go into the engineering corps, but arriving in Cumberland too late to accompany them to Columbus, Ohio, their present headquarters, he decided to come on to his home.

Rev. Samuel E. Wicker, who was recently elected pastor of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church, arrived in Oakland on Friday last and preached his first sermon as pastor of the local congregation Sunday morning, which was well received by a large number of the church membership present upon the occasion. On Sunday evening Mr. Wicker again preached to an appreciative audience.

The Republican has received very few names and addresses of the young men who have enlisted in the army and navy for publication in the roster now being prepared. Won't you please devote a minute's time and expend a cent for a postal upon which to furnish the information desired? By making up this roster now everyone in the county will have a record of the soldiers and sailors for years to come.

Mr. Jonas E. Gnagey and son Mr. William Gnagey, of Grantsville, were in Oakland yesterday. The former has been residing with his son on the farm just east of Grantsville for some months. For a number of years he was at different points in and out of Maryland. Mr. Gnagey looks as natural and is as well preserved as he was more than fifteen years ago when he conducted the Casselman Hotel at Grantsville.

By reason of the fact that Garrett county has a splendid system of good roads running north and south, the jurors, who are here this week attending court, are enabled to leave their homes at a reasonable hour in the morning, reach Oakland before nine o'clock, at which hour court convenes, and return home after the adjournment of the day's session in the afternoon. Mr. Jacob J. Bender, one of the grand jurors, who resides at Grantsville, has done this every day this week. On Tuesday morning he was accompanied to Oakland by Mrs. Bender, who was the guest for the day of Mrs. J. O. Cleveland.

Mr. Edward A. Shaffer, of Oakland, delegate to the National Convention of Railway Telegraphers, which was held in Seattle, Washington, has returned to his home here, after an absence of more than a month. During the trip west Mr. Shaffer visited many points of interest along the Pacific Coast and in British Columbia. He also stopped off for a day at Denver, Colorado, where he was a guest of the Cullen Hotel, owned and managed by Mr. Matthew Cullen, a former resident and well known by the older people of Oakland. Mr. Cullen is quite aged and is almost entirely deaf, but otherwise is well preserved.

Garrett County Ideal.

The scientists of the world have agreed that we mortals ought to breathe the strata of air between 2,000 to 3,000 feet. If this is true (and who doubts it?) Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland, (which is about 2,500 feet,) is the beau ideal climate to live in and happily flourish. Any greater altitude is too rarified and apt to effect the heart.

PRAYS FOR UNIVERSAL PEACE.

St. Paul exhorts us, "Pray without ceasing" (I. Thes. 5:17). Also we find these consoling words in the writings of St. James (5:16) "Pray one for another that you may be saved, for the continual prayer of the just man availeth much." These texts are certainly sufficiently explicit exhortations to pray. Let us, therefore begin at once to pray without ceasing.

"Jesus lover of my soul,
Let me to Thy bosom fly,
While the nearer waters roll,
While the tempest still is high.

Hide me, O my Saviour hide,
'Till the storm of life is past;
Safe into the haven guide;
Oh, receive my soul at last.

Other refuge have I none;
Hangs my help-less soul on Thee;
Leave, oh, leave me not alone,
Still support and comfort me.

All my trust on hTee is staid.
All my help from Thee I bring;
Cover my defenseless head
With the shadow of Thy wing."

Kind readers, the following prayer, for peace is prescribed by our holy Father, the Pope, and I trust, my friend, that you will recite it at least once daily if not oftener. It may be truly applied as a golden key to open the gates of Heaven so that the world may obtain the gift that it stands in such dire need of, especially at the present moment.

THE POPE'S PRAYER FOR PEACE.

"Dismayed by the horrors of a war which is bringing ruin to peoples and nations, we turn, O Jesus, to Thy most loving heart as to our last hope. O God of Mercy, with tears we invoke Thee to end this fearful scourage; O King of Peace, we humbly implore the peace for which we long.

From Thy Sacred Heart Thou didst shed forth over the world divine charity, so that discord might end and love alone might reign among men. During Thy life on earth Thy Heart beat with tender compassion for the sorrows of men; in this hour made terrible with burning hate, with bloodshed and with slaughter, once more may Thy divine Heart be moved to pity. Pity the countless mothers in anguish for the fate of their sons; pity the numberless families now bereaved of their fathers; pity Europe, over which broods such havoc and disaster.

Do Thou inspire rulers and peoples with counsels of meekness, do Thou heal the discords that tear the nations asunder; Thou who didst shed Thy Precious Blood that they may live as brothers, bring men together once more in loving harmony. And as once before the cry of the Apostle Peter: Save us, Lord, we perish Thou didst answer with words of mercy and didst still the raging waves, so now deign to hear our trustful prayer, and give back to the world peace and tranquillity.

And Thou, O most holy Virgin, as in other times of sore distress, be now our help, our protection and our safeguard. Amen."

PROPER CULTIVATION MOST IMPORTANT

ONE THOUSAND YOUNG CORN GROWERS RESPOND TO PRESIDENT'S CALL.

WILL LEAD IN PRODUCTION

County Agents Instruct In Preserving The Moisture and Securing Plant Food.

College Park, June 1.—Over 1,000 boys enrolled in the boys' agricultural clubs of Maryland are engaged in growing corn in response to the call of President Wilson for every farmer and farmer's son to do his part in keeping up the food production of this country. During the month of May each boy received a letter from his County Demonstration Agent urging him to do his utmost in increasing the crops planted on his own acre and on his father's farm. He was shown that he was doing as patriotic a service for his country as any man enlisted in the army or navy and was made to realize that every bushel of corn or potatoes grown or farm animal raised to maturity helped that much more to bring the war to a successful close. He was particularly urged to cultivate his crop carefully, keeping out the weeds and keeping in the moisture. He was encouraged to study carefully the instructions prepared by W. B. Kemp, farm crop specialist for the Maryland Agricultural Extension Service, in which Mr. Kemp says:

"The main purposes of cultivation are to kill weeds, and to check evaporation of moisture. The same shallow, thorough stirring of the surface soil that is helpful for one is also helpful for the other. If soil is stiff and has been beaten together by a heavy rain shortly after planting, one deep cultivation soon after the corn comes up may be justified, but under ordinary conditions this ground should never be worked to a depth greater than a couple of inches. This cultivation can be accomplished best with an implement having many small teeth. The old double-shovel plow has no place in a corn-field and where a one-horse cultivator is used the five-shovel implement is now giving way to one with more and smaller teeth.

Frequency of Cultivation.

"As nearly as possible the soil surface ought to be kept broken up into a loose mulch. Rain destroys this mulch and with drying a crust is formed on the surface. Rain also hastens sprouting of grass and other weed seeds that are near the top of the ground. These can be more easily killed just after sprouting than at any other time. Therefore, the main purposes of cultivation can be accomplished only by working the corn-field as quickly after each rain as the soil will permit.

When To Stop.

"The experience of successful farmers as well as the results of careful experiments show that larger crops may be secured if this frequent shallow cultivation is continued as long as you can get through the corn without much injury resulting. At times a heavy wind with rain will blow down many of the stalks so that a horse can no longer go between the rows. At other times a period of continued wet weather in July will prevent cultivation until tiny feeding roots have filled the soil to its surface. If this occurs at such a time that only one later cultivation can be given, and if no weeds are present, then it is doubtful if a cultivation with its attendant breaking of these roots will be justified. Otherwise continue to work the corn until tassels are showing and silks have begun to appear."

GET RID OF THEM.

College Park, June 1.—Particular encouragement is given to boys enrolled in the boys' agricultural clubs of Maryland to keep careful account of all expenses in connection with growing pigs and poultry. Their fathers no less than the boys are realizing the value of keeping tab on their stock and are getting rid of all unprofitable animals. In a letter to dairymen, R. H. Ruffner, secretary of the Maryland State Dairymen's Association, says,

"Beef is high. Now is the time to dispose of your boarders, that is, cows that are not producing in their prime at least 5,000 pounds of milk in one year. When feed is $50 per ton, no producer can afford to feed a cow that is not profitable. But by all means keep your cows that are giving you a good return and use a good bull to raise more; you will be paid a sum for your milk that will enable you to keep your cows. The price for milk is now governed solely by the cost to produce it, but this cost should be kept as low as possible so as not to diminish its use.

"Corn should be planted for silage as it is the best silage plant that can be used in this State. Where a silo is not used, grow an eighth of an acre of roots for each cow. If alfalfa or clover are not grown, soy-beans should be planted.

Maryland is fortunate in having an agent in every county. The County Agents can be a wonderful force towards promoting these aims. Make use of them.

No. 2123 Equity, In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of Military Lot No. 288, situate in Garrett County, Maryland, and for a distribution of the proceeds thereof among the parties to this cause according to their respective rights and interests therein.

The bill states that General John Swan in his lifetime and at the time of his death was seized in fee of Military Lot No. 288 containing fifty acres, more or less, situate in Allegany, now Garrett county, Maryland, to which he acquired title by deed from Thomas Rutter, United States Marshal for the district of Maryland, by deed dated February 17, 1813, recorded in Liber G. folio 164, among the Land Records of said Allegany county, a copy of which deed is filed with the bill marked "Plaintiffs' Exhibit No. 1," and which, with all other exhibits hereinafter referred to and filed herewith, is prayed to be taken and considered as a part of the bill of complaint; and that being so seized, the said Gen. John Swan, died in the year 1821, leaving a last will, whereby he devised certain of his property therein mentioned to the legatees and devisees therein named, and whereby his four sons, to-wit: John Swan; James Swan; Robert Swan and George Maxwell Swan, as residuary devisees, acquired title to said Military Lot No. 288, a copy of said will being exhibited with the bill; that John Swan, son of Gen. John Swan, died intestate about the year 1831, unmarried, without issue, leaving surviving him as his only heirs at law his three brothers above named, who, thereafter, were each entitled to an undivided ⅓ interest in said Military Lot No. 288; that James Swan, son of Gen. John Swan, died about the year 1859, testate, a copy of his last will being exhibited with the bill, whereby he devised his undivided ⅓ interest in said Lot to his son, John Swan, ⅓; to his daughter, Anna Elizabeth, ⅓; and to the children of his deceased daughter, Ellen, ⅓; that subsequently, by deed dated June 25, 1877, the heirs and devisees of said James Swan conveyed their undivided ⅓ interest in said Lot to Manor Mining & Manufacturing Company, and that by deed dated December 17, 1906, said Manor Mining & Manufacturing Company conveyed all its interest in said Lot to Thomas B. Davis, Jr., and Joseph E. Davis, and by deed dated September 30, 1908, said Thomas B. Davis, Jr., and Joseph E. Davis conveyed all their interest in said Lot to the defendant, Blaine Mining Company, whereby said defendant acquired an undivided ⅓ interest in said Military Lot No. 288, copies of said deed being filed with the bill as exhibits in this cause; that Robert Swan, son of General John Swan, departed this life about the year 1835, leaving a will whereby all his property was left in trust to the trustees therein named for the use and benefit of his widow, long since deceased, and his three sons John, Charles and Robert, a copy of said will being exhibited with the bill; that the said Charles Swan died intestate, unmarried and without issue, about the year 1850; that the said Robert Swan, son of Robert, died intestate about the year 1850, leaving a widow, Kate Swan, now deceased, and a daughter, Willie Swan, who died about the year 1901, leaving a will, whereby Christiana S. MacKenzie asher residuary devisee, became entitled to the interest of the said Willie Swan in said Lot, to wit an undivided 1-6 thereof, and that the said Christiana S. MacKenzie died about the year 1906, leaving a will, whereby her daughter Eliza Bowie Mackall, one of the defendants to this suit, as her residuary devisee, became entitled to said one undivided 1-6 interest in said Military Lot No. 288, copies of the wills of said Willie Swan and Christiana S. MacKenzie being exhibited with the bill; that the aboved named Robert Swan, son of Robert, and grandson of General John Swan, many years ago removed to the State of California, and their died, but whether testate or intestate, married or unmarried, is to the plaintiffs unknown, entitled to an undivided 1-6 interest in said Lot, his unknown heirs at law being defendants in this case; that George Maxwell Swan, son of General John Swan, died about the year 1848, intestate, leaving as his sole heir at law a daughter, Mary E. F. Swan, who became the wife of Alexander C. Good, and died in the year 1895, leaving a will whereby she devised all her property to her husband, the said Alexander C. Good; that the said Alexander C. Good died about the year 1905, intestate, leaving surviving him, as his only heirs at law a son, Maxwell S. Good; a daughter, Jessie B. Reveley, intermarried with Albert S Reveley, and a daughter, Mary Lamar Sloan, widow of David W. Sloan who died on the 30th day of December, 1904, leaving surviving her as her heirs at law a daughter, Margaret M. Sloan, unmarried and of full age; a daughter, Frances Swan Brady, of full age, intermarried with Hugh S. Brady; a son, David W. Sloan, Jr., under the age of 21 years, and a son, Alexander Maxwell Sloan, under the age of 21 years, both of whom sue by their guardian and next friend, D. Lindley Sloan, the said Maxwell S. Good; Jessie B. Reveley; Margaret M. Sloan; Frances Swan Brady; David W. Sloan, Jr., and Alexander Maxwell Sloan, the plaintiffs in this case, having a one undivided one-third interest in and to said Military Lot No. 288, a copy of the will of said Mary E. F. Good being exhibited with the bill.

The bill further charges, that the said Military Lot No. 288, located in Garrett County, Maryland, is not susceptible of partition among the parties interested therein, without material loss and injury, and that it will be for the benefit and advantage of all the parties interested therein, and especially to the interest of said infant plaintiffs to have the said property sold and the proceeds distributed to the parties to this suit, according to their respective rights and interests therein, and then prays for a decree for the sale of said land, and for general relief, for process against the resident defendant, Eliza Bowie Mackall, and for an order of publication against Blaine Mining Company, a corporation, non-resident of the State of Maryland, and also against the unknown heirs-at-law of Robert Swan, deceased, and grandson of General John Swan, deceased, who are non residents of the State of Maryland, giving them notice of the object and substance of this bill of complaint, and warning them to be and appear in this Court, either in person or by solicitor upon a day certain to be named therein, and answer the premises, and abide by and perform such decree as may be passed thereon.

It is thereupon, this 30th day of May, 1917, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, ordered that the plaintiffs' by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett County, Maryland, once in each of four successive weeks before the 30th day of June, 1917, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 16th day of July, next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not be passed as prayed.

Entrance Examinations

STATE SCHOLARSHIPS IN ENGINEERING COURSES

ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS for the Department of Engineering, as well as for the College of Arts and Sciences, will be held by the College Entrance Examination Board in the Academic Building of The Johns Hopkins University, Homewood, Baltimore, June 18-23, 1917, beginning at 9 A. M. each day.

APPLICATION FOR SCHOLARSHIPS IN THE DEPARTMENT OF ENGINEERING, established under the provisions of the Laws of Maryland, Chapter 93, 1914, will now be received. If there is more than one application for a particular scholarship, a competitive examination must be taken in the Academic Building, Homewood, on September 21, 1917, beginning at 9 A. M. Appointments will be made soon after.

Each Legislative District of Baltimore City and each County of the State, with the exception of Caroline, Somerset and Talbot Counties, will be entitled to one or more scholarships for the year 1917-18, in addition to those which have already been assigned to the three counties mentioned above, all the available scholarships have been awarded.

Under the provisions of the Act of Assembly, the County and City Scholarships in the Department of Engineering are awarded only to deserving students whose financial circumstances are such that they are unable to obtain an education in Engineering unless free tuition be granted to them. The scholarships entitle the holders to free tuition, free use of text-books, and exemption from all regular fees. THE EXPENSE OF ATTENDANCE FOR THOSE WHO DO NOT RECEIVE SCHOLARSHIPS IS NO GREATER THAN AT ANY OTHER MARYLAND INSTITUTIONS.

Scholarships may be awarded to graduates of Loyola College, St. Johns College, Washington College, Western Maryland College, Maryland Agricultural College, Mt. St. Mary's College, Rock Hill College; and one scholarship will be awarded "at large."

Applicants should address the Registrar, The Johns Hopkins University, for blank forms of application and for further information as to examinations, award of scholarships, and courses of instruction.

Pure Bred Stallion

An announcement of interest to all farmers and stockmen in the Accident, Cove and Keyer's Ridge districts of Garrett county, Md., and Negro Mountain, adjacent to Mason & Dixon's line, is made by John H. Colflesh of Accident, Md., to the effect that he is the owner of a fine Pure Bred Stallion that will make the season at the following places:

In Cove at barn of George Colflesh.
At Keyser's Ridge at barn of Charles Reichenbecher.
On Negro Mountain at barn of C. C. Wisseman.

Mr. Colflesh is a delegate of the Imported Stock Association and hopes to interest all the farmers in the neighborhoods named in the raising of better horses. He hopes to meet all of the farmers and breeders during the season and invites them to come and see his horse and get acquainted with his pedigree and qualities which make him a desirable sire.

WAR BONDS and the BONDS OF CITIZENSHIP

An Appeal to American Manhood

Loyalty is the keystone of the beautiful arch of our sovereignty.

The nation stands strong and free and glorious today because of the unflinching loyalty of those who have defended and preserved it through the perils of the past.

Again it is in danger and again must loyalty sustain it or the arch will fall. A nation conquered and forced to submit to the will of an autocratic power is no longer free.

WIN OR PERISH.

We are at war. We intend to win. But the issue in Europe is undecided. The decision is still in the balance. Until victory is actually achieved, defeat is still possible.

It is still possible that Russia may withdraw from the contest and that the ravages of the German submarines will continue. Suppose the European democracies are thus forced to make peace; our country would then be left alone to conquer the undersea and oversea fleets of the enemy or to surrender and pay a colossal indemnity. We must win or perish. There is no escape from the punishment which will befall us if we lose. But transcending our own safety is the grave consequences to humanity of the defeat of democracy.

It has been officially declared that we are fighting in defense of our rights, of our honor, and to make democracy safe throughout the world.

We must fight, not as weaklings, not with the deadly apathy and indifference of a race softened and devitalized by ease and luxury, but with the power and enthusiasm of a vigorous people, inspired by lofty ideals and a righteous cause.

SERVICE AND SACRIFICE.

The nation now justly demands, and it must have, war service in one form or another from every competent adult citizen. Our paramount duty is to help the State. We must think, speak and act as national units.

In this patriotic hour no true American will seek to escape his share of service and of sacrifice. To do so would place him in the unhappy position of the soldier who refuses to succor or support his suffering comrades during the stress of battle.

Our individual sacrifice may be to give up life itself, or to suffer the unspeakable agony of those who are torn and maimed in battle, or to accept penury and want by surrendering our savings to the wastage of war. Or we may only be called upon to sacrifice a small part of our earnings, or indeed, merely a portion of our luxuries and comforts of peace days.

Whether or not these sacrifices and sufferings shall be great or small depends upon the loyalty, liberality and promptness with which our people now, at the outset of the war, respond to the call of the Government for financial aid.

The burning question is:

"Will America be too late?"

LOYALTY'S EASIEST TEST.

We cannot all fight for our country but we must all serve those who do so, through our work, our welfare contributions, and the payment of war taxes.

But the easiest form of war service which the civilian can perform is the one that is rewarded with financial gain instead of loss—namely, to loan money to the Government.

By buying war bonds we ease the burdens of the present by helping to distribute the payment of the cost of the war over a period of years.

The practical question is—

"Which do we prefer, to loan our country money in its hour of need and be paid for doing so, or to refuse to do this and thus force the Government to take from our pockets in taxes the entire cost of war as it progresses."

It goes without saying that we prefer to loan the money. The greatest problem now is to arouse our people to take this action—to induce them to lay aside selfish thoughts and pursuits long enough to grasp the imperative need of making the Liberty Loan an overwhelming success.

THE SHIRKER'S BLUSH OF SHAME.

In buying war bonds, the motive of patriotism is supported by the motive of thrift. But the ruling impulse should be loyalty and service to our country.

In the struggle for victory in this war, American civillians must either be workers or shirkers. There is no middle ground. At such a time the State should require every able-bodied man to work.

War bonds give the citizen who is able to save even a small sum, a chance to salute the flag and say. "I am doing my part--I am paying my debt to you."

It enables him to avoid the blush of shame and humiliation which conscience must bring to the cheeks of the shirker when he is called upon to rise in patriotic reverence to sing or listen to our soul-stirring national anthem in these heroic days.

But there will be no such civilian shirkers if each of us will make an effort to comprehend the seriousness of the war situation now confronting us.

THE APPALLING COST OF DELAY.

If Americans would reflect but for a moment upon the awful cost, in life and treasure and human woe, of our delay in going to the relief of those who are now keeping the enemy from our shores, the Liberty Loan would be subscribed many times over.

While we calmly consider war news in the peace and security of our homes, brave men are dying in battle, the windows of broken and mangled soldiers are growing, helpless women and children are suffering and dying from hunger and want, and barbaric cruelties are being endured by the defenseless civilians along the far flung battle fronts of Europe.

And if we could realize that this terrible sacrifice is going on constantly, if we could see the wanton destruction of art and other property which it has taken centuries of toil to accumulate, if we could but visualize and stamp upon our souls a vivid picture of these horrors, our consciences would no longer permit us to waste a minute in going to the relief of these people, or to withhold a penny that would be of assistance to them.

DANGER OF DRAINING BANKS.

We citizens owe the Government every dollar it will need to defend our national rights and to triumph in this war.

Do not make the mistake of assuming that the banks and financial institutions of the country can or should supply the money needed. They will take these bonds to the limit of safety. But it would be disastrous to drain the banks and business world of the funds needed to carry on commerce and industry at this critical time.

The war bonds should be bought so far as possible from current and future savings. Every citizen should help in just proportion to his abilities. Each should take, at least, one bond, if he can do so without sacrificing his life insurance protection, which is in itself a public service of great value, especially in time of war.

DON'T WAIT—TAKE YOUR SHARE

The success of the war depends upon war loans. The success of these loans rests with the individual citizen, rich and poor.

Do not hesitate; do not wait. Your country needs your assistance at once.

Every consideration of national pride and national honor demands that we each act and act quickly in this matter.

Let no pride of personal opinion, no partisan or religious prejudice, or any consideration whatever divert you from the one vital purpose, to help your country triumph in this war. Keep in mind that the great controlling fact is this:

WE ARE IN, AND WE MUST WIN.

Controlling the Nation's Food

. . By Frederick J. Haskin

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 31.—That all the people in Europe, neutral and belligerent, are lean from short rations; that all the belligerents except England are producing less than before the war; that the United States must sustain itself, its ten allies and the neutrals through a five-year struggle, and literally fatten the world back to normal after it is over—these are the premises of the new and drastic system of food control now before congress; these are the facts and suppositions upon which the authors of the measure proceeded.

America is the rich, the fat nation of the earth. Her resources are not only enormous, but they are developed and developing, they are in the hands of a people who do things. The countries of Europe were not fat before the war. The poor ate meat but once a week and bought bundles of twigs for fuel. Everyone practiced an economy that would be considered stinginess in this country.

Europe could not increase its production after the war began, because its men were at the front and its agriculture was already at a high point of efficiency. Imports were reduced by the U-boats. Hence Europe is now lean like a wolf after a hard winter. And lean Europe is now fastened upon the fat body of America like a hungry leech. There was talk before the declaration of war of stopping food exports. Now the word is that we must feed our allies at any cost. And our allies are starved. They must not only be sustained, they must be fattened. Dr. A. E. Taylor of the University of Pennsylvania was the informant of the Committee of Agriculture on this point. He spent a long time in Germany and other parts of Europe studying the methods of food control and distribution.

"Practically speaking, the entire population of Europe may be regarded as underfed," Dr. Taylor told the congressmen. "These people are now below their desires.

"It is going to take two years to repair the deficiencies of their body tissues, their live stock and their stores. The conditions in Holland and Switzerland ore almost as bad as those in Germany. * * * It is practically impossible for them to produce cattle, and the cattle they have are emaciated to the last degree. * * * The entire population is emaciated. They have no future stocks of food. There is no food in Europe except the grain hid in the distant granaries of Russia. It will take two bumper crops in this country, added to all they could produce this year and the next year * * * to place them where they were before the war broke out."

So America needs to realize that it has taken in a great crowd of starving boarders. There are hundreds of millions of people in Europe, whose bodies are wasted, who must replace their burned out tissues by means of food produced in America. And America has been wasting food. Food has been rotting on the ground in this country for lack of transportation; it has been lost and ruined on the farm and on the road, and thrown into the garbage can uneaten in millions of homes. Much of this wastage must be saved. The looseness in our system of producing and distributing food must be taken up like the slack in a hungry man's belt. Secretary Houston says we have wasted $700,000,000 worth of food every year. The greater part of that loss must be eliminated if we are to fatten half a billion lean people and have anything left for ourselves. That is the philosophy of food control.

Dr. Taylor brought out the fact that despite tremendous efforts to increase their planting areas, none of the belligerent countries have equalled their peace time production, except England. England is now actually increasing her production of foodstuffs by breaking up her game preserves and parks—her heather-grown grouse moores and the uplands where the red deer are hunted—and planting them with grain and potatoes. In the other countries there are no such surplus lands to be planted. Dr. Taylor brought word that Germany is really producing less than formerly, that she has fed her population only by saving a large part of the thirty per cent. of her food which she found that she had been wasting.

The agricultural classes and the wealthy are fairly well fed in Germany, according to Dr. Taylor, but the 20,000,000 people of the industrial classes are emaciated and suffering from anaemia and malnutrition. This is interesting to America, not only because we are trying to starve Germany now, but because when we get done trying to starve her, we will have to fatten her again, along with the rest of Europe. The experts predict that food shortage and high food prices will prevail in this country for two years after the war, when all Europe will be drawing on America to replace its lost fat.

Neither Italy nor France has been able to produce as much since the war as before. They have been dependent upon imports and the U-boats are now cutting down the imports.

It is supposed, according to Dr. Taylor, on the basis of the crops, with the rate of import that held before the first of January that England, France and Italy will be able to pull through until they harvest their next crops, with close figuring, but without luxuries. Every grain-laden ship that the U-boats sink will make the figuring still closer.

"I think the truth is," Dr. Taylor told the congressmen, "that before England, Italy and France get their new crops harvested, they will be about as close to starvation as a people may be."

Officialdom seems to agree that we must be prepared to face a war of from three to five years. It is known that the military authorities are basing all of their estimates upon the assumption that the war will last for three years. Before the Committee of Agriculture, five years was stated with general assent as the duration of the food shortage for which the United States must prepare. Five years of scarcity and high prices are the cost which America as a whole must pay for this war. Likewise, if excitement and fear can only be allayed, the lesson of these five lean years will be a most valuable one. America the spendthrift will learn the value of food. American housekeepers will learn how to save food that they have been throwing away. They will learn how to cook foods that they never used before. They will learn to keep foods and preserve them. Food that has rotted on farms and in freight terminals will be saved. Speculation in foods will be eliminated. And it is unthinkable that the repeal of war legislation shall be allowed to undo the good that may have been accomplished in this line. During the next five years the American people may acquire the only possible basis for a lower cost of living—a knowledge of the use and economy of foods.

THE WHOLE LIFE FOR JESUS.

BY REV. W. M. SHULTZ,
Pastor of St. Paul's M. E. Church.

The Christian life is not only a normal life, but as some one has said, the life that has not found the Christ is not at its best nor can it be until he is found. No life is truly great that has not found Christ. Alexander was a world conqueror, but what is his greatness compared to the greatness of our martyred and sainted President McKinley, who even in the jaws of death could say, "Not my will but God's will be done." The best within one's life will lie dormant until Jesus comes into that life.

The heart of humanity was created to be the "throne room" of the Christ; true, many souls have barred the doors against him, but in so doing have robbed their lives of real greatness. Jesus Christ, the World-Redeemer, the only Saviour, wants to take possession of our lives, to possess the "throne room" of our souls, to rule and reign forever there. But he whose right it is to reign and rule in the human heart is being dethroned, and robbed of his authority, and rightful place. "Who is the king of your life?" is a question worthy of our most careful consideration. Every heart is ruled by something. Every life is under the sway of some scepter. It may be passion, it may be appetite, it may be ambition, it may be money, it may be position, or any one of a thousand other things that might be mentioned. Any of these things may sit upon the throne of life, and rule God out of his rightful place, while sin rules within.

God wants the whole life; there is such a thing as "head religion;" there is such a thing as "heart religion," either of which is a failure alone; God wants both head and heart for his service. Education has its place in every department of life, and has so entered into the fabric of things as to become a potent factor in every department, especially in the religious life; but education alone is not a reliable guide in religious matters. Education would be more reliable if parents were more thoughtful in the selection of the school in which their children are to finish their school work. We should not forget thesewords of the Wise Man, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." If we forget these words the trend of things will be towards head culture at the expense of heart culture; God wants both.

Only the other day a young man who had a college education, said to the writer of this article that his school life and experience had been such as to unsettle his religious life and beliefs. The result is: A splendid young man of unsettled religious conviction. It can not be denied that many of our educational institutions are responsible for such conditions as I have here mentioned. But who is responsible for these things? Our young people are graduating from our high schools full of ambition to pursue higher education in the colleges or universities such as are to be found almost at the door nowadays. The trouble is that parents do not even know the school nor the course of study that the child is to pursue. Many of these schools have even tabooed the Bible.

A president of Harvard has given to the world five feet of the "Best Books," but on those shelves the Bible is not found. There are theological seminaries, some of which are avowedly evangelical, where the Bible is in the curriculum but only to be torn to pieces as an "unbelievable book." Indeed, there are members of the faculty where our children get their education that crucify the Christ anew by saying to our children that "the Bible is a worn-out book." Is it any wonder that so many of our college young men and women make shipwrecks of faith when this is the training they get?

Lord Wellington said: "Educate your children without religion, and you make a race of clever devils."

We are living in a time of great stress in intellectual things, and nowhere is the intellectual strain more severe than in matters of religion. Modern science and philosophy would apply the microscope of intellectuality to the foundation of our religion of Jesus Christ do not hesitate to have intellectual science applied to the foundation of our faith, provided it be reverently applied. But I say again that the intellect, or head filled with books alone can not be trusted as authority in religious matters. What the world needs to-day is the head and heart for Christ, and the whole life surrendered to him in service. If this be the experience of believers, then we will sing:

"O for a humble, contrite heart
Believing, true and clean,
Which neither life nor death can part
From him that dwells within."

The world needs the educated head and the converted heart. When these two unite the soul will sing:

"Oh, Lord and Master of us all,
What e'er our name or sign,
We own thy sway, we hear thy call,
We test our lives by thine!"

Sunshine Class Song

BY SARAH ROBERTA GETTY.

(Tune, "Blessed Assurance.")

Dedicated by the author to her class of "Sunshine Girls" of Lutheran Sunday School, Grantsville, Md.

We will be loyal, steadfast and true,
Working and planning what we can do;
We are not many but we can shine
And when we're needed, fall into line.

Refrain—

Joyful and happy, merry and glad;
Searching for bright things, cheering the sad;
Scattering sunshine all thro' the day;
Chasing the gloomy shadows away!

If we have worries, we needn't mind;
We just keep smiling, leave them behind;
This for our motto: "Always be bright,"
Each little worry then will come right.

Refrain.

Where help is needed, we will be there;
Each heavy burden we'll try to share;
Where there is sorrow, we will bring cheer,
Make the world better for being here.

Refrain.

CANNING.

Our government is asking the women of the country to see that more fruit and vegetables are raised in the garden and preserved for winter use in the home. This is our patriotic duty. Mr. Hoover, the chairman of the new Food Board of the United States, says: "There is no body of women in the world so capable of rising to an emergency as the American women."

THE AIR TIGHT JAR.

There are many kinds of good jars on the market. Use all that you have on hand, as, it is said, the supply is short. Directions will be given later for the sealing of crockery jars.

Examine your glass jar carefully to see that the top fits perfectly and that there are no dents or breaks that will keep the top from closing smoothly on the rubber. Rubbers must be new and soft (when streatched they should spring back); but only those that are of good quality. Wash and boil the jars and tops and dip the rubbers for a moment in boiling water, do not wipe them with even the cleanest cloth.

BLANCHING.

This is one of the new methods which is considered very important. The fruit or vegetable to be canned is put for a certain time into boiling water and then dipped quickly in and out of cold water before packing in the jars.

Blanching has four advantages:

1. It reduces the bulk and thus allows of packing more into a jar.
2. It improves the flavor and color.
3. It gives firmness to the fruit.
4. It makes keeping more certain.

CANNING OF SPINACH, DANDELION AND OTHER GREENS.

Do them up the same day they are picked. After washing, blanch them by boiling 5 or 10 minutes; this is best done by placing them in a wire basket or tying them up in a piece of sleazy cloth, as cheese cloth or flour bagging. Or, they may be steamed in a close steamer. Remove and dip quickly in and out of cold water. Pack closely into the jars, add boiling water to fill crevices and 1 teaspoon of salt to a quart. Put rubber and top in position, screw partly shut but do not close completely.

Put the jars in a wash boiler or other vessel which has a rack in the bottom on which the jars may rest. Do not allow the jars to touch each other. Fill the boiler with water until it covers the tops an inch or two. Boil for an hour and a half. Take out the jars and tighten the cover. Do not open to add more water. Next day tip up on the side to test the seal. If any liquid comes out put on another rubber and reboil 10 to 15 minutes.

CANNING ASPARAGUS.

Asparagus is canned in the same way. The stalks must be put into bunches, tied and cut off even, then the bunches are placed upright in three inches of boiling water for five minutes so that the stems will have more time to blanch than the tender tops. The bunches are then placed on the side and covered with boiling water for five minutes. The string is cut and the stocks are packed head up in the jars, and treated as were the greens.

CANNING STRAWBERRIES.

Can the same day they are picked. Rinse before capping by placing in a colander and letting water run over. Strawberries are not blanched. Place at once in jars, sorting them so that different sizes will not go into the same can. Fill up with a rather heavy syrup made by dissolving a pint of sugar with half pint of water and put into the boiler for 16 minutes.

Prof. Wm. King, mathematician at the Naval Academy, Annapolis, accompanied by Mrs. King and their two little sons, en route from Annapolis to an Ohio point by automobile stopped off in Oakland yesterday afternoon and are guest for today at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sincell.

VOLUME 42. OAKLAND, MARYLAND THURSDAY, JUNE 14, 1917. NUMBER 16

2 CONVICTS MAKE ESCAPE FROM JAIL

Both Were Sentenced Yesterday to the Penitentiary of the State.

Two men, both of whom were sentenced yesterday by Judge Henderson to serve terms in the Maryland Penitentiary, made their "get-away" from the Garrett County Jail last night between the hours of eight and nine o'clock, and notwithstanding the fact that they had but a few minutes start of the officials, their recapture is only problematical, although Sheriff Ashby and a posse were out all night scouring the countryside in search of them.

The escaped prisoners are William Puffenberger, who drew a three-year sentence for burglary, and Edward J. Harvey, a one-year convict for forgery, both of whom were to be taken to the Penitentiary this morning by the officials.

The escape was made through one of the barred windows of the jail facing Fourth street from which a bar had been cut by the men who used as an instrument to accomplish their purpose a caseknife which had been modeled into a hack saw and which was found this morning. How the knife was passed to the men is unknown but Sheriff Ashby has his convictions about the identity of the individual who did it.

As soon as the escape of the men had been discovered telephone messages were sent in every direction and in less than five minutes more than a dozen automobiles had been requisitioned by the officers and pursuit was taken up over the Weber road a, message from Dr. Ravenscroft conveying the information that he had reasons to believe that t[illegible]men were about his premises upon mischief bent.

Sheriff Ashby is bendingevery effor t to recapture the men and is determined to do so if at all possible.

TEACHER'S EXAMINATIONS

First State Uniform System Applied to Garrett County.

The first Maryland state uniform examination of applicants for teachers' certificates was conducted at the Oakland Grammar school building last Thursday and Friday, it being in charge of the County Superintendent of Schools of this County.

The questions originated with the State Department of Schools, Baltimore, Maryland, by which same authority the papers submitted by the applicants will be graded and certificates issued to applicants in such instances as determined to be qualified therefor by the same authorities.

The state uniform system of examination of applicants for teachers' certificates is an entirely new departure from the former method of procedure in certificating teachers, as has prevailed in this State. The former method was that applicants were examined by the County Superintendent of Schools and the papers graded by the same authority; but under the new system the questions are submitted by the State Department of Schools to applicants in every county of the State, the examinations being held in each subject at the same time, and papers of all applicants of all counties of the State are graded under the management of the State Department of Schools of Baltimore, this being one of the requirements of the recent school law of Maryland.

The examinations in Oakland held last Thursday and Friday were conducted only for applicants for second and third grade certificates, those applying for second grade certificates being as follows. G. W. Sterling, Mountain Lake Park; Delphi E. Miller, Lonaconing; Rella G. McKenzie, Lonaconing; Bess F. Hendrickson, Oakland; Oscar L. Brenneman, Accident; Carrie C. Mann, Mountain Lake Park; Mrs. Rae Eagan, Mountain Lake Park; Katherine E. Porter, Oakland; Ellen G. Stanton, Oakland; George W. Friend, Swanton; Lena F. Friend, Friendsville; Charles R. Freight Wreck in Oakland.

An east bound freight train passing through Oakland Friday morning about three o'clock, was wrecked when a broken wheel under a coal car jumped the track in front of the Offutt store and after being dragged for several hundred feet, the train was brought to a stop. The damage to the track was slight. The paving at the Second street crossing was more or less damaged. It required the services of the wrecking crew from Keyser to clear the track which was completed about seven o'clock.

AUTOMOBILE WRECK

Dangerous Curve at Deep Creek Scene of Another Accident.

The curve on the State Road leading south to the Deep Creek bridge was the scene of another automobile accident last night when the Ford car being driven by a man named Tanner who carried as passengers Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spurgeon, of Uniontown, Pa., turned turtle and threw the occupants out.

Mrs. Spurgeon was rendered unconscious as a result of the injuries she received while her husband suffered a number of bruises and abrasions about his head and face. Both were brought to Oakland by Mr. W. R. Offutt who was passing by a few minutes after the occurrence. They were attended by Dr. Hinebaugh, who gave it as his opinion last night that no serious results were anticipated.

The car was pretty badly damaged and the driver was slightly injured.

KILLED ON TRACK

Remains of Albert Lape, of Farmington, Found In Oakland.

The remains of a dead man lying across the eastbound track of the B. & O. Railroad at a point just east of the residence of Sheriff Albert Ashby near the Washington Spring crossing, was reported at the local railroad station at eleven o'clock this morning by the crew of a freight train.

Upon investigation by the railroad officials papers in the pockets of the dead man lead them to believe that he hailed from Farmington, West Va., and was named Albert Lape. The remains will be taken in charge by Undertaker Bolden awaiting their disposition by the railway company. The man was fairly well dressed and it is thought that he fell from a freight following the eastbound accommodation.

Dr. C. J. Maust, veterinary physician and surgeon, has opened an office over Bonig's store, Grantsville, Md., and will be at the service of the public in the future.—Advertisement.

5 MORE ENLISTMENTS FOR ARMY

Various Branches of the Service To Be Strengthened By Oakland Boys.

By reason of the visit to Oakland on Monday of Recruiting Sergeant Welch, of the Cumberland recruiting office, five more of the Oakland boys have enlisted in various branches of the Army—two for hospital work, one in the cavalry and two in the infantry.

The Hospital Corps will have as new recruits Messrs. Harold Dawson and Tracy E. Curry, both valued employes of the Oakland Pharmacy, where they have made many warm friends.

Robert Scott, son of former Sheriff Bert. C. Scott, and Edward Kahl, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Kahl, will enter the infantry branch of the service. Both are excellent young men and have the making of splendid soldiers.

David T. Collins, Jr., who is a grandson of the late Sol Sines, enlisted in the Cavalry, the latter having gone from here with the recruiting officer Tuesday.

Messrs. Curry, Dawson, Scott and Kahl will go to Baltimore Tuesday of next week where they will enter the service after examination. The entire community regrets the departure from amongst us of these splendid young men, but the country calls and they have answered the summons and they will be followed wherever they may be sent by the department with the best wishes of their hosts of friends.

Boy Broke Arm.

William Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davis, was thrown from a buggy in which he was riding last night and falling upon his right arm, both bones were fractured. He was attended by Dr. Hinebaugh at the Home Sanatorium and later in the evening taken to his home where he is resting comfortably this morning.

HOW SHALL WE PAY FOR THE WAR?

A Constructive Criticism on the House Revenue Bill.

LOANS BETTER THAN TAXES

Five Reasons Why Excessive Taxes at the Outset of War Are Disadvantageous—Great Britain Example Worthy of Emulation—How the Taxes Should Be Apportioned.

By EDWIN R. A. SELIGMAN,
McVickar Professor of Political Economy, Columbia University.

On May 23, 1917, the House of Representatives passed an act "to provide revenue to defray war expenses and for other purposes." In the original bill as presented by the Committee of Ways and Means, the additional revenue to be derived was estimated at $1,810,420,000. The amendment to the income tax, which was tacked on to the bill during the discussion in the House, was expected to yield another $40,000,000 or $50,000,000.

In discussing the House bill, two problems arise:

I. How much should be raised by taxation?

II. In what manner should this sum be raised?

I. How Much Should Be Raised by Taxation?

How was the figure of $1,800,000,000 arrived at? The answer is simple. When the Secretary of the Treasury came to estimate the additional war expenses for the year 1917-18, he calculated that they would amount to some $6,600,000,000, of which $3,000,000,000 was to be allotted to the allies, and $3,600,000,000 was to be utilized for the domestic purposes. Thinking that it would be a fair proposition to divide this latter sum between loans and taxes, he concluded that the amount to be raised by taxes was $1,800,000,000.

There are two extreme theories, each of which may be dismissed with scant courtesy. The one is that all war expenditures should be defrayed by loans, and the other is that all war expenditures should be defrayed by taxes. Each theory is untenable.

It is indeed true that the burdens of the war should be borne by the present rather than the future generation; but this does not mean that they should be borne by this year's taxation.

Meeting all war expenses by taxation makes the taxpayers in one or two years bear the burden of benefits that ought to be distributed at least over a decade within the same generation.

In the second place, when expenditures approach the gigantic sums of present-day warfare, the tax-only policy would require more than the total surplus of social income. Were this absolutely necessary, the ensuing havoc in the economic life of the community would have to be endured. But where the disasters are so great and at the same time so unnecessary, the tax-only policy may be declared impracticable.

Secretary McAdoo had the right instinct and highly commendable courage in deciding that a substantial portion, at least, of the revenues should be derived from taxation. But when he hit upon the plan of 50-50 per cent., that is, of raising one-half of all domestic war expenditures by taxes, the question arises whether he did not go too far.

The relative proportion of loans to taxes is after all a purely business proposition. Not to rely to a large extent on loans at the outset of a war is a mistake.

Disadvantages of Excessive Taxes.

The disadvantages of excessive taxes at the outset of the war are as follows:

1. Excessive taxes on consumption will cause popular resentment.

2. Excessive taxes on industry will disarrange business, damp enthusiasm and restrict the spirit of enterprise at the very time when the opposite is needed.

3. Excessive taxes on incomes will deplete the surplus available for investments and interfere with the placing of the enormous loans which will be necessary in any event.

4. Excessive taxes on wealth will cause a serious diminution of the incomes which are at present largely drawn upon for the support of educational and philanthropic enterprises. Moreover, these sources of support would be dried up precisely at the time when the need would be greatest.

5. Excessive taxation at the outset of the war will reduce the elasticity available for the increasing demands that are soon to come.

Great Britain's Policy.

Take Great Britain as an example. During the first year of the war she increased taxes only slightly, in order to keep industries going at top notch. During the second year she raised by new taxes only 9 per cent. of her war expenditures. During the third year she levied by additional taxes (over and above the pre-war level) only slightly more than 17 per cent. of her war expenses.

If we should attempt to do as much in the first year of the war as Great Britain did in the third year it would suffice to raise by taxation $1,250,000,000. If, in order to be absolutely on the safe side, it seemed advisable to increase the sum to $1,500,000,000, this should, in our opinion, be the maximum.

In considering the apportionment of the extraordinary burden of taxes in war times certain scientific principles are definitely established:

How Taxes Should Be Apportioned.

(1) The burden of taxes must be spread as far as possible over the whole community so as to cause each individual to share in the sacrifices according to his ability to pay and according to his share in the Government.

(2) Taxes on consumption, which are necessarily borne by the community at large, should be imposed as far as possible on articles of quasi-luxury rather than on those of necessity.

(3) Excises should be imposed as far as possible upon commodities in the hands of the final consumer rather than upon the articles which serve primarily as raw material for further production.

(4) Taxes upon business should be imposed as far as possible upon net earnings rather than upon gross receipts or capital invested.

(5) Taxes upon income which will necessarily be severe should be both differentiated and graduated. That is, there should be a distinction between earned and unearned incomes and there should be a higher rate upon the larger incomes. It is essential, however, not to make the income rate so excessive as to lead to evasion, administrative difficulties, or to the more fundamental objections which have been urged above.

(6) The excess profits which are due to the war constitute the most obvious and reasonable source of revenue during war times. But the principle upon which these war-profit taxes are laid must be equitable in theory and easily calculable in practice.

The Proposed Income Tax.

The additional income tax as passed by the House runs up to a rate of 60 per cent. This is a sum unheard of in the history of civilized society. It must be remembered that it was only after the first year of the war that Great Britain increased her income tax to the maximum of 34 per cent., and that even now in the fourth year of the war the income tax does not exceed 42½ per cent.

It could easily be shown that a tax with rates on moderate incomes substantially less than in Great Britain, and on the larger incomes about as high, would yield only slightly less than the $532,000,000 originally estimated in the House bill.

It is to be hoped that the Senate will reduce the total rate on the highest incomes to 34 per cent, or at most to 40 per cent, and that at the same time it will reduce the rate on the smaller incomes derived from personal or professional earnings.

If the war continues we shall have to depend more and more upon the income tax. By imposing excessive rates now we are not only endangering the future, but are inviting all manner of difficulties which even Great Britain has been able to escape.

Conclusion.

The House bill contains other fundamental defects which may be summed up as follows:

(1) It pursues an erroneous principle in imposing retroactive taxes.

(2) It selects an unjust and unworkable criterion for the excess-profits tax.

(3) It proceeds to an unheard-of height in the income tax.

(4) It imposes unwarranted burdens upon the consumption of the community.

(5) It is calculated to throw business into confusion by levying taxes on gross receipts instead of upon commodities.

(6) It fails to make a proper use of stamp taxes.

(7) It follows an unscientific system in its flat rate on imports.

(8) It includes a multiplicity of petty and unlucrative taxes, the vexatiousness of which is out of all proportion to the revenue they produce.

* * * * * * * *

The fundamental lines on which the House bill should be modified are summed up herewith:

(1) The amount of new taxation should be limited to $1,250,000,000—or at the outset to $1,500,000,000. To do more than this would be as unwise as it is unnecessary. To do even this would be to do more than has ever been done by any civilized Government in time of stress.

(2) The excess profits tax based upon a sound system ought to yield about $500,000,000.

(3) The income-tax schedule ought to be revised with a lowering of the rates on earned incomes below $10,000, and with an analogous lowering of the rates on the higher incomes, so as not to exceed 34 per cent. A careful calculation shows that an income tax of this kind would yield some $450,000,000 additional.

(4) The tax on whisky and tobacco ought to remain approximately as it is, with a yield of about $230,000,000.

These three taxes, together with the stamp tax at even the low rate of the House bill, and with an improved automobile tax, will yield over $1,250,000,000, which is the amount of money thought desirable.

The above program would be in harmony with an approved scientific system. It will do away with almost all of the complaints that are being urged against the present. It will refrain from taxing the consumption of the poor.

It will throw a far heavier burden upon the rich, but will not go to the extremes of confiscation. It will obviate interference with business and will keep unimpaired the social productivity of the community.

It will establish a just balance between loans and taxes and will not succumb to the danger of approaching either the tax-only policy or the loan-only policy. Above all, it will keep an undisturbed elastic margin, which must be more and more heavily drawn upon as the war proceeds.

Use of German Patents

By Frederick J. Haskin

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—The United States Patent Office is being deluged with letters from all parts of the country asking upon what conditions, now that we are at war with Germany, American citizens may obtain the free use of American patents owned by Germans. The impression seems to have gone abroad that the patents owned by alien enemies in this country will now as a matter of course be confiscated by the American Government and placed at the disposal of American citizens. Some inquirers even seem to think that the declaration of war has affected this confiscation automatically, and that you have only to apply in order to obtain the right to manufacture articles which have been patented by German citizens in this country.

Such a confiscation would certainly place in the hands of American manufacturers patents of great value, especially upon medicines, dyes and other chemical products; but none of the inquirers seem to have reflected that the immediate result of such confiscation would be retaliatory action by Germany, and that Americans would therefore lose about as much as they gained in actual property rights, while an immense amount of readjustment would be necessary after the war.

There will not therefore be any confiscation of German patents. Such a course of action would be inexpedient and contrary to the best precedent. But steps will be taken so that American manufacturers can obtain the use of German-owned patents, with due consideration for the rights of the owners. The matter has been taken up by the attorney-general and a measure drafted in accordance with the suggestions of Commissioner of Patents, Thomas Ewing. This measure provides that the federal trade commission shall have power to grant license for the use of patents owned by alien enemies, the share of the owner to be determined by the American courts. Until this or some similar legislation has been passed by Congress, German-owned patents will be protected just as in time of peace.

The provision for a licensing board will probably be passed by Congress as a part of more extensive legislation for the regulation of all trade relations with the enemy. The right to use German patents may then be obtained by application to the board. Meanwhile, the Patent Office, being bound by the existing law, which protects every patentee in the manufacture of his device for seventeen years, can do nothing to facilitate the use of these patents.

In granting to its citizens licenses for the use of German-owned patents, the United States Government will not be taking any action that could possibly be called confiscatory; it will merely be giving to American citizens the same rights with regard to German-owned patents that German citizens had with regard to Americanowned patents in Germany before the war for Germany has long had a licensing system. In other respects Germany has treated Americans who owned patents in that country with more fairness than either France or Great Britain have shown toward American patentees. Both of the latter countries have required that foreign-owned patents, in order to be effective, must be worked—that is, the patented article must be actually manufactured and sold in that country—whereas Germany has not required the working of American patents in Germany, thus granting a purely protective patent to our inventions.

Aside from the vigorous demand on the part of American manufacturers to know what are their rights with regard to German-owned patents, the legislation now being drafted by the attorney-general is urgently necessary in order that the United States may have an adequate supply of medicines; for many of the medical preparations indispensable to an army in the field are patented by Germans. This is notably the case with regard to Salvarson, or "606," the only known specific for blood disease, which is used extensively by army medical corps the world over. It is quite probable that agents of the German owners of this patent will be allowed to manufacture it in this country during the war.

The international convention with regard to patents is of course abrogated by the declaration of war, but neither Germany, France nor England has taken advantage of the fact to permit a confiscation of patents owned by alien enemies. Without entering into any agreement, they have taken reciprocal action so that German patents in England and France are protected by a licensing system, and vice-versa. Russia, on the other hand, has confiscated the patents owned in that country by Germans, presumably because there are few Russian patents owned in Germany, so that Russia had not much to lose by retaliatory action on the part of Germany.

Our own patent laws have been extremely liberal to alien inventors. Early in our history we discriminated against them by charging a fee of $300 for patents granted to all aliens except British subjects, who paid $500. The fee for an American citizen was then as now but $20. These discriminatory laws were repealed about the time of the Civil War, and since that time alien inventors have enjoyed about the same rights in this country as American citizens.

In previous wars the general principle in this country with regard to property owned by enemy aliens has been that agents of these owners might collect the income from such property, but could not send this income out of the country while the war was in progress. This principle will probably be the basis of all laws which Congress will pass during the present war, with regard to property owned by aliens.

The action which Germany has taken or intends to take with regard to patents owned in that country by Americans is not yet known to the American Patent Office. Action taken by Germany, might affect that taken by the United States, but it is not at all probable that Germany will take any confiscatory measures, in view of the vast patent interests which she has in this country.

German-owned patents in the United States are both numerous and varied. The report of the Commissioner of Patents for the year ending last December shows that 847 patents were taken out by German citizens. England was the only country showing a larger number with 975, while French citizens took out 309.

While a law must be passed by Congress before the use of German owned patents can be made available to American citizens, no such law is necessary in the case of the United States Government. It can and will use at once any German patents which are of value in prosecuting the war.

BITTINGER.

The registration of young men for military service was complete and quiet in this village on last Tuesday, and so far as we know there is not one slacker in the district.

Messrs. O. C. Buckle, Albert Brenneman, Thomas Brenneman and Chas. H. Wiley were business visitors at the county seat last week.

FOR THE LIBERTY LOAN TODAY

The trend of thought throughout the United States today is set against Autocracy, the sinister enemy of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness---against the proposition that Might Makes Right.

"To bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphan—to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

---Abraham Lincoln

As loyal and patriotic American Citizens let us dedicate our labors, our money and our lives, if need be, to the just and holy cause of universal freedom---so that liberty, the sacred heritage of man---shall not perish from the earth.

Let us help to remove the stigma applied to us by some as a nation of money-grabbers by showing in our response to this loan that there are principles which we hold dearer than love of gain.

OAKLAND'S FINE EXAMPLE.

Oakland and Oakland's patriotism in subscribing so liberally to the Liberty Loan, has placed us on the map as an example for all other Maryland towns to follow as suggested in an editorial appearing in the Baltimore Sun of Tuesday following the public meeting here Monday in response to the appeal made by the Maryland Liberty Loan Committee of which Mr. R. E. Sliger of the First National Bank is county chairman, and representatives of all other banks in the county are members. But the Sun did not go far enough in its highly commendable editorial. It overlooked other and far more important phases of the war spirit which has called from nearly every walk of life and from many homes the young manhood of the county who have enlisted in the Army or Navy so that the liberties of those left behind and those yet to be born may be preserved. What does a hundred thousand dollars in money amount to compared with the life of any young man who has received every advantage in the power of his parents to bestow and which may be snuffed out as a candle flame? The Sun's editorial was a splendid tribute to the people of Oakland, and is as follows:

From the action of the people of Oakland in subscribing for $61,000 worth of bonds in a few minutes' time, after listening to addresses from the Liberty Loan Paul Reveres who are riding through Western Maryland, it is apparent that all Maryland needs to do its full duty in this connection is a little stimulation.

Now, let the other towns bestir themselves to beat the Oakland record, and let the Oakland people come back with more subscriptions! And let those who have subscribed make themselves missionaries to go out and get other subscriptions! The time is short, but there are still three more days. The value of an achievement is not to be measured by the time of its performance. A man may betray his country, or he may make his name imperishable, in a minute. A nation may be saved in three days.

Maryland must acquit herself honorably in this matter. That can be assured if every man in the State does his uttermost in these three days. All together, then, for the final charge.

WHO SAYS "I DON'T CARE"?

Some men are spoken of as "big men," others as "little men." Perhaps the principal distinction is in the fact that while the "little man" ponders and discusses, loses himself in a maze of side-issues, and thinks of a hundred reasons why he should not act, the "big man" sees the vital issue ignores the nonessentials, and acts—promptly and decisively. The Liberty Loan is testing thousands of men today, and determining in which class they are to be enrolled. Little men are discussing the rate of interest and the outlook for business and investments, airing their personal or political objections to the Administration and certain of its policies; questioning the propriety of methods. Big men realize that these questions are about as important as last year's weather. Big men know that the vital issue is whether we shall or shall not show Germany that we are in earnest in this war—that we intend to wage it to a completely successful issue, whether it takes one year or ten, whether it costs two billions or twenty billions. They know that nothing will do so much to shorten and cheapen it as some proof of our unalterable determination.

The German people have been told that we care only for trade and money—that our heart is not in this war—that many of us disapprove of it. Now they have the first opportunity to find out whether these statements are true or untrue. They know that if we are in earnest their cause is lost. If we are not in earnest, it will pay them to go on fighting, with a certainty of a fairly satisfactory settlement and the possibility of triumph. Every American who can subscribe to a little and does not do it says to Germany, "I don't care." Every American who can subscribe liberally and subscribes meanly says, "I don't care much." Macaulay describes the earlier period of the Roman Empire in these words:

"For Romans in Rome's quarrel
Spared neither land nor gold,
Nor son nor wife, nor limb nor life,
In the brave days of old.
Then none was for a party;
Then all were for the State."

and in contrast to this period of virilty he describes the period of degeneration in these words:

"As we wax hot in faction,
In battle we wax cold.
Wherefore men fight not as they fought
In the brave days of old."

In which period of American history are we?

ANNIVERSARY OF BIRTH OF FLAG.

Today, June 14, marks the one hundred and fortieth anniversary of the American flag, an historic day which appeals to all patriotic citizens, and especially at this time, when the United States is engaged in a war for the liberation of mankind from autocracy.

The American Flag Association, with headquarters in New York, and composed of prominent citizens and flag committees from patriotic societies, formed in 1879, proposes a celebration of the anniversary on an elaborate scale.

Here is the act of Congress which gave birth to the flag:

"That the Flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be thirteeu stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." The number of the stars have been increased by the admission of new states. The possibilities of the nation's future development dawned upon our fathers. The original thirteen stripes continued for several years and were then changed, after a few years only were unchangeably restored by act of Congress on April 4, 1818, when it was enacted: "That from and after the fourth day of July next the Flag of the United States be thirteen horizontal stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be twenty stars, white, in a blue field, and that on the admission of a new state into the Union one star be added to the Union of the Flag, and such addition take effect on the fourth day of July next, succeeding such admission." The Flag has so continued ever since.

Since the struggle of 1861-1865 the Flag has become the symbol of a mighty nation. It has been carried to the utmost parts of the earth, carrying liberty wherever it has been thrown to the breeze.

THE DEATH RECORD.

JAMES TUHILL.

The remains of the late James Tuhill, a former resident of Oakland, were brought to Oakland last Friday morning from Youngstown, Ohio, where he died on Wednesday following a prolonged illness, and after services conducted in the Catholic church the body was interred in the church cemetery. He is survived by a number of children, his wife having died several years ago.

HENRY MYERS.

Henry Myers, a well known and highly esteemed resident of Crellin, died at his home on Saturday morning, June 9. Mr. Myers was born on Dec. 8, 1837. During the Civil War he served his country in Co. F, 3rd. Reg. Maryland Volunteers. He is survived by two sons and four daughters. Services were conducted over his remains in the Union Church, at Crellin, on Sunday afternoon by his pastor, Rev, S. E. Wicker. Interment was made in the family burying ground.

MRS. SARAH JANE RAILEY.

Sarah Jane Railey was born February 14th, 1853, and departed this life May 29th, 1917. Forty-six years ago she was married to William Railey who with three sons and seven daughters survive. Appropriate services were held in the new U. B. church at McHenry by Rev. T. A. DeWitt assisted by Rev. Frank McCamic, of Deer Park. Interment was made in the Thayerville cemetery. The United Brethren church has lost a most faithful member whose home was always open to the ministers of all denominations. The host of relatives and friends present attested to the high esteem in which Mrs. Railey was held. She will be greatly missed in the community, but unspeakably so in the desolate home where her life long companion and son are left. The casket was filled with madonna lilies, white roses, carnations and lilies of the valley. Friends from a distance brought and sent many handsome designs. Death is only a dream. M. P. H.

MRS. MARY FAHERTY.

Mrs. Mary Faherty, wife of the late Michael Faherty, died Monday at Cumberland from a complication of diseases, in her 65th year. She is survived by the following children: Mrs. M. L. Fleming, Baltimore; and Mrs. P. W. Burke, Mrs. J. E. Hoadley, Michael J., Lawrence M., Thomas P. and Agnes, all of Cumberland; Stephen Faherty of Ottaway, Md., and one foster child, Joseph Bishop. The funeral party came to Oakland on B. & O. train No. 49 at 9:16 o'clock this morning where interment was made.

Frostburg Journal Suspends.

The Frostburg Mining Journal has temporarily suspended, the issue of last Saturday being the last until conditions improve. The reason given by the publisher is that he along with one of the employees of the mechanical department have been called to serve their country in the capacity of soldiers. The Journal has been published for a year or more by Mr. L. G. R. Hitchens, a nephew of Mr. R. E. Sliger of Oakland, and has been a model newspaper.

LIBERTY BONDS SOLD IN OAKLAND

More Than The Town's Proportionate Share Subscribed Monday.

The "whirlwind" campaign which has been conducted during the present week by the Liberty Loan Committee of Maryland, and waged throughout the State in an effort to raise the balance of the loan expected from Maryland by the 15th of this month, opened in Oakland last Monday morning.

Train No. 3 that morning brought to this city, in two private cars loaned for the occasion by President Carl R. Gray, of the Western Maryland R. R., the following distinguished party of gentlemen: His Honor, James H. Preston, Mayor of Baltimore; former Governor, Philips Lee Goldsborough, Hon. Albert G. Tower, Chairman of the Public Service Commission of Maryland, and Mr. C. T. Williams, Chairman of the State Liberty Loan Committee. After breakfasting, these gentlemen were escorted to the Court House, where each made an address to more than two hundred citizens, Judge Henderson adjourning court for the occasion so that all might hear the speakers and making a short introductory speech.

The crowd present were so stirred by the fervent appeals made to them by the speakers that more than three-fourths of them publicly avowed their patriotic duty to the country by subscribing to the loan in amounts ranging from $20,000 each from the First and Garrett National Banks of Oakland, down to the minimum of $50, and in several minutes' time more than $65,000 was pledged. This amount has grown since to something in the neighborhood of $75,000.

The above named gentlemen left here after the meeting in automobiles for Accident, Grantsville and Frostburg, holding meetings in each of those places and stopping in the latter city for dinner. But $11,000,000 of Maryland's share of the loan remained to be raised yesterday morning, and at that time there was every indication that the citizens of the State would subscribe more than enough of this amount.

The following is a list of subscriptions taken at the meeting Monday morning:

CALLS FOR ARREST OF ALL SLACKERS

Provost Marshal General Issues Orders to This Effect.

That it is the intention of the United States Government to hunt out and prosecute each and every man in the State between the ages of 21 and 31 years who failed to register on Tuesday, June 5th, is wholly manifest in the following letter from Sheriff Albert Ashby, of Garrett county, and which was received at this office on Tuesday. The sheriff has received a telegram which directs him to "make an aggressive and vigorous campaign" to round up all "slackers" who failed to present themselves at the registration booths.

The sheriff's letter follows:

To the Editor of The Republican:

I have just received a telegram, which reads in part as follows:

To Albert Ashby, Sheriff,
Oakland, Maryland.

"The Governor has been directed by the Provost Marshal General to invite your attention to Paragraph Sixteen of the regulations, and requests that EVERY EFFORT NOW BE MADE TO DETECT AND ARREST PERSONS SUBJECT TO THE REGULATIONS WHO HAVE NOT REGISTERED, AND BRING EACH CASE PROMPTLY TO THE ATTENTION OF THE NEAREST REPRESENTATIVE OF THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE." (The regulation referred to reads in part as follows: "and further, if you are a male between your twenty-first and thirty-first birthdays on June 5th, 1917, and are not in the military or naval service of the United States, you are subject to registration on the day fixed by the President; and if you fail to present yourself, you give false, misleading or incorrect answers, you are guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to punishment by imprisonment in jail, to which punishment there is no alternative of fine, and shall thereupon be duly registered."

I wish to say, Mr. Editor, that I fully believe that those arrested and forced to register will be more likely to be placed under draft. This is no child's play. It is the most serious proposition ever undertaken. The correct age of each will be found out, and any statements or oaths made with reference to ages which are not true and bona fide, will be punishable. The eye of the Government is upon every one, and there is no escape.

I, therefore, give this notice of what has been communicated to me, as my attention has been drawn to some few who have tried to shun registration, and now order them to go to the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court, Mr. E. Z. Tower, and register; and if any fail the burden is upon them and for which they will have to answer to the law of their country and carry the humiliation of the disgrace through life.

Respectfully submitted,
ALBERT ASHBY,
Sheriff of Garrett county and Executor of Board of Registration.

Graduated.

Miss Anna McComas, eldest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Henry W. McComas, of Oakland, graduated this week from one of the high schools in Baltimore. The graduating exercises will be held in the Lyric theatre in that city tonight, upon which occasion the family consisting of the parents, and the sisters and brothers of Miss McComas will be present.

MARRIED.

THORN—BOWMAN—At the Home Sanatorium in Oakland, on Saturday afternoon, by the Rev. W. M. Shultz, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, Miss Elizabeth Bowman, of near McHenry, became the bride of Mr. George Thorn, of Akron, Ohio. Mrs. Samuel Bowman, mother of the bride, is a patient at the local hospital.

Wedding Ring Found.

After being lost for more than fifteen years, the wedding ring of Mrs. John W. Davis of Oakland, was found on Saturday by her youngest son William, in front of the dwelling located on Water street where Mr. and Mrs. Davis went to housekeeping about sixteen years ago. The boy was delivering some groceries to a house on Water street and when he alighted from his pony to carry the basket into the yard he happened to glance downward and his eye caught the glitter of the jewel. Not being acquainted with the circumstances surrounding the loss of the ring he gave it to Miss Bess Hendrickson, who resides in the former Davis home. The young lady in cleaning the band of its fifteen years of accumulated dirt was apprized of the owner by finding the names engraved therein and returned it to Mrs. Davis.

Wedded in Montana.

From the Sunday morning edition of the Dailey Missoulian, published at Missoula, Montana, the following notice of the wedding of a former Garrett countain, Miss Stella D. Hutson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hutson, of Oakland, is taken:

HUTSON—WELLS—Miss Stella D. Hutson and Bruce H. Wells were married in the apartment of the groom's sister, Miss Carolyn Wells, at The Paxton yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Rev. Philip D. Hartman, pastor of the Methodist church, south performed the ceremony with Miss Cecil Sharp and Miss Helen Hart attending the young couple. The bride came a few years ago from her home at Oakland, Maryland, to teach school at Stevensville, while the groom is owner and editor of the Stevensville Register. Mr. and Mrs. Wells will go to Butte for a short wedding journey. Mr. Wells is a son of Dr. and Mrs. Wells, former residents of this city, and his boyhood was spent here.

To Persons Who Are In Arrears For Taxes, 1916.

Up to the present time I have refrained to exercise the power given me by the law to enforce the payment of these taxes by a sale of the property on which same is levied, and I hope that it may not be necessary to resort to this means in order to collect said taxes, I want to state, however, that the bills of the county must be paid and the funds necessary to do so are running low. I hope, therefore, that all who are in arrear in payment of taxes for 1916 will promptly come forward and pay same without further delay

OUR WEEKLY RECIPE

BAKED APPLES WITH MARSHMELLOWS

Wash and core tart apples and place in an earthenware baking dish with just enough water to cover the bottom. In the center of each apple place a tiny bit of butter and ½ tsp. salt. Bake until done, adding more water if necessary. Before the apples are quite done, press into the center of each a marshmallow; replace in the oven and let the marshmallows brown. Serve cold with cream.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur DeWitt, of Hoyes, were guests on Sunday at the home of Mr. H. R. DeWitt, near town. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Mary DeWitt, who has been the guest of relatives in this section for some months.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Cheuvront left Oakland on Friday morning last for Louisville, Kentuckey, near which city Mr. Cheuvront will have his headquarters for a short time. Mrs. Cheuvront expects to return to her home in Oakland in a few days.

In the photogravure section of last Sunday's Baltimore Sun appeared a photograph of the Maryland boys now stationed at Fort Myer Va., amongst whom appeared the smiling countenance of Mr. D. Earle Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith, of Hoyes.

Rev. S. E. Wicker, pastor of St. Mark's church, and Mr. B. H. Wiley have been at Bittinger since Tuesday attending the West Virginia Conference of the Lutheran church in session at that village. Quite a number of ministers and lay delegates are in attendance upon the sessions of the conference which will end today.

Mrs. J. C. Ely left Oakland Friday morning for a few days' visit to friends in Morgantown, West Va., from which point she will go to Lancaster, Pa., to visit her son, Rev. John Ely, where she will be joined by Dr. Ely, the latter having also left Saturday, expecting to be absent several weeks, or until the work of improving the interior of the Presbyterian church is completed. Mr. DuBrau, the decorator of interiors, started work upon the walls of the church Monday morning and will be engaged there for some time.

Taken to Hospital.

Mrs. John Felty, who has been quite ill for more than two weeks, was taken to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore Tuesday night by her husband where she will receive treatment. Mrs. Felty's friends in Oakland, who are numerous, hope for her speedy and complete recovery.

B. & O. Wants 300 Men.

On account of increasing work at the local shops and the fact that several men formerly employed at the Western Maryland shops have returned to the service of that company the Baltimore & Ohio wants nearly three hundred men. With the present force they find it impossible to get out the required work.—Cumberland News.

PROTECT CATTLE FROM FLIES

EXPERIMENTS PROVE THE PRACTICAL VALUE OF SPRAYING.

INCREASE MILK FLOW

The Dairy Herd Can Be Rid of Flies At Little Cost.

College Park, June 14.—In connection with the campaign for increased production, farmers are finding the more efficient care and feeding of livestock already in their possession fully as important as increasing the number. One of the most mischievous pests afflicting livestock and reducing production is the fly. This is particularly true of milk production in warm weather when as is well known the flow of milk is seriously affected by the presence of biting flies. In connection with experiments conducted at the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station in 1916, by E. N. Cory and R. H. Ruffner, the possibility of keeping dairy cattle free from flies by spraying with an emulsion of pine tar, creosote and water was demonstrated. In regard to spraying for flies, Mr. Cory says, "this material does not injure the hide or hair or the exposed mucous membranes of the cattle even with daily applications. It moreover, does not mat or gum the hair as it is readily washed off by rains.

The material did not affect the quality of butter nor impart any appreciable taint flavor or odor to the milk as coal tar preparations are reported to do.

Attendants must be careful not to directly affect the milk through milking when their hands are soiled with the emulsion. Its cost is approximately one-half cent per cow, per day, including all labor. The time of one man using a compressed air, automatic knapsack pump should not exceed 15 minutes per day for a herd of 20 cows. The sprayer should be fitted with a three-foot extension rod and an angle nozzle to facilitate the work.

The increase in milk fully warrants the use of the material. The average production of nine cows during the period from August 11-21 inclusive, when they were not sprayed was 16.59 lbs. During the subsequent period from August 22 to August 31st inclusive when the same cows were sprayed daily they produced 19.29 pounds. This was an average increase of 2.70 pounds per cow at a cost of a half a cent per cow.

Aside from any increased production with this practice, the elimination of possible disease carrying flies, justifies the work. The emulsion may be made in any quantity and will keep indefinitely. Dissolve 2 pounds of Caustic soda in 1 gallon of water; stir into it 3 gallons of cresote and add cold water to make up 100 gallons.

During the mixing, stir vigorously and stir the emulsion each time before using.

For further information write to the Maryland Agricultural Extension Service, College Park, or consult your County Demonstration Agent.

FEEDING THE PIG.

College Park, June 14.—No one is doing a more important work in helping the nation to "arm and farm" than the member of the boys' agricultural clubs of Maryland who is growing a pig. He is growing the most pork at the least cost and training himself to be an efficient producer of livestock. He is following out to the last little detail the instructions given him by his County Demonstration Agent regarding the production of high grade pork. He is putting into practice the method of feeding, recommended by S. S. Buckley, animal industry specialist of the Maryland Agricultural Extension Service. Dr. Buckley says:

"The pigs which are selected for meat purposes, and the pig which is selected for the profitable pig contest, should be fed to secure the greatest weight at the least cost. To do this it will be necessary to feed both for growth and fat. The object of getting vitality and strength of body and constitution does not enter into the work as it does with breeding animals.

"The more you act as servant to the pig, in bringing the feed to the pen, instead of requiring the pig to hustle for himself, the more gain in weight can be secured from the same amount of feed. Corn is the chief grain to depend on, but the same green feeds pastured or fed in the pens—peas, beans, clover, alfalfa, etc.—are desirable.

"The pigs must have exercise and be kept with enough energy to keep them with keen appetites.

"From weaning time until the pigs weight 75 lbs., feed 1 lb. each of tankage and middlings for each 8 lbs. of cornmeal. In addition give green feed and skim milk. Feed the grain three times a day, mixed with skim milk; if possible, all they will eat. Between feeding times let them have any of the green feeds which may be ready for feeding.

"When they weigh about 75 lbs. gradually change their grain feed to soaked whole corn or corn and middlings each 5 parts and tankage 1 part.

"Cowpeas and soy beans can be used to good advantage in the fattening process, but finish off with corn."

Select, test and treat your seed for increased production.

Reasons Why You Should Patronize this Horse.

He is an extra good individual and represents the most popular breed in the country today. His pedigree represents the best blood of his breed. His quality is unsurpassed and he has the best disposition of any stallion in the country. He transmits this disposition to his colts. He is a tried horse and a sure foal getter. His colts are easy to sell and bring good prices; they have high life, plenty of vim, but are easy to handle. He will stay here and give you a chance to breed to him again.

We will exercise the greatest care in handling mares, but will not be responsible for accidents.

Will stand for the season of 1917, until July 1, at the following places: Hutton, at M. G. Mellot's, Mondays and Tuesdays of each week, beginning April 23rd and 24th. McHenry, at Jonas Glotfelty's, Wednesday and Thursday of each week. Oakland, at the Fair Grounds, Friday and Saturday of each week.

TERMS—To insure a mare with foal, $12.00.

Blaire Mining Company, a corporation; Eliza Bowie Mackall, and the unknown heirs-at-law of Robert Swan, deceased, son of Rober Swan, deceased, and grandson of General John Swan, deceased, defendants.

No. 2123 Equity, in the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of Military Lot No. 288 situate in Garrett County, Maryland, and for a distribution of the proceeds thereof among the parties to this cause according to their respective rights and interests therein.

The bill states that General John Swan in his lifetime and at the time of his death was seized in fee of Military Lot No. 288 containing fifty acres, more or less, situate in Allegany, now Garrett county, Maryland, to which he acquired title by deed from Thomas Rutter, United States Marshal for the district of Maryland, by deed dated February 17, 1813, recorded in Liber G. folio 104, among the Land Records of said Allegany county, a copy of which deed is filed with the bill marked "Plaintiffs' Exhibit No. 1," and which, with all other exhibits hereinafter referred to and filed herewith, is prayed to be taken and considerd as a part of the bill of complaint; and that being so seized, the said Gen. John Swan, died in the year 1821, leaving a last will whereby he devised certain of his property therein mentioned to the legatees and devisees therein named, and whereby his four sons, to-wit: John Swan; James Swan; Robert Swan and George Maxwell Swan, as residuary devisees, acquired title to said Military Lot No. 288, a copy of said will being exhibited with the bill; that John Swan, son of Gen. John Swan, died intestate about the year 1831, unmarried, without issue, leaving surviving him as his only heirs at law his three brothers above named, who, thereafter, were each entitled to an undivided ⅓ interest in said Military Lot No. 288; that James Swan, son of Gen. John Swan, died about the year 1850, testate, a copy of his last will being exhibited with the bill, whereby he devised his undivided ⅓ interest in said Lot to his son, John Swan, ⅓; to his daughter, Anna Elizabeth, ⅓; and to the children of his deceased daughter, Ellen, ⅓; that subsequently, by deed dated June 25, 1877, the heirs and devisees of said James Swan conveyed their undivided ⅓ interest in said Lot to Manor Mining & Manufacturing Company, and that by deed dated December 17, 1906, said Manor Mining & Manufacturing Company conveyed all its interest in said Lot to Thomas B. Davis, Jr., and Joseph E. Davis, and by deed dated September 30, 1908, said Thomas B. Davis, Jr., and Joseph E. Davis conveyed all their interest in said Lot to the defendant, Blaine Mining Company, whereby said defendant acquired an undivided ⅓ interest in said Military Lot No. 288, copies of said deed being filed with the bill as exhibits in this cause; That Robert Swan, son of General John Swan, departed this life about the year 1835, leaving a will whereby all his property was left in trust to the trustees therein named for the use and benefit of his widow, long since deceased, and his three sons John, Charles and Robert, a copy of said will being exhibited with the bill; that the said Charles Swan died intestate, unmarried and without issue, about the year 1850; that the said Robert Swan, son of Robert, died intestate about the year 1850, leaving a widow, Kate Swan, now deceased, and a daughter, Willie Swan, who died about the year 1870, leaving a will whereby Christiana S. MacKenzie asher residuary devisee, became entitled to the interest of the said Willie Swan in said Lot, to-wit an undivided 1-6 thereof, and that the said Christiana S. MacKenzie died about the year 1900, leaving a will, whereby her daughter Eliza Bowie Mackall, one of the defendants to this suit, as her residuary devisee, became entitled to said one undivided 1-6 interest in said Military Lot No. 288, copies of the wills of said Willie Swan and Christiana S. MacKenzie being exhibited with the bill; that the above named Robert Swan, son of Robert, and grandson of General John Swan, many years ago removed to the State of California, and their died, but whether testate or intestate, married or unmarried, is to the plaintiffs unknown, entitled to an undivided 1-6 interest in said Lot, his unknown heirs at law being defendants in this case; that George Maxwell Swan, son of General John Swan, died about the year 1848, intestate, leaving as his sole heir at law a daughter, Mary E. F. Swan, who became the wife of Alexander C. Good, and died in the year 1865, leaving a will whereby she devised all her property to her husband, the said Alexander C. Good; that the said Alexander C. Good died about the year 1905, intestate, leaving surviving him, as his only heirs at law a son, Maxwell S. Good; a daughter, Jessie B. Reveley, intermarried with Albert S. Reveley, and a daughter, Mary Lamar Sloan, widow of David W. Sloan, who died on the 30th day of December, 1914, leaving surviving her as her heirs at law a daughter, Margaret M. Sloan, unmarried and of full age; a daughter, Frances Swan Brady, of full age, intermarried with Hugh S. Brady; a son, David W. Sloan, Jr., under the age of 21 years, and a son, Alexander Maxwell Sloan, under the age of 21 years, both of whom sue by their guardian and next friend, D. Lindley Sloan, the said Maxwell S. Good; Jessie B. Reveley; Margaret M. Sloan; Frances Swan Brady; David W. Sloan, Jr., and Alexander Maxwell Sloan, the plaintiffs in this case, having a one undivided one-third interest in and to said Military Lot No. 288, a copy of the will of said Mary E. F. Good being exhibited with the bill.

The bill further charges, that the said Military Lot No. 288, located in Garrett County, Maryland, is not susceptible of partition among the parties interested therein, without material loss and injury, and that it will be for the benefit and advantage of all the parties interested therein, and especially to the interest of said infant plaintiffs to have the said property sold and the proceeds distributed to the parties to this suit, according to their respective rights and interests therein, and then prays for a decree for the sale of said land, and for general relief, for process against the resident defendant, Eliza Bowie Mackall; and for an order of publication against Blaine Mining Company, a corporation, non-resident of the State of Maryland, and also against the unknown heirs at law of Robert Swan, deceased, and grandson of General John Swan, deceased, who are non-residents of the State of Maryland, giving them notice of the object and substance of this bill of complaint, and warning them to be and appear in this Court, either in person or by solicitor upon a day certain to be named therein, and answer the premises, and abide by and perform such decree as may be passed thereon.

It is thereupon, this 30th day of May, 1917, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, ordered that the plaintiffs by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett County, Maryland, once in each of four successive weeks before the 30th day of June, 1917, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 16th day of July, next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not be passed as prayed.

STATE SCHOLARSHIPS IN ENGINEERING COURSES

ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS for the Department of Engineering, as well as for the College of Arts and Sciences, will be held by the College Entrance Examination Board in the Academic Building of The Johns Hopkins University, Homewood, Baltimore, June 26th, 1917, beginning at 9 A. M. each day.

APPLICATIONS FOR SCHOLARSHIPS IN THE DEPARTMENT OF ENGINEERING, established under the provisions of the Laws of Maryland, Chapter 90, 1912, will now be received. If there is more than one application for a particular scholarship, a competitive examination must be taken in the Academic Building, Homewood, on September 21, 1917, beginning at 9 A. M. Appointments will be made soon after.

Each Legislative District of Baltimore City and each County of the State, with the exception of Caroline, Somerset and Talbot Counties, will be entitled to one or more scholarships for the year 1917-18, in addition to those which have already been assigned. In the three counties mentioned above, all the available scholarships have been awarded.

Under the provisions of the Act of Assembly, the County and City Scholarships in the Department of Engineering are awarded only to deserving students whose financial circumstances are such that they are unable to obtain an education in Engineering unless free tuition be granted to them. The scholarships entitle the holders to free tuition, free use of text-books, and exemption from all regular fees. WHILE THE SPIRIT OF ATTENDANCE FOR THOSE WHO DO NOT RECEIVE SCHOLARSHIPS IS NO GREATER THAN AT ANY OTHER MARYLAND INSTITUTIONS.

Scholarships may be awarded to graduates of Loyola College, St. Johns College, Washington College, Western Maryland College, Maryland Agricultural College, Mt. St. Mary's College, Rock Hill College and one scholarship will be awarded "At large."

Applicants should address the Registrar, The Johns Hopkins University, for blank forms of application and for further information as to examinations, award of scholarships, and courses of instruction.

Pure Bred Stallion

An announcement of interest to all farmers and stockmen in the Accident, Cove and Keyer's Ridge districts of Garrett county, Md., and Negro Mountain, adjacent to Mason & Dixon's line, is made by John H. Colflesh of Accident, Md., to the effect that he is the owner of a fine Pure Bred Stallion that will make the season at the following places:

In Cove at barn of George Colflesh.

At Keyser's Ridge at barn of Charles Reichenbecher.

On Negro Mountain at barn of C. C. Wisseman.

Mr. Colflesh is a delegate of the Imported Stock Association and hopes to interest all the farmers in the neighborhoods named in the raising of better horses. He hopes to meet all of the farmers and breeders during the season and invites them to come and see his horse and get acquainted with his pedigree and qualities which make him a desirable sire.

Road Petition.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first publication hereof, application will be made to the Board of County Commissioners of Garrett county for the appointment of examiners to view and locate a new public county road, beginning for the same at a point on the Morgantown road in the town of Selbysport near Robert F. Elston's stable, and running thence through the lands of Robert Lister, Saville Schlosshagle, Jacob E. Bowser and George W. Dunham and to insert the present road at a point near George W. Dunham's stable, thence following the old road to a point near the foot of the hill where the road leaves the river and runs thence through the land of Jonas Frazee's heirs and Frank Baybeek and to connect the county road at some suitable point; also a change in the county road leading from the Youghiogheny River to Guard postoffice, beginning for the same at the south end of the "Narrows" and running thence through the land of Ida M. Garletts and to intersect the present road near the Hinebaugh water trough, a distance of about twenty rods, thence on to the Mason and Dixon line.

Notice To Tax-Payers

This is to notify the Taxpayers of Garrett county that the Annual Levy for 1917 has been made and published, and to call their attention to the following abstract of Section 45, Chapter 58, Acts of 1888, relating to the discount to be allowed and the interest to be charged on all tax bills:

"All county taxes shall be due and payable on the first day of September next succeeding the date of the levy thereof, and on all county taxes paid on or before the 1st day of September a discount of 3 per cent. will be allowed and after the 1st day of January all county taxes shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum until paid. The Treasurer shall take the discount from and charge the interest on the tax bills for county purposes regularly in the manner aforesaid and shall note the same upon the books and upon the receipt given upon the tax so paid. But the discount shall not be allowed unless the whole amount of state and county taxes are paid when same is made."

Under the provision of Section 48 of Chapter 630, of the Acts of 1916, all the state taxes shall be due and payable on and after the first day of July in the year in which the same are levied and if not paid on or before the 1st day of September of said year, shall bear interest from said date at the rate of six per cent. per annum. No discount allowed on state taxes.

J. W. KIMMELL,
County Treasurer.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Young Men's Responsibility For Their Influence.

The moral duty of the community to care for its young men is conceded on all hands, but sometimes what is everybody's business is no body's and yet the duty will never be rightly performed until the individual consciousness of obligation to the young is roused into action. Let me mention employers. With many young men they take the place of parents and must finish the process of moulding which is begun at home. They have more to do with them than to get all they can out of them, for as little as possible. They are not like the task masters of Egypt to riot in the gains of clerks and operators. They can do much for their moral and intellectual being and they ought to. They can if they will, wield the scepter of justice and religion and make cupidity yield to conscience. He owes it to posterity and to God to exact of his employees just what duty requires; to restrain them from dissipation, revelry and immortality and with instruction in business, to give also with reproof, kindly admonition and encouragement. A kind word, a suggestion, or a manifestation of interest in them will be as seed sown which will produce good fruit. Their example of opinions have great weight upon the young. Instead of teaching them to cheat skillfully or misrepresent scientifically, as many do, they should teach them honesty and by precept and example impress their minds with the necessity of order, punctuality and attention to the claims of religion and benevolence. "No man liveth unto himself," and by the very circumstances in which they are placed as well as by the necessity of their existence. Employers are set for the rising or falling of many.

The press owes an important duty to young men. It can stimulate them to good or inflame their passion for evil. It may ruin scores with ease. Books and papers add largely in forming the moral and religious habits of the young. The impressions received from the press in one hour, may last through life and transmit its influence to future ages. The work of the press is for eternity and it should use its efforts to guide the young into the highway of purity, morality and religion. I may not speak of that trashy literature, known as "yellow backed" which is damning in its influence and only demoralizing in its tendencies and wholly unfit for mental application and the toil of daily life. Away with all literary trash and rubbish, but give us good books. Down with all mean third rate gossiping papers which eke out a precarious existence by pampering to the lowest propensities of human nature, that are base and puerile, but give us well edited, spicy papers, that are elevating in their tone, purifying in their influence and which we need not be ashamed to put in the hands of women and children. What is the duty of the pulpit to young men. The pulpit is God's teaching institute. To neglect the youth is a criminal disregard of the Saviour's command. This class has claims on the ministrations of the pulpit. The church owes it to young men away from home to help them take care of the Sabbaths. When he ceases to regard the Sabbath he is afloat in a stream from which it will be difficult to rescue himself. She must reclaim the backslider, raise the fallen and cooperate with them in everything that tends to their profit, or the usefulness of society. They desire the approbation of the wise and good. They are the hope of the world, but if ignorance, vice, ungoverned passion and irreligion are found among them, they will be the mildew of our country's beauty, the dry rot on the pillars that support the state; the secret poison contaminating the fountain of purity and truth and instead of advancing the kingdom of Christ they are helping on the kingdom of darkness. The church recognizes the power of the young men and so she strives to interest them in her work and the labors of the Y. M. C. A. of the land show what consecrated and earnest effort can do. Young men can be—they have been the means of winning many for Christ, and these shall shine as stars in their crown of rejoicing. The church must give them work to do and then they must not be afraid to take hold of it. Every minister needs young men, the church needs them, and society needs their cooperation. Young men may change the moral tone of any community. You can do more than any class for the cause of temperance. It is thinning their ranks. They must oppose this evil and in the might of their manhood rally their forces and say to this usurper, thus far and no farther.

The world is stretching out her hands to you, young men. From your ranks must come her legislators and recruits for all the professions and callings of life. You must supply the ministers. You must carry the gospel to the dark places of the earth. You cannot all stand as the heralds of Christ to preach His truth, but you can let your influence be felt for right and God and thus prepare the way for the coming of the King and thus hasten the golden age. It will require self denial, but this is a divinely imposed duty and shall we be ashamed or refuse to do our duty? It is important to live well, not for our own sakes only but for the sake of others and right living glorifies God. We ought to do this to show our love to the Saviour. It is well to keep ever in mind your mission as well as responsibility for your influence. If it is for good it will be a pebble thrown in a lake, the circles of influence will grow wider and extend farther. If it is for evil the ripples will go on increasing until they break in angry waves on the shores of eternity.

AGRICULTURISTS IN GARRETT COUNTY

Two Representatives of State College Here For a Week.

The Maryland State College has again favored this county. The farmers are to have with them the entire week of June 18th two of the men from the Extention Service. One of these men has been in Garrett county this spring. At that time he talked in the interest of Sheep. Dr. Buckley will this time discuss livestock from its various angles and place special emphasis on diseases and their prevention. These subjects are of vital importance to the farmers of this county and it goes without saying that goodly numbers will attend the meetings.

Mr. W. B. Kemp will accompany Dr. Buckley. Mr. Kemp is the Extension Agronomist. He will deal with questions pertaining to soil. He will place a great deal of emphasis on lime and fertilizers. Farmers, if you have any questions to ask regarding the use of lime and fertilizers, come to one of the meetings and ask Mr. Kemp. He will be only too glad to answer them for you.

The meetings will be held as follows:

Red House School, Monday, June 18th, at 3:00 and 7:30 p. m.

Swanton, Tuesday, June 19th, 9:30 a. m., 2:00 p. m. and 7:30 p. m.

McHenry School House, Wednesday, June 20th, 9:30 a. m., 2:00 p. m., and 7:30 p. m.

Bittinger School House, Thursday, June 21st, 9:00 a. m., 2:00 p. m., and 7:30 p. m.

New Germany, Friday, June 22nd, 9:30 a. m., 2:00 p. m., and 7:30 p. m.

The various topics will be started in the morning, continued in the afternoon and finished in the evening. To get the most out of the visit of these men you should attend a full days session.

The Boys' Agricultural Club of Grantsville will have an illustrated lecture in Broadwater' Hall at Grantsville. The lecture is on Agriculture, but will be of interest to Ladies and Gentlemen, young and old. The price of admission is fifteen cents. The date, Saturday evening, June 16th.

A meeting of the committee on the sheep question has been called for Friday, June 15th, at the Accident school house. All those interested in the organization of a Garrett County Sheep Growers Association should make it a point to attend this meeting. Time: 2 o'clock.

Children's Day Services.

Children's Day services at Loch Lynn, U. B. Church will be held Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. All cordially invited to attend. Baptismal service at the conclusion of program.

There will be an old folks experience meeting at Lynn Dale school house next Sabbath morning at 10:30. You will be cordially welcomed. Come and take part.

G. S. HANLEITER, Pastor.

REPORT OF GRAND JURY JUNE TERM

Comprehensive Document Filed When Body Was Discharged.

Friday at noon the June Term Grand Jury of the Circuit Court for Garrett county completed its work and after filing its report with His Honor, Judge A. Hunter Boyd, the members of the body were dismissed from further duties at the present time.

The report of the jury is somewhat longer than usual, but is very comprehensive and goes into details concerning the conditions surrounding the various public buildings and is as follows:

To the Honorable, The Judges of the Circuit Court for Garrett county:

The grand jury for the June Term 1917 of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, beg leave to report that we have concluded our labors, and have to the best of our ability performed the duties devolving upon us as members of this body, and we now desire to report our proceedings and receive our discharge.

We have had before us and examined 109 witnesses, and have found 26 presentments and 26 indictments.

We have found presentments in all cases in which we believed the evidence justified, and have ignored trivial cases and those cases in which the evidence did not appear to warrant presentments.

We have examined the several county buildings, in accordance with your Honor's instructions.

We find that the Jail is in need of some repairs as follows: The airway to the Jail on the east entrance is in need of repairs.

The steel under the toilets in and under the cells is rusting badly and should be painted to preserve the same.

The locking system is in bad repair, only a few of the cells being in condition to lock.

There should be an entire new outfit for the hospital room and the walls of same should be repainted. Also recommend that the hospital room be used for sick charges only.

Some beds in the cells are in need of new bedding, also there should be one padded cell for insane prisoners.

The lathe exposed on the coal pit should be replastered.

Some repairs should be made to the front porch leading to the sheriffs residence, the wood work should be painted and the banisters repaired.

We call attention to the report of last term of 1916, namely, we find the composition caps on the columns of the Court House should be renewed at once, as some of the bricks above same have fallen out. The porch floors should be repainted immediately, for preservation. We further recommend that the blocks are becoming loose. We find concrete walls around grounds and the walks in grounds in need of repairs. We would suggest that the office of clerk to the county commissioners be furnished with another filing cabinet, for the preservation of the records. Would also advise repainting walls of the office of the Register of Wills. All wood work on exterior of Court House should be repainted. We would suggest that the janitor receive an increase in salary of at least 25 cents a day.

This grand jury finds that recommendations, made by grand juries of previous years, have been ignored. Examinations are useless if repairs deemed very necessary are not made.

We desire to acknowledge the courtesy shown us by His Honor, Judge Boyd. We wish to commend the several county officials having records of the county in charge, for the neat manner in which we find the records kept.

We cannot close this report without extending our thanks and sincere appreciation to Mr. E. Ray Jones, States Attorney, for the valuable assistance he has rendered this jury in the conduct of its investigations.

We now beg to be discharged.

Respectfully submitted,
G. W. Weitzell, Forman.

John M. Jarboe,
W. A. Spiker, Clerks.

Food Measures.

Representative F. N. Zihlman of the 6th Maryland district has been appointed on a committee to call upon President Wilson relative to the pending food bills.

The labor group of Congress was invited by President Sam Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, to meet Food Director Hoover last week.

The importance of the food legislation pending in Congress was discussed and the following committee was appointed to meet the President and urge that he use his influence toward the passage of the food bills in order to prevent food speculation and to reduce the high cost of living.

Congressman Koating, Colorado; Nolan, California; Zihlman, Maryland; Van Dyke, Minnesota; Farr, Pennsylvania, and London of New York.

FIRE LOSS FALLS.

Efficiency of Force Increased and Loss is Being Rapidly Reduced.

The Maryland Board of Forestry has just made public the State's losses from forest fires for the preceeding year. It is a record of accomplishment and proof of services well done. It still being the fire season in much of the State, these figures are particularly of interest.

It was not unusual, a few years back, for Maryland's loss from forest fires to be a quarter-million dollars annually. In fact, as late as 1911, it reached the figure of $226,000, and though being steadily reduced as the State Forest Fire Protective organization grew in strength of members, it was still in 1914 as much as $130,000. Then it began to go down. The next year it was about $20,000 less, but it remained for 1916 to shove this total down and register a knock-out punch in one of the most expensive, unnecessary leaks the State has ever had. And the present is no time for leaks.

Taking three widely separated counties, as far apart in location as in the make-up of their timber, yet all of them with heavy forests which are of greatest value and necessity to each, we find Garrett with a damage in 1915 of $19,000. For 1916 this shrinks to $4,500, the cost of extinguishing such fires as occurred dropping at the same time from $392 to $325. Fire damage in Charles decreased within one year from $7,000 to $1,500, cost of fire fighting from $104 to $11. In Worcester these figures continue, for while forest fires in 1915 cost this county in damaged timber the sum of $2,500, it was reduced in 1916 to only $500. Results so uniform over a great area prove that real work was accomplished in the forests of the State, since showings are as uniform throughout.

In the State of Maryland, as a whole, number of forest fires went down 47 per cent. from 247 in 1915 to 117 in 1916; damage, from $109,000 to $29,000, 27 per cent. cost of extinguishing, $3,300 to $1,000, 31 per cent. acres burned over, 37,640 to 19,800, a lowering of 53 per cent.

The actual returns—in timber saved, lands kept productive, watersheds protected, and local industries sustained—are hard to estimate. No one can doubt but that such service has real money value to the State. For such a showing there is some explanation, naturally. While the two fire seasons of Spring and Fall in 1916 were not abnormally dry, they were not at the same time more favorable for fire protection than many which have gone before, and which have failed to make these showings. It is rather to be laid at the door of increased efficiency in the State organizations of Forest Wardens, personnel which through its commendable zeal, continued interest, and increasing effective service is saving the State vast sums each year.

Their services are not expensive, about a hundredth part of what they save, but they are valuable. With the same efficient efforts, and the solid backing of the public, they will keep on guarding for the State one of its chiefest resources at a period when such resources were never more important.

Married.

LEGISLATURE HAS PEACEFUL START

All Bills Are Likely to be Put Through Before June 21.

STATE HOUSE, ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 12.—The war session after general assembly began today under a call by Governor Harrington. The constitution limits the session to thirty days, but the general impression here is that it will end before the close of next week, possibly before June 21, June day at the Naval Academy, when legislative members at Carvel Hall must surrender their rooms.

There was not a ripple on the legislative session today worth while. Senators and delegates realize that they are here for serious business; that their business at home suffers by their absence, and that the people demand that they rush their program and quit.

The Senate thought it could expediate business by surrendering tomorrow to the printer. It adjourned until Thursday when public hearings will be held by the Senate as a committee of the whole. The regular business will begin.

The House was on the job almost all the afternoon, and this evening. It will resume session at noon tomorrow, and will proceed with consideration of bills introduced and referred today. It expects to go right straight along with its program, even holding a session on Saturday.

The procedings in both Houses were devoid of partisanship. In the House, Mr. Metzerott, nominee of the Republican caucus for Speaker, after receiving the vote of the party, moved to make unanimous the election of his successful democratic opponent. All Republicans voted for democratic caucus nominees for desk clerkships.

In the Senate there was the same marked absence of partisan feeling. In the corridors the talk continues that an effort will be made to take from the Governor the power conferred upon him in the Million dollar loan bill to name the members in the bill, a practice which the Democrats introduced and followed with success during the administration of Governor Goldsborough. The opposition to the Governor's plan has not organized.

The Senate continued Mr. Campbell as president, the House elected D. G. McIntosh, of Baltimore county. Speaker. Howard Bryant, of the same county, who had been brought forward for speaker, made the speech nominating Mr. McIntosh.

The committee on rules, submitted several amendments to the rules of last session. The changes are in paragraphs rendered unnecessary because of brevity of session, such as absence of a calendar relating to local bills, etc.

The following officers were provided by the House. Two proofreading clerks, chief bill room clerk, clerk to ways and means committee, clerk to claim's committee, clerk to city delegation, committee stenographers, and one doorkeeper.

The Governor will furnish all other employees including several stenographers, pages, etc., out of the State House force. Local clergymen will be asked to serve as chaplain without pay.

The speaker announced the re-appointment of the committes which served during the regular session. He will later fill vacancies caused by his election to the speakership. The House adjourned until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

SUFFRAGE SUNBEAMS.

DO YOU KNOW

That Alabama, opposing equal suffrage, has no laws for the protection of working women and allows children 12 years old to be worked 10 and 11 hours a day; requires only 8 weeks of school each year, and has in consequence 352,710 illiterates to boast of.

That Louisiana, opposed to equal suffrage, spends $150,000 annually for protection of fish and game and only $900 for factory inspection, and this grudgingly.

That Mississippi, opposed to equal suffrage, devotes $62,000 to replanting oyster beds, but refuse to allow one cent for inspection of factories where boys of 12 years work.

That Indiana, opposed to equal suffrage, gives annually $15,000 for better bees and fruit but votes down a $2000 appropriation for better babies.

That New Mexico, Missouri and South Carolina, opposed to equal suffrage, name the father sole guardian of the children and entitles him to all their earnings during miaority and to all damages in event of death and disability.

That Maryland, Georgia, Florida, Delaware, Virginia and Tennessee, all opposed to equal suffrage, not only constitutes the father the sole guardian of the children but allow him to will them away from the mother if he so desires.

That every equal suffrage state has a joint guardianship law and has statutes protecting the woman in her bearings and her property.

That it is in the equal suffrage states that the most decisive victories are being won in the campaign against commercialized vice.

J. C. PEDDICORD FOR COURT CLERK

Former Postmaster of Oakland Enters the Lists for Office.

With the announcement appearing in today's Republican, Mr. James C. Peddicord, for eight years postmaster in Oakland, enters the fight for the nomination for Clerk of the Circuit Court of Garrett county at the Primary Election to be held in September.

Mr. Peddicord is a son of the late Thomas J. Peddicord with whom he was associated in the practice of law until he was appointed postmaster which office he held until the appointment of the present official. As postmaster Mr. Peddicord was efficient and held a good record in the Department.

The candidate states that he intends to make an aggressive campaign for the nomination and if successful will give the office every attention, treating all with courtesy.

For the past two years he has been chairman of the Republican County Committee. He is now engaged in the practice of law and also in the insurance business, having associated with him his son Mr. Philip T. Peddicord.

DISTRICT NO. 2 MAN FOR SHERIFF

James Frazee, Who Made Good Showing Two Years Ago, Tries Again.

Mr. James Frazee, a well known farmer and citizen of District No. 2, residing a few miles out of Friendsville, is an announced candidates or the nomination on the Republican ticket for Sheriff, subject to the result of the primary election.

Mr. Frazee was a candidate for nomination for the same office two years ago at which time he carried his home district by a safe margin, but failed to receive sufficient votes in other sections of the county to become the candidate at the general election, but that made no difference to Mr. Frazee insofar as his fidelity to the party went, for he gave every candidate on the ticket at the general election his loyal support and brought others who thought they had been unfairly treated to the same point of view, with the result that the entire Republican ticket was elected with the old-time majorities.

Mr. Frazee is a farmer and has been such since his early boyhood; he is a good citizen; a staunch supporter of Republican principles, and asks the support of his party at the polls in September. That he is qualified for the position which he seeks is unquestioned, and should he be nominated and elected the members of his party and his friends will find they made no mistake in supporting him.

GRANTSVILLE.

Daniel Hershberger and Frand Getty, the two young men who were awarded the free trip to Baltimore for honors won at the Oakland meet, left Friday for that city to take part in the athletic exercises there. They were accompanied by Misses Angela and Wilda Getty.

Three recruits from Grantsville have enlisted in their country's cause, Fay and Earle Miller and Harry Gingerich, having volunteered for service when the recruiting officers were here Monday last.

Leora, the little five year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hetrick, of Cove, Md., died at her home on June 8th, of diabetes, after an illness of several months. She had been brought home from the Confluence hospital and died in two more days. Interment was made from the Cove Lutheran church on Sunday morning.

W. C. Stanton, Misses Ruth Keller and Beulah Bender have returned from the Sunday school convention at Lavansville, Pa., last week, where they were present as delegates.

Mrs. J. W. McCullough, of Friendsville, and her three attractive daughters, Mrs. Percy Friend, and Misses Marie and Claudia McCullough and son George, spent Saturday in Grantsville, where Mrs. Friend was having some dental work done by Dr. Keller. While there Mrs. McCullough and her capable chauffer treated a number of ladies to a joy ride in their new Winton car.

Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Carney, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Miller, Mrs. C. B. Getty and Miss Winifred Bonig attended the Lutheran Sunday school convention at Friedens, Pa., last week, the two latter ladies remaining as delegates during all the sessions.

The Methodist Sunday school rendered a most pleasing Childrens' Day service on Sunday evening, consisting of recitations, music and singing. The Bender orchestra composed of Miss Edna, as organist, and Allan, Harry Raymond and Otto, with violins and cornet, assisted by their instructor Prof. U. S. Miller, rendered some very delightful selections The offering was for the Board of Education. An address was made by the pastor.

The second of the series of the Passion Play was given at the Catholic church on Sunday night.

Mrs. Luther Lininger, of Frostburg, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Joel Miller.

Miss Fannie Shaw, of Hill Dale farm, is very seriously ill and her relatives have all been summoned home the past week.

Carroll Carr, from New York city, is a guest at the National Hotel.

Mrs. Thomas Gatewood, of Frostburg, is spending several months at the Casselman Hotel.

Wm. Scott and party, from West Virginia, are domiciled in the Casselman Cabin for the summer.

Assignee's Sale

OF VALUABLE

at Kitzmiller, Garrett County, Maryland.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from A. G. Barrick and Ida B. Barrick, his wife, and William Murray and Missouri Murray, his wife, to The First National Bank of Kitzmillerville, Maryland, dated the 26th day of July, 1915, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 69, folio 207, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said mortgage, and the same having been assigned to the undersigned assignee for purposes of foreclosure, I hereby give notice that on the 22d day of June, 1917,

FRIDAY,

at the hour of 11 o'clock A. M., in front of The First National Bank Building, in the Town of Kitzmiller, Garrett county, Maryland, I will offer for sale and sell at public auction, all of the following described real estate, situate in the said Town of Kitzmiller, Maryland, to wit:

1. All that piece or parcel of ground known and designated as Lot No. 34, in Rafter's addition to the Town of Kitzmiller, beginning for the same at the corner of Lot No. 33 on Front Street, and running thence with said Front Street, North 76-¾ degrees East, 50 feet, South 13 degrees East, 174 feet to an alley, thence South 77½ degrees West, 50 feet, thence North 13 degrees West, 174 feet to Front Street and to the beginning, being the same property which was conveyed to the said A. G. Barrick by John H. Rafter and wife, by deed dated February 15, 1915, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 58, folio 126, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, Maryland.

The above described parcel will be sold subject to a prior mortgage to Fred. A. Thayer for $800, and any interest accrued thereon, dated Sept mber 24, 1913, recorded among the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, a statement of which will be made at the time of sale.

This property is improved by a comfortable dwelling house and necessary out-buildings, and is desirably located.

2. All that other lot of ground known and designated as Lot No. 15 in Rafter's Addition to the Town of Kitzmiller, beginning for the same at the Southeast corner of the intersection of Centre Street and Cross Street, and running thence with Centre Street, North 77½ degrees East, 50 feet, South 12¾ degrees East 100 feet; South 77½ degrees West, 50 feet, North 12¾ degrees West, 100 feet to the beginning, being the same property which was conveyed to the said William Murray by The Blaine Mercantile Company by deed dated August 7, 1907, recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 56, folio 127, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, Maryland.

This property is improved by a comfortable dwelling house and all necessary out buildings, and is now occupied by the said William Murray.

TERMS OF SALE—As prescribed by said mortgage—cash on the day of sale. But if any responsible party or parties desire to purchase either or both of the said properties, arrangements can be made upon payment of a reasonable sum in cash at the time of sale, whereby the balance of the purchase money can be carried upon mortgage for a term not exceeding two years from the day of sale Conveyancing at the cost of purchaser or purchasers.

For further particulars inquire of the undersigned, or to Mr. B. V. Inskeep, Cashier of The First National Bank of Kitzmillerville.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
Assignee for purposes of foreclosure.

CULP BOY TO BE TRIED TOMORROW

Case Removed From Garrett to Allegany County Will be Called.

The trial of Payne Culp, a youth of about fourteen years, indicted by the grand Jury at the recent term of the Circuit Court for this county for the murder of Thomas Wilson, another lad of about the same age, both of whom were pupils at the Red Oak schoolhouse in District No. 8, the killing of young Wilson occurring upon the school grounds, will be taken up in the Circuit Court of Allegany county tomorrow morning to which Court the case was removed by the defense.

A large number of witnesses for both the State and the defense have been summoned. The State will be represented in the trial by State's Attorney Jones, and Attorneys Fred. A. Thayer and E. H. Sincell. The defense will be conducted by Mr. Gilmor S. Hamill of Oakland, and Mr. Alber A. Doub of Cumberland.

LOST LEG AT BLOOMINGTON

John Thomas, Of Near Oakland, Met With Serious Mishap.

Last Friday night as John Thomas, who resides a few miles from Oakland, attempted to board a moving freight train at Bloomington, twenty miles east of Oakland on the B. & O. Railroad, he fell beneath the wheels of the train and had his right leg cut off below the knee. Later Thomas was taken to the Hoffman Hospital, at Keyser, West Va., where surgical aid was rendered him. Thomas and a companion, who had spent the day and evening at Westernport, were returning to their homes when the accident befel him.

SEN. H. J. SPEICHER IS FLOOR LEADER

Garrett County's Representative In Upper House Is Honored.

At the organization of the Senate of Maryland, assembled in special session on Tuesday, Senator Harvey J. Speicher, of Garrett county, was elected Republican floor leader in the face of opposition, two other Republican senators from as many counties vieing with him for the honor. The recognition thus accorded Garrett county's Senator by his fellow-members is an honor well deserved. He is the ranking Senator in point of service and his work at former sessions of the law-making body when he devoted his entire time to legislation of benefit to the whole people, will be well remembered.

WAR BILLS PASSED

Senate Also Pledges State's Resources for Prosecution of War.

Annapolis, June 19—Without a single vote against them, the Senate tonight passed finally all but two or three of the war measures that were introduced in that branch of the General Assembly. The bills passed included the following:

Providing for the suspension of legal proceedings brought by or against persons in the military service.

Providing for the suspension of judgments, etc., against persons unable to pay by reason of the war.

Suspending the statute of limitations in favor of persons absent on account of the war.

Amending the militia laws of the State.

Authorizing the Governor to declare successive legal holidays.

Providing for the registration for voting of absent soldiers and sailors.

Soldiers and Sailors' Vote bill.

The Senate also passed Senator Brown's bill suspending, during the war, the labor laws applicable to children above the age of 12 years.

Some opposition developed to the bill authorizing State institutions to acquire additional land for farm purposes, and it was made a special order for tomorrow afternoon. There are a good many Senators who think it perhaps unwise to allow the institutions to purchase additional land at this time, and it is probable even more opposition will be manifested tomorrow.

Before any measures were passed, the Senate adopted a favorable report by the Finance Committee on President Campbell's bill authorizing building and loan associations and kindred organizations to purchase Federal and State bonds.

One joint resolution was passed by the Senate. It pledges the resources of the State to the United States for the successful prosecution of the war against Germany, and commends to the sympathetic consideration of the people of Maryland the formation, upon the defeat of Germany, of a union of free nations for the preservation of permanent peace.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OAKLAND - MARYLAND

AN ESCAPED CONVICT RECAPTURED

He Was Ambling Along County Road and Was Caught by Sheriff Ashby.

William Puffenberger, of Vindex, this county, convicted and sentenced at the June Term of the Circuit Court to three years imprisonment in the Maryland State Penitentiary, who made his escape from the Jail in Oakland on last Wednesday evening by sawing through the bars protecting one of the east windows of the building, was recaptured on Saturday evening by Sheriff Ashby and returned to Jail here where he will be kept until those who assisted him in making his "get-away" are rounded up.

Puffenberger with his companion Ed. Harvey, who escaped at the same time and whose sentence was for one year in the penitentiary for forgery, went through the woods and over seldom-used trails toward his home along the Potomac river, as was thought he would do by the officers. Although a constant watch was kept upon his abiding place in the vicinity of Vindex it was impossible to locate him there. On Saturday morning Sheriff Ashby had a "hunch" that if he were to go to a point near Kitzmiller and watch a certain path leading from Shaw through the Hamill farm located a short distance above Kitzmiller on the mountain his efforts would be rewarded. Following his inclination the Sheriff hied himself away and had just reached his objective point when he saw a man crossing one of the Hamill fields. Secreting himself as best he could and at the same time not losing sight of his quarry, the officer was rewarded in a very few minutes by Puffenberger appearing upon the road just a few yards from where he had taken his stand. Allowing Puffenberger to move away the Sheriff followed at a rapid pace and soon overtook him. Puffenberger made no resistance and was soon shackeled and taken on into Kitzmiller from which point the officer and his prisoner traveled on to Oakland.

ANOTHER LOT OF RECRUITS GONE

Three More Young Men of Oakland Enlist In The Army.

Oakland has furnished three more recruits for the army, one of the young men leaving here on Tuesday evening for Baltimore, accompanying to that city Messrs. Tracy Curry, Harold Dawson, Robert Scott and Edward Kahl, whose determination to serve their country was stated in these columns last week.

The three young men who enlisted since are Robert Helbig, Fred. King and Leo Lyon, the latter two going to Baltimore last night. They expect to enter the Hospital Corps provided the ranks in this branch of the service are not yet filled.

All are splendid boys and will give a good account of themselves.

Maryland Masonic Raised $797,750 For Bonds.

The Masonic Temple Liberty Loan Committee, Baltimore, of which General Thomas J. Shryock, grand master is chairman, Friday at noon finished the work and subscribed for $797,750 of the Liberty Loan Bonds. This represents the subscriptions of the committee, and this large amount would have been greatly augmented had it not been for the fact that many Masons from all parts of the state had already subscribed heavily for bonds soon after the call was issued by the government and before the Masonic committee was appointed.

Buried Here.

The remains of Albert Lape, of Flemington, West Va., who was killed on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad near the Washington Spring crossing on last Thursday morning by being run over by a freight train, were interred in the Oakland cemetery on Friday as no one with whom the railroad company communicated appeared to claim the body.

Liberty Loan Committee Thanks The Republican.

The following letter received Saturday morning from Mr. C. T. Williams, Chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee for Maryland, is self-explanatory: To the Editor of The Republican.

MY DEAR SIR: Now that the great drive for the Liberty Loan is over, the members of the Publicity Committee for Maryland wish to tender you their most sincere and heartfelt thanks for the splendid assistance and cooperation which you have rendered them.

We feel assured that the success of the undertaking will in itself come to you as more of a tangible reward than anything we can say, but at the same time, it is only fitting that we should express to you our more than appreciation for your loyal and enthusiastic work.

Very truly yours,
C. T. WILLIAMS, Chairman,
Publicity Committee.
Baltimore, Md., June 15, 1917.

BITTINGER.

The Annual Conference of the West Virginia Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church was held in this village on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week. Every pastor in the Synod was present with the exception of four. There were also a number of laydelegates from different charges. The sermons delivered during the Conference, as well as the discussions, were very interesting. Rev. S. S. Adams, of Wheeling, W. Va., who is soon to accept a call to the Eglon, W. Va., charge was elected president of the Conference for the ensuing year.

A party of coal operators from Pittsburgh, Pa., visited this section last week and investigated the quality of the coal being mined at our local mines. There s strong indication that the development of the coal in this section will soon begin.

Mr. Keefe, of the F. A. Royster ertilizer Co., of Baltimore, Md., was a business visitor to this section a few days ago.

James Mortin, of the Morton Garage, Frostburg, was among the business visitors to this village last week, as was also County Commissioner Warnick, of Bloomington.

Clark Brenneman is now dividing his time between his Ford and a new daughter, the gift of Mr. Stork on June 15th, "Pap always smiles and his radiator biles.

COUNTY AGENT AT WORK.

Formation of a Sheep Growers Association For Garrett County.

A number of the sheep growers of Garrett county met in the Accident school house Friday afternoon, June 15, and organized the Sheep Growers Association of Garrett county, Md. The object of the association shall be the extension and development of the sheep industry in order to promote the economical growing of more and better sheep. Any sheep grower, or other person interested in the growing of sheep, may become a member of the sheep association. The idea is to form local sheep clubs in various communities throughout the county, the local clubs to be branches of the county organization. These local clubs will have regular meetings approximately once a month while the county club will meet but once a year.

The officers of the association for the coming year are: Henry M. Speicher, Pres; Joseph T. Glotfelty, vice pres.; Henry P. Miller, sec'y and treas.

The only business transaction at this meeting was pertaining to a dog law. Allegany county, Pennsylvania and the bordering West Virginia counties will have dog laws.

After careful consideration it was decided to apply for a law for this county similer to the one in Allegany county which reads thus:

The County Commissioners for Allegany county are hereby authorized, empowered and directed to collect from the person or persons or body corporate owning dogs in Allegany county, a license tax for all dogs over six months of age in said county for the fiscal year beginning on July 1, 1916, and for each and every year thereafter, in the following sums: Each female dog, $2.00; each male dog $1.00; each splayed female, $1.00, provided that any person or persons or corporation conducting a kennel, for the raising and selling of dogs shall register the same with the County Commissioners and shall pay an annual tax of Five ($5.00) Dollars for said kennel, provided all dogs are kept in said kennels, or when taken therefrom for the purpose of training shall be under the control and custody of such owner or trainer, and provided further, that when said dogs shall be allowed to leave the kennel and shall not be in the custody or under the control of said owner or trainer, then all the provisions of the hereinafter sections shall apply to the same.

The County Commissioners, upon the approval of this law, are hereby empowered and directed to formulate and carry out procedure for the collection of the said tax and for the distribution to each person or persons paying taxes, as herein provided, a metal tag or tags to be given for each dog which the license tax has been paid, with the further power to call upon any and all persons in said county to disclose the number and sex of all dogs on owned by them in Allegany county. The metal tag herein refered to shall bear the license number and fiscal year.

Any person or persons or body corporate owning, harboring, or having in their custody and control any dog or dogs who shall fail or refuse to pay the license tax provided in the preceding sections, or who shall fail or refuse to place the metal tag upon said dogs after receiving the same on or before the first day of July in each and every fiscal year, upon the arrest and conviction before a magistrate, shall pay a fine of not less than five ($5.00) dollars nor more than ten ($10.10) dollars.

It shall be lawful for any person to kill any dog even though tagged when found chasing or killing sheep, cattle or poultry upon the lands of any person other than the owner of said dogs or when found unattended and in an enclosure where sheep are kept, (except on a farm belonging to owner of said dog) or when found upon the owner's premises unattended and without a tag bearing the proper license number, and no persons shall have any right of action to recover the value of any dog killed as herein provided, from the person killing the same.

The County Commissioners of Allegany county shall pay to any person identifying by proper proof a sheep killing dog the sum of ten ($10.00) dollars, and when so identified and proved to the satisfaction of the County Commissioners shall order the said dog to be killed and no right of remuneration shall accrue to the owner of said dog. Any owner of dog, after having been duly notified by the County Commissioners to kill a sheep killing dog, who fails or refuses to do the same, soall upon arrest and conviction, be fined a sum not less than five ($5.00) dollars nor more than twenty-five ($25.00) dollars.

It shall be the duty of each and every constable in Allegany county to aid in the enforcement of the provisions of all the sections of this Act, and when any dog is killed by any constable under the provisions of this act he shall be entitled to receive from the County Commissioners, the sum of one ($1.50) dollar and fifty cents, for killing sa d dog and burving the same.

Saving Summer Foods . . . By Frederick J. Haskin

There is another way in which you can work patriotically this summer for next winter's food supply besides preserving fruits and vegetables. You can salt some fish and can as much meat and soup as your storing space will hold.

It sometimes happens that a man goes fishing and is lucky. Not often, but occasionally he may catch more fish than the family can eat at one meal, and, as a rule, the surplus goes into the garbage can—unless there is a fish-eating neighbor at hand. The government does not advocate stinginess with the neighbors, but it does advocate stinginess with the garbage can. It is your duty to the nation to salt your extra fish.

Now picture the American housewife going marketing. She buys a roast of beef, groaning inwardly as she notes the price. The butcher then inquires if she desires the bones that he has carefully removed from the roast in dressing it. She frowns, registering heavy thinking for a second, and then decides she doesn't. She never did like soup in hot weather! And so, she pays for three quarters of a pound of roast which she does not get. This is the sort of thing which has earned for us our reputation for extravagance, and it is the sort of thing which the government is trying to overcome. Every woman is admonished to can or to make into soup any spare piece of meat that cannot be used in the day's menu.

Canned roast beef, for example, is a very convenient food to have on the pantry shelf in winter. The same method is used in canning meats as in canning fruits and vegetables, only in the case of beef it must be blanched for a half hour instead of a few minutes. It should then be cut into small pieces; the gristle, bone and excessive fat removed, and then packed into jars. Gravy from the roasting pan is the best liquid in which to pack it but not liquid—concentrated to one half its volume—may also be used. After the jars are filled they should be sterilized for four hours in a homemade canning outfit or for one and a half hours in a steam-pressure kettle generating fifteen pounds pressure.

When the sterilization process is completed, remove the jars, invert to cool and test the joint, and wrap them in paper to prevent bleaching.

What applies to amateur fishing also applies to amateur hunting. If a man succeeds in killing more wild ducks than the family can eat, his wife should can them. The canning should be done as soon as possible after the fowl is killed, however. The first step is to draw the bird, wash it carefully and put it aside to cool. Then cut it into convenient sections, place in a wire basket or a cheesecloth bag and boil until the meat begins to fall away from the bones. Remove the meat from the bones and place it in the glass jars, covering it with hot liquid, after it has been concentrated one-half; add a level teaspoonful of salt to each quart of meat, and partially seal the jars. Sterilize for three and a half hours in a home-made outfit or one hour in a steam-pressure cooker generating fifteen pounds of pressure. Follow the same instructions in regard to inverting the jars and wrapping them in paper. This last procedure should never be omitted in canning any kind of product.

For a family that likes soup with its dinner, the home-made product constitutes a saving. If the lady who bought the roast at the beginning of this article had taken the bones and made soup stock out of them, adding a couple of potatoes and carrots, and had canned that soup stock, she might have had the soup for four or five meals the following winter. But you do not have to buy a roast in order to get soup materials. You can buy beef hocks, joints and bones containing marrow at a low price. Inasmuch as the canning process requires a good deal of time it is better to buy large quantities at the purchase. Ten pounds, for instance, is a good amount to buy. The first step is to strip off the fat and meat and crack with a hatchet or cleaver. The broken bones should be put in a thin cloth sack and placed in a large kettle containing two gallons of water, where they should be allowed to simmer—not boil—for six or seven hours. This should make about two gallons of stock. Sterilize forty minutes, and pack according to the same directions.

If to this soup stock you add vegetables, it makes a delicious vegetable soup. As recipe for vegetable soup, compiled by the Department of Agriculture, and used extensively in the canning clubs throughout the rural districts of the country, calls for a quarter of a pound of lima beans, one pound of rice, a half pound of pearl barley, a pound of carrots, one pound of onions, one medium sized potato, one red pepper, one-half pound of flour, four ounces of salt and five gallons of soup stock. First soak the lima beans and rice for twelve hours. Cook the barley for two hours. The rest of the vegetables should be blanched in boiling water and then dipped in cold water. Then mix all the materials together and fill the jars. Make a smooth paste of one half pound of wheat flour and stir in the soup stock, boil for three minutes and add the salt. Pour this over the vegetables and partially seal the jars. Sterilize for ninety minutes in a home-made outfit. If you use a smaller quantity of soup stock cut down the amount of vegetables accordingly.

In addition to preserving food by drying and canning, there is the salting process which is usually satisfactory only with fish and a few meats. Fresh fish are in the market all the year round at a much lower price than good cuts of meat, so that the salting of fish is probably not an important measure of economy unless you catch the fish yourself or happen to live in a coast town where fish may be bought for a very low price direct from the fishermen. In a small resort town along the Maryland coast last summer, for example, fish could be bought for a few cents as they were brought in by professional fishermen. The same fish when packed in ice and shipped to Baltimore and Washington brought eighteen or twenty cents a pound. If you can buy fresh fish at a low price and salt it for the following winter, the saving is considerable.

In regard to slender fish, such as mackerel, whiting and large herring, the directions given by the United States Bureau of Fisheries are as follows: "Split down the back to one side of the backbone for the entire length, leaving the belly walls uncut. The backbone need not be removed. Smaller fish of the same character need not be split but should be carefully eviscerated. Coarse-scaled, thick-skinned, spiny-finned fishes like black bass and perch should be skinned, and unless large and thick meated, need not be split."

After thoroughly preparing the fish, washing them in water containing a little salt and being careful to remove the blood near the backbone, they are ready for curing. A tight keg or barrel is better for this than any other kind of a container. Under no circumstances use a tin container. Place a thick layer of coarse salt on the bottom of the barrel, on the top of which spread a layer of fish one deep. Sprinkle this layer well with salt, and then add another layer of fish, and so on until the barrel is filled or until your supply of fish is exhausted. A strong brine will form from the salt and moisture of the fish, in which they should be left for a week or ten days.

They are then washed, repacked in a freshly made brine strong enough to float a fresh egg. After a week, this second brine should be drawn off and the barrel filled with a "saturated brine." This means a brine in which a few grains of salt will be seen on the bottom after a long period of stirring. When the fish are packed in this third brine and the barrel thoroughly tested for leakage, they are ready to be stored in the cellar or some very cool place.

THE DEATH RECORD.

ORLANDO FRIEND.

Orlando, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Friend, of Sang Run, died on Saturday, June 16th, aged thirteen years, after an illness of four weeks of acute Bright's disease. The funeral occurred on Monday of this week with interment in the Sang Run cemetery. The deceased is survived by his parents, five brothers and four sisters.

MRS. DORA DODGE SPORELEIN.

Mrs. Dora Dodge Spoerlein, wife of John Spoerlein and mother of a large family of devoted children, died after a few months illness at the family home near Accident, Md., Tuesday, June 5, 1917, at the age of 54 years 3 months and 13 days. She was most tenderly cared for during her illness since Feb. 14 by her husband and daughters, Sadie and Bertha, both of whom were teaching away from home but closed their schools that they might be at the bedside of their mother and render all the care to her that could possibly be given. Knowing how she lived all know she passed out of this life to enjoy a blessed future in that beautiful home prepared for all the faithful. Mrs. Spoerlein was a devoted member of the Church of the Brethren for many years. She was a kind, loving, devoted wife and mother.

The funeral services were held in the Accident church of the Brethren Friday, June 8, at 10.30 a. m. The church was filled with relatives and weeping friends. The services were conducted by Eld. Jeremiah Thomas, of Bruceton Mills, W. Va. After the funeral services she was laid to rest in the cemetery adjoining the church to await the resurection of the just. She was born near Terra Alta, W. Va., Feb. 22, 1862 and was married to Jno. Spoerlein Sept. 16, 1883. She leaves a devoted husband and twelve children to mourn her departure: Alory C., who resides on an adjoining farm; Flossie, married to C. A. Guthrie, Cranesville, W. Va.; Wm. E., of Gortner; Maude Schlossnagle, near Accident. Those at home are Frank, Sadie, Bertha, Randall, Clara, Roy, Nellie and Harley. She is also survived by seven grandchildren, two brothers and three sisters.

SENATOR SPEICHER FLOOR LEADER

Recognizing those qualities that go to make one a leader and adviser of men, the Republican members of the Legislature now in special session at Annapolis, conferred a great honor upon State Senator Harvey J. Speicher of Garrett county when they made him the floor leader of their forces. Until the election of Senator Zihlman of Allegany county as a Representative in Congress, he was the recognized leader of the Republicans at Annapolis. With the election of Senator Speicher to the position made vacant by the resignation ot Congressman Zihlman, the leadership of the Republicans is conserved to Western Maryland. In honoring Senator Speicher Garrett county is also honored.

FLY THE FLAG RIGHT.

In manifesting our unity of spirit and endeavor with our allies in the war Americans should be punctilious in placing Old Glory. This is our war. We take no secondary place because we did not enter the strite until the third year of hostilities. While we fight beside and in co-operation with the soldiers of France, Britain, Russia, Italy and the rest of the antagonists of the autocratic system, we fight primarily for ourselves. The United States has very real grievances to adjust. We are leaders, not followers. We honor the flags of our allies, but to our own flag we must give first place. That we fail to do when we place the Stars and Stripes between the flags of France and Britian. The national regulation requires that when the national emblem flies with other flags it shall be placed at the right of the line. When an American places the three flags on his house, his place of business or his automobile, Old Glory should be at the right. Placing it in the middle makes it third. Militarily the right is the place of honor and leadership. That is the place for the Stars and Stripes when arranged with other flags by an American. As our people commonly place the three America is put in the position of being supported by its allies. We do not admit that. Let everyone rearrange his flags and give Old Glory the position to which it is entitled.

THE RED CROSS APPEAL.

A great charity such as the Red Cross should not be hampered by lack of funds in the mighty task it must perform in the awful tragedy of to-day. The Red Cross knows not race or creed or color. It does the work of the Man of Sorrows, the Prince of Mercy.

You who have subscribed for bonds did so as a patriotic duty. Crown your act with the glory of giving, to the afflicted, to the wounded, to the dying, to the poor, to the hungry. Give without thought of foe or of friend, but with thought only of all who suffer.

The Red Cross needs $100,000,000 to do the biggest work of mercy in all the history of the world, of which sum Garrett county is asked to give $12,500.

It is the glorious privilege of the American people to do a noble work in a nobler way than any nation ever did before.

It is the glorious privilege of the American people to do a noble work in a nobler way than any nation ever did before.

Every great cataclysm of modern times has had a sequel which has stood a monument to the work of the Red Cross. In every great disaster that organization has ameliorated the condition of the stricken, ministered to human want and relieved human suffering. The most stupendous task that has ever confronted the organization is before it now. As an international organization it has been performing a wonderful service for the past two years in reducing the suffering and the sorrow and anguish attendant upon the European war. The problem before the American Red Cross is still only in the making.

There has been a disposition among a class of citizens to look upon the organization as made up of visionaries, and to regard its aims and objects as chimerical.

That is far from the truth. It is intensely practical. The first and most salient objective of the organization is the fulfillment of its obligation to the people at home. It has been pointed out that it is very difficult to estimate the requirements in America, but it is no exaggeration to say that they will not be over-estimated, and it will be easy to under-estimate them.

In stating that the first obligation will be at home, it will be easy for the thoughtless to gain a misconception of its mission. Home, however, will be where the greatest efforts are required. All Europe bears testimony to the fact that not all or half of the suffering and anguish brought by the war is upon the field of battle. The fighting is really the best of war, a fact to which a stricken Europe bears striking testimony.

The reaction of the struggle upon social and economic conditions and the social and economic order with which the disordered world must contend will produce for those who remain at home their greatest problem.

Disease and pestilence have gained a foothold in European countries, notably France, as the result of the commandering of the ordinary means of combatting, them, for service in the war, which no one has been able to fully describe. Not only has the spread of tuberculosis been given an impulse as the result of the conditions in the trenches but the neglect of medical attention and the impairment of sanitation and other preventive work at home has been a powerful factor in the enormous destruction.

Aside from the work which will grow here at home as the time goes on, and aside from the assistance we will giev to the Allies in this noble relief work the care of our own at the front is a problem of large dimensions.

The Red Cross begins by asking one hundred millions in the United States. It is a large sum, yet it must be forthcoming. Its failure, or the failure of the people to meet this genuine demand will have its sequel in a loss many times one hundred millions. The share of Oakland is considerable but it should be mobolized easily. With effective canvassing, the goal will be attained. It is not our business to undertake to prophesy the outcome of the canvass or to speculate upon the amount of campaigning that will be necessary. It is our purpose to emphasize the extraordinary importance of the work which has been undertaken—a work vital not only to the prosecution of the war at the front but to the conservation of our manhood and womanhood at home.

A SUBJECT NOT CALLED FOR.

Wherever the Baltimore City crowd of cute politicians can get in a word for the cause of expanding the city limits thus giving them more power in the Legislature by reason of increased representation, they do it, as witness the following taken from the columns of the Evening Times of Cumberland of last Tuesday when Mayor Preston got in his work at the Liberty Loan meeting held in that city Monday night:

Mayor Prestons injection of Baltimore city's local political issue into the Liberty Loan meeting last night was about as uncalled for as it was useless. The meeting was called for a specific purpose which had nothing whatever to do with whether parts of Baltimore and Anne Arundel counties should become a part of Baltimore city or not.

The corporate limits of Baltimore city certainly have nothing to do with government bonds or the patriotism and economic wisdom involved in a subsricption to the Liberty Loan. This question of extending the limits of the city of Baltimore is one of serious controversy among the citizens directly affected and it has been at times a matter of bitter debate that gives evidence of very narrow and selfish notions with a number of people. This is a time for everyone assuming any degree of leadership to endeavor to get citizens of every section of the State together. It is no time for bringing up questions on which people are divided. There is room for an honest difference of opinion on this subject of extending the lines of the City of Baltimore to include territory of the counties adjoining the city without the consent of the residents of those counties. The people of all sections of the State know about this controversy and there is a division of judgment on the subject. The people of the State will settle this controversy in due time when the merits of the contentions on both sides may be threshed out. For the present the State is busy on war measures and should be left to settle these without the interjection of local questions that are not now due and can bide their time without injury.

DEMONSTRATION AGENT

Agricultural Department Sends Representative to Assist Housewives.

As our country is so interested in food conservation at this time, the state has placed a Home Demonstration agent in the person of Miss Gerber, in Garrett county to help the people to use their products in the best way possible.

Much of her time will be devoted to the organization of the following clubs: Canning, gardening, sewing, etc. Food demonstrations will be given often. These demonstrations will be arranged to meet the needs of the people.

The Home Demonstration Agent is here in the interest of the housewives and young girls of the county. She will work with them and give suggestions and assistance wherever possible. Call at her office in the courthouse on Saturdays. Other days will be gladly arranged by appointment.

Notification of the dates of the various meetings in the county will appear in this paper from time to time.

Anyone wishing to communicate with her, write to Miss Frances E. Gerber, Oakland, Md.

THE DEATH RECORD.

CRAMPTON C. HARVEY.

Crampton C. Harvey, aged seventy-two years, a veteran of the Union army, died at his home in Deer Park Saturday morning after a lingering illness. He is survived by his wife, no children having been born to them. He is also survived by a large number of relatives and hosts of friends. He served valiantly throughout the War of the Rebellion. His funeral occurred Monday morning from his late home with interment in the Deer Park cemetery.

Children's Day Services.

The Pleasant Valley U. B. and the M. E. Sunday schools united in a joint Children's Day service at Pleasant Valley U. B. church last Sabbath afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. The program was elaborate and exceptionally well rendered. The rose song rendered by Misses Ula Gortner, Lillie Friend, Mary Friend, Garna Bittinger, Helen Meese and Mabel Bittinger and the octetl composed of Madams, Brown, Stoyer, M. E. Lee, Miss Friend, Messrs Brown, Lee, Harvey and Orendorf; duets Mrs. Henry Harvey, Mr. Brown, Mrs. Meese and Mrs. M. E. Lee; solo Miss Eleanor Meese were the special numbers. The committee composed of Mrs. Thad Meese, Mrs. Edna Glover, Mrs. M. E. Lee, Mrs. Henry Harvey, Miss Emma Lee and Miss Bernice Moomaw had the program in charge and the success of splendid rendering was due to their careful preparation. The great audience which the church could not hold, appreciated the service.

Mr. Sliger Injured.

Mr. R. E. Sliger, Cashier of the First National Bank of Oakland, was severely injured on last Friday afternoon when he was thrown by falling upon a rolling stone and struck his right knee. The accident occurred at a point near Albright, West Va., where Mr. Sliger was making a visit to Mr. Merritt Wilson. He was brought to Oakland late that evening and has been confined to his bed since.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Liberty Bell.

To the Editor of The Republican.

This honorable relic from the birthday of the Republic, from the incipient movement of a liberty loving people renouncing allegiance to the monarch of a far away kingdom and declaring the first time for a government deriving its rights from the consent of the governed, is still preserved and treasured as a mute but eloquent reminder of a period and of a people grand and alone in history. Think of a population less than three millions establishing its being in the uncleared forest of the western world roamed by a savage and hostile race, called by this bell for a convention at Philadelphia to state to mankind their renunciation of a foreign rule and their declaration of future freedom. The manner in which they performed these brave determinations centered upon them the attention if not the admiration of the civilized world. Not one of that day survives to relate those inspiring happenings, but the same old bell with the same old tones is speaking to us just as it spoke to patriots, to statesmen and to heroes one hundred and forty one years ago. If, as did those of that day, we listen and hear it will be well, if we fail then the glory of that former time will have faded in the degeneracy of the present time. Some of us have gazed upon this bell, high over all others in the temple of the Republic, and a few may be acquainted with facts making its history.

"Liberty Bell" formerly hung in the dome of the ancient State House, Independence Hall, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and was rung to announce the signing of the Declaration of American Independence July 4th 1776. In was cast in England especially for the mentioned State House in the Colonial period, and was brought there from its English foundry in the year 1752 for a purpose unsuspected either here or in Britain at that time. While being taken from the ship in this country it met an accident so injuring its tone that it was recast in Philadelphia in 1753, when were inscribed on the bell these Words: "Proclaim liberty throghout all the land unto all the innabitants thereof." In after years when the British army occupied Philadelphia, the bell was taken down and hidden in the Delaware river near Trenton but, upon the return of peace, was reclaimed and elevated to its original position and for years has been rung every 4th of July.

In 1835 it was broken while tolling in commeration of Chief Justice Marshall, who had just died. In 1854 it was fixed upon a pedestal of thirteen sides representing the thirteen original States in the hall of the old State House still standing on Chestnut Street just as it appeared, out side and in, when John Hancock presided over those momentous deliberations one hundred and forty one years ago.

In 1893 it again caught the public spirit and went on a tour to the World's Fair at Chicago, greeted by throngs in many cities and given ovations by masses of citizens in passing on this western visit. Since receiving such an out pouring of popular welcome at Chicago, this famous bell has, on important occasions, appeared in other cities to meet new generations proud of the opportunity to pay it tribute.

Under the erosions of time, with an overstraining of its powerful voice tolling the death of Chief Justice Marshall and an excessive vocal rejoicing upon the occasion of a visit to Philadelphia by Henry Clay, a winding and widening crack is creeping from the rim toward the middle of the bell, not only showing a distinct stream of light for eight or more inches but convincing such as look upon it that the strong voice that proclaimed to the world the birth of the Republic, is detined to suppression by the encroachment of the ages.

If taxes are paid before Sept. 1, 1917, deduct 3 per cent. off County taxes, no discount being allowed on State Tax.

N. B.—By an act of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed at the January session, 1890, being Chapter 566, it is provided that all county taxes shall be due and payable on the 1st of September succeeding the date of levy, and on all county taxes paid on or before the said day a discount of 3 per cent. shall be allowed; and after the first day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum until paid; but this discount shall not be allowed any person or corporate institution unless the whole amount of state and county taxes due be paid when the same is made.

J. W. KIMMELL,
Treasurer of Garrett County, Maryland.

Bank Strength And Good Service

OUR Management makes the security for deposits a matter of first consideration and to this end the Resources of the Bank are carefully guarded by prudence and conservatism. Reasons Why You Should Patronize this Horse.

He is an extra good individual and represents the most popular breed in the country today. His pedigree represents the best blood of his breed. His quality is unsurpassed and he has the best disposition of any stallion in the country. He transmits this disposition to his colts. He is a tried horse and a sure foal getter. His colts are easy to sell and bring good prices; they have high life, plenty of vim, but are easy to handle. He will stay here and give you a chance to breed to him again.

We will exercise the greatest care in handling mares, but will not be responsible for accidents.

Will stand for the season of 1917, until July 1, at the following places: Hutton, at M. G. Mellot's, Mondays and Tuesdays of each week, beginning April 23rd and 24th. M Henry, at Jonas Glotfelty's, Wednesday and Thursday of each week. Oakland, at the Fair Grounds, Friday and Saturday of each week.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

OF VALUABLE

Coal AND Timber Property

In Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Clarendon M. Lewis and Mary B. Lewis, his wife, to Marcus A. Patrick, dated the 6th day of February, 1907, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 35, folio 550, one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having been made in the principal sum and the interest secured to be paid by said mortgage, I, Taylor Morrison, attorney named in said mortgage for the purpose, will, on at 10:30 o'clock a. m., or immediately following the sale of the Jamesson and Lewis coal and timber lands, in front of the First National Bank in Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, sell at public auction to the highest bidder all the coal and other minerals, natural gas and oil underlying, and all timber, except locust and chestnut, located upon all those certain pieces or parcels of land situated, lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, and which are particularly described as follows, viz:

All that tract of land known as "McGirrs Homestead," which is composed of parts of the following tracts, known as "Novazembla," "Brady's Defeat," and "McGirrtan," containing One Hundred acres, more or less; and also all the mining rights and privileges granted and conveyed to the said Clarendon M. Lewis, and owned by him by virtue of the deed conveying said property and rights to him from Norman Barnard and Mary Barnard, his wife, dated on the 23rd day of July, 1900, and recorded among the Land Records of Garrett county in Liber E. Z. T., No. 38, folio 537.

The timber on this land is said to be very valuable and the various beds or seams of coal underlying it to be of excellent quality. The property is accessible to the Western Maryland Railroad, and with the Jamesson and Lewis coal and timber to be sold on the above date at ten o'clock, comprises a valuable coal and timber field and presents a rare opportunity to purchase a very valuable property.

TERMS OF SALE: Cash on the day of sale as provided by said mortgage.

POTATO CROP MUST BE PROTECTED

SPRAYING FOR THE HARMFUL INSECTS AND DISEASES RECOMMENDED.

IS INEXPENSIVE INSURANCE

County Demonstration Agents Should Be Consulted In Preparing Mixtures.

College Park, May 24.—Since many Maryland farmers are responding to the call for more food by planting large fields of Irish potatoes, it is most important that protection against insects and diseases be insured. In instructions furnished to the members of the boys' agricultural clubs who are growing potatoes, S. B. Shaw, specialist in horticulture for the Maryland Agricultural Extension Service, urges them to protect their crops against disease and insect attack. He says:

"The careful selection of healthy seed potatoes will aid materially in the control of diseases, but spraying is necessary as a preventive measure. This is particularly true in regard to the control of Late Blight, which so seriously affects not only the plants, but also the tubers. Since this disease develops rapidly, under favorable weather conditions, it is advisable to begin spraying before it begins to appear. The lower leaves of the plants are first infected and from them the disease gradually spreads over the foliage until the tops are killed.

Preventing Late Blight.

"A combination of copper sulphate (blue stone), stone lime and water, commonly called Bordeaux Mixture, can best be used in spraying potato plants for the prevention of disease. Use in the proportions of four pounds of copper sulphate, four pounds of lime and fifty gallons of water. To dissolve the copper sulphate, place the crystals in a cloth sack and suspend it in a wooden or earthen vessel filled with water. The crystals will not dissolve quickly if put in the bottom of the vessel. Slake the lime and add enough water to equal the blue stone solution.

"A convenient way to prepare Bordeaux Mixture in small quantities is to dissolve the four pounds of blue stone in five gallons of water. Slake the four pounds of lime and add an equal amount of water. When ready to apply the material take one gallon of the blue stone solution and one gallon of the lime solution and strain them together into a convenient vessel holding at least ten gallons. Add to this combination eight gallons of water, thus making ten gallons of spray solution. This amount should be enough for one-tenth of an acre.

Killing Potato Bugs.

"The Colorado potato beetle and the flea beetle are perhaps the most injurious insects affecting the potato crop. These beetles appear when the plants are quite small and unless proper means are taken for their control, they entirely destroy the foliage of the young, tender plants. Fortunately for the potato grower, both insects and disease may be controlled by a combination spray. This is made by adding Arsenate of Lead to the Bordeaux Mixture. Use this material at the rate of one and one-half pounds of Arsenate of Lead Powder or three pounds of Arsenate of Lead Paste to the fifty gallons of Bordeaux. This would be about five ounces of the powder or ten ounces of the paste to ten gallons of solution. On account of unusual war conditions it may be hard to secure copper sulphate at a reasonable price. Several Bordeaux Arsenate spray compounds are being manufactured by different firms under various trade names. These preparations can be used to good advantage in spraying potatoes. It is suggested that the County Demonstration Agents be consulted in regard to securing and applying spray materials, not only for potatoes, but for other fruit and vegetable crops. They can give valuable information that may save money for the grower and be a means for securing larger yields."

OPPORTUNITY FOR BEEKEEPERS.

College Park, May 24.—In a letter to Maryland beekeepers, G. H. Cale, of the Maryland Agricultural Extension Service, calls attention to the importance of the production of honey in view of the threatened shortage of our sugar supply. Mr. Cale says:

"In spite of favorable factors, only a small fraction of the honey consumed in the State, even in normal times, is produced by Maryland beekeepers. In fact the condition of the beekeeping industry in the State, as a whole, is latent and capable of a great development.

"With a little advertising most of the honey produced can be easily sold on home markets, and there is consequently small need to sell the crop to wholesalers. The larger producers, however, by application to the to the Office of Markets of the United States Department of Agriculture may this year secure honey market reports to be issued in May, July, September and November, upon which they may rely for prices and markets.

"Here, then, is an opportunty for the beekeeper to do his bit for his country and at the same time increase his business in such a way as to make it of lasting benefit to himself.

He is an extra good individual and represents the most popular breed in the country today. His pedigree represents the best blood of his breed. His quality is unsurpassed and he has the best disposition of any stallion in the country. He transmits this disposition to his colts. He is a tried horse and a sure foal getter. His colts are easy to sell and bring good prices; they have high life, plenty of vim, but are easy to handle. He will stay here and give you a chance to breed to him again.

We will exercise the greatest care in handling mares, but will not be responsible for accidents.

Will stand for the season of 1917, until July 1, at the following places: Hutton, at M. G. Mellot's, Mondays and Tuesdays of each week, beginning April 23rd and 24th. McHenry, at Jonas Glotfelty's, Wednesday and Thursday of each week. Oakland, at the Fair Grounds, Friday and Saturday of each week.

TERMS—To insure a mare with foal, $12.00.

Blaine Mining Company, a corporation; Eliza Bowie Mackall, and the unknown heirs-at-law of Robert Swan, deceased, son of Robert Swan, deceased, and grandson of General John Swan, deceased, defendants.

No. 2125 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of Military Lot No. 288, situate in Garrett County, Maryland, and for a distribution of the proceeds thereof among the parties to this cause according to their respective rights and interests therein.

The bill states that General John Swan in his lifetime and at the time of his death was seized in fee of Military Lot No. 288 containing fifty acres, more or less, situate in Allegany, now Garrett county, Maryland, to which he acquired title by deed from Thomas Rutter, United States Marshal for the district of Maryland, by deed dated February 7, 1835, recorded in Liber G. No. 4 among the Land Records of said Allegany county, a copy of which deed is filed with the bill marked "Plaintiffs' Exhibit No. 1," and which, with all other exhibits hereinafter referred to and filed herewith, is prayed to be taken and considered as a part of this bill of complaint; and that being so seized, the said Gen. John Swan, died in the year 1851, leaving a last will, whereby he devised certain of his property therein mentioned to the legatees and devisees therein named, and whereby his four sons, to-wit: John Swan; James Swan; Robert Swan and George Maxwell Swan, as residuary devisees, acquired title to said Military Lot No. 288, a copy of said will being exhibited with the bill; that John Swan, son of Gen. John Swan, died intestate about the year 1881, unmarried, without issue, leaving surviving him as his only heirs at law his three brothers above named, who, thereafter, were each entitled to an undivided ⅓ interest in said Military Lot No. 288; that James Swan, son of Gen. John Swan, died about the year 1859, testate, a copy of his last will being exhibited with the bill, whereby he devised his undivided ⅓ interest in said Lot to his son, John Swan, ⅓ to his daughter, Anna Elizabeth, ⅓, and to the children of his deceased daughter, Ellen, ⅓; that subsequently, by deed dated June 25, 1877, the heirs and devisees of said James Swan conveyed their undivided ⅓ interest in said Lot to Manor Mining & Manufacturing Company, and that by deed dated December 17, 1906, said Manor Mining & Manufacturing Company conveyed all its interest in said Lot to Thomas B. Davis, Jr., and Joseph E. Davis, and by deed dated September 20, 1915, said Thomas B. Davis, Jr., and Joseph E. Davis conveyed all their interest in said Lot to the defendant, Blaine Mining Company, whereby said defendant acquired an undivided ⅔ interest in said Military Lot No. 288, copies of said deed being filed with the bill as exhibits in this cause; that Robert Swan, son of General John Swan, departed this life about the year 1835, leaving a will whereby all his property was left in trust to the trustees therein named for the use and benefit of his widow, long since deceased, and his three sons, John, Charles and Robert, a copy of said will being exhibited with the bill; that the said Charles Swan died intestate, unmarried and without issue, about the year 1850; that the said Robert Swan, son of Robert, died intestate about the year 1850, leaving a widow, Kate Swan, now deceased, and a daughter, Willie Swan, who died about the year 1901, leaving a will whereby Christiana S. MacKenzie asher residuary devisee, became entitled to the interest of the said Willie Swan in said Lot, to-wit an undivided 1-6 thereof, and that the said Christiana S. MacKenzie died about the year 1906 leaving a will, whereby her daughter Eliza Bowie Mackall, one of the defendants to this suit, as her residuary devisee, became entitled to said one undivided 1-6 interest in said Military Lot No. 288, copies of the wills of said Willie Swan and Christiana S. MacKenzie being exhibited with the bill; that the above named Robert Swan, son of Robert, and grandson of General John Swan, many years ago removed to the State of California, and their died, but whether testate or intestate, married or unmarried, is to the plaintiffs unknown, entitled to an undivided 1-6 interest in said Lot, his unknown heirs at law being defendants in this case; that George Maxwell Swan, son of General John Swan, died about the year 1845, intestate, leaving as his sole heir at law a daughter, Mary E. F. Swan, who became the wife of Alexander C. Good, and died in the year 1895, leaving a will whereby she devised all her property to her husband, the said Alexander C. Good; that the said Alexander C. Good died about the year 1905, intestate, leaving surviving him, as his only heirs at law a son, Maxwell S. Good; a daughter, Jessie B. Reveley, intermarried with Albert S. Reveley, and a daughter, Mary Lamar Sloan, widow of David W. Sloan who died on the 30th day of December, 1904, leaving surviving her as her heirs at law a daughter, Margaret M. Sloan, unmarried and of full age; a daughter, Frances Swan Brady, of full age, intermarried with Hugh S. Brady; a son, David W. Sloan, Jr., under the age of 21 years, and a son, Alexander Maxwell Sloan, under the age of 21 years, both of whom sue by their guardian and next friend, D. Lindley Sloan, the said Maxwell S. Good, Jessie B. Reveley, Margaret M. Sloan, Frances Swan Brady, David W. Sloan, Jr., and Alexander Maxwell Sloan, the plaintiffs in this case, having a one undivided one-third interest in and to said Military Lot No. 288, a copy of the will of said Mary E. F. Good being exhibited with the bill.

The bill further charges, that the said Military Lot No. 288, located in Garrett County, Maryland, is not susceptible of partition among the parties interested therein, without material loss and injury, and that it will be for the benefit and advantage of all the parties interested therein, and especially to the interest of said infant plaintiffs to have the said property sold and the proceeds distributed to the parties to this suit, according to their respective rights and interests therein, and then prays for a decree for the sale of said land, and for general relief, for process against the resident defendant, Eliza Bowie Mackall, and for an order of publication against Blaine Mining Company, a corporation, non-resident of the State of Maryland, and also against the unknown heirs-at-law of Robert Swan, deceased, and grandson of General John Swan, deceased, who are non-residents of the State of Maryland, giving them notice of the object and substance of this bill of complaint, and warning them to be and appear in this Court, either in person or by solicitor upon a day certain to be named therein, and answer the premises, and abide by and perform such decree as may be passed thereon.

It is thereupon, this 30th day of May, 1917, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, ordered that the plaintiffs by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett County, Maryland, once in each of four successive weeks before the 30th day of June, 1917, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 16th day of July, next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not be passed as prayed.

The Secrets of the Hohenzollerns

STARTLING EXPOSURE OF INNER LIFE OF KAISER AND CROWN PRINCE AS TOLD BY COUNT ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX

THE TRAGEDY OF THE LEUTENBERGS

How the Kaiser and His Heir Conspired for the Undoing of the Beautiful English Wife of a Member of the German Nobility.

A LETTER FROM THE CROWN PRINCE'S PERSONAL ADJUTANT TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX, POSSESSOR OF THE SECRETS OF EUROPE.

Veneux Nadon,
par Moret-sur-Loing,
Seine-et-Marne,
February 10th, 1917.

My dear LeQueux:

I have just finished reading the proofs of your articles describing my life as an official at the imperial court at Potsdam, and the two or three small errors you made I have duly corrected.

The gross scandals and wily intrigues which I have related to you were many of them known to yourself, for, as the intimate friend of Luisa, the ex-crown princess of Saxony, you were, before the war, closely associated with many of those at court whose names appear in these articles.

The revelations which I have made, and which you have recorded here, are but a tithe of the disclosures which I could make, and if the world desires more, I shall be pleased to furnish you with other and even more startling details, which you may also put into print.

My service as personal adjutant to the German crown prince is, happily, at an end, and now, with the treachery of Germany against civilization glaringly revealed, I feel, in my retirement, no compunction in exposing all I know concerning the secrets of the kaiser and his son.

With most cordial greetings from
Your sincere friend,
(Signed) ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF.

EDITORIAL NOTE. — William LeQueux, who here chronicles for his friend, Count Ernst von Heltzendorff, the latter's revelations of the inner life of the imperial German court, has long been recognized throughout Europe as the possessor of its innermost secrets.

The English "Who's Who" says of him: "He has intimate knowledge of the secret service of Continental countries and is considered by the government (of Great Britain) an authority on such matters." Another authority says: "Few people have been more closely associated with or know more of the astounding inner machinery of Germany than he."

LeQueux probably has more sources of secret information at his command than any contemporary in civil life, and for the last six years the British Government has made valuable use of his vast store of secret information through a specially orgnized department with which LeQueux works as a voluntary assistant.

Count von Heltzendorff became an intimate of LeQueux several years prior to the outbreak of the war; he has been living in retirement in France since August, 1914, and it was there that LeQueux received from the crown prince's late personal adjutant permission to make public these revelations of the inner life of the Hohenzollerns—that the democracies of the world might come to know the real, but heretofore hidden, personalities of the two dominant members of the autocracy it is now arrayed against.

ON AUGUST 5, 1914, I shook the dust of Berlin from my feet, crossed the French frontier, and have since resided in the comfortable old-fashioned country house which you assisted me to purchase on the border of the lovely forest of Fontainebleau.

And now, you have asked me to reveal to you some of the secrets of Potsdam—secrets known to me by reason of my official position before the war.

You are persuading me to disclose some facts concerning the public and private life of the emperor, of my imperial master, the crown prince, known in his intimate circles as "Willie," and of the handsome but long-suffering Cecil, duchess of Mecklenburg, who married him ten years ago, and became known as "Cilli." Phew! Poor woman! She has experienced ten years of misery, domestic unhappiness, by which she has become prematurely aged, deep-eyed, her countenance at times when we talked wearing an almost tragic look.

A Strange, Inexplicable Affair.

In the early days of 1912 I found myself, as the personal adjutant of his imperial highness the crown prince, involved in a very strange, even inexplicable affair.

The drama opened in the emperor's palace in Berlin on New Year's night, 1912, when, as usual, a grand court reception was held.

In the famous White salon, with its ceilings gaudily emblazoned with the arms of the Hohenzollerns as burgraves, electors, kings, emperors, and what-not, its walls of colored marble and gilded bronze, and its fine statues of the Prussian rulers, we had all assembled and were waiting the entrance of the emperor.

Of a sudden the tap of the chamberlain's stick was heard thrice, the gold-and-white doors instantly fell open, and the emperor, his decorations gleaming beneath the myriad lights, smilingly entered with his waddling consort, the crown prince, and their brilliant suite.

The Cause of the Kaiser's Annoyance.

All of us bowed low in homage, but as we did so I saw the shrewd eyes of the "all-highest one," which nothing escapes, fixed upon a woman who stood close to my elbow. As he fixed his fierce gaze upon her, I saw, knowing that glance as I did, that it spoke volumes. Hitherto I had not noticed the lady, for she was probably one of those unimportant persons who are commanded to a grand court, wives and daughters of military nobodies, of whom we at the palace never took the trouble to inquire so long as their gilt command-cards, issued by the grand chamberlain, were in proper order.

That slight contraction of the emperor's eyebrows caused me to ponder deep, for, knowing him so intimately, I saw that he was intensely annoyed.

For what reason? I was much mystified.

Naturally I turned to glance at the woman whose presence had so irritated him. She was fair-haired, blue eyed, petite and pretty. Her age was about twenty-five, and she was extremely good-looking. Beside her stood a big, fair-haired giant in the uniform of a captain of the First regiment of the Hussars of the Guard, of which the crown prince was colonel in chief.

Within a quarter of an hour I discovered that the officer was Count George von Leutenberg, and that his pretty wife, whom he had married two years before, was the eldest daughter of an English financier who had been created a baron by Great Britain's rule-of-thumb politicians.

An Interview With the Crown Prince.

Next day, just before noon, on entering the crown prince's private cabinet, I found "Willie" in the uniform of the Second Grenadiers, apparently awaiting me in that cozy apartment, which is crammed with effigies, statuettes, and relics of the great Napoleon, whom he worships just as the war lord reveres his famous ancestor, Frederick the Great.

"Sit down, Heltzendorff," said his elegant highness, waving his white, well-manicured hand to a chair near by, and puffing at his cigarette. "It is really pleasant to have an hour's rest!" he laughed, for he seemed in merry mood that day. "Look here! Do you happen to know Count Georg von Leutenberg, of the Hussars of the Guard?"

"By sight only," was my reply.

"He is a very good fellow, I understand. Do you know his wife—a pretty little Englishwoman?"

"Unfortunately, I have not that pleasure."

"Neither have I, Heltzendorff. But I soon shall know her, I expect. In that direction I want your assistance."

"I am yours for your highness to command," I replied, puzzled to know what was in progress. After a few seconds of silence the crown prince suddenly exclaimed:

"So good is the report of Von Leutenberg that has reached the emperor that—though he is as yet in ignorance of the fact—he has been promoted to the rank of major, and ordered upon a foreign mission—as military attache in London. He will leave Berlin tonight to take up his new post."

"And the countess?"

"By a secret report I happen to have here it is shown that they are a most devoted pair," he said, glancing at a sheet of buff paper upon which was typed a report—one which I recognized as emanating from the secret bureau of the Polizei-Prasidium, in Alexander Platz. "They live in the Lennestrasse, No. 44, facing the Tiergarten. Note the address."

A Sudden Promotion to London.

Then his highness paused, and, rising, crossed to the big writing-table set in the window, and there examined another report. Afterward, glancing at the pretty buhl clock opposite, he suddenly said:

"The count should call here now. I have sent informing him of the emperor's good will, and ordering him to report here to take leave of me as his colonel in chief."

Scarcely had he spoken when Count von Leutenberg was announced by a flunkey in pink silk stockings, and a moment later the tall officer clicked his heels together and saluted smartly on the threshold.

"I thought you would be pleased at your well-merited promotion," said his highness in quite a genial tone. "The emperor wishes you to leave for London by the ten o'clock express for Flushing tonight, so as to report to his excellency the ambassador before he departs on leave. Hence the urgency. The countess, of course, will remain in Berlin. You will, naturally, wish for time to make your arrangements in London and dispose of your house here."

And with those words the major was dismissed.

"A charming man!" remarked the prince, after the door had closed.

"Heltzendorff," he exclaimed a few moments later, after he had reflected deeply between the whiffs of his cigarette. "Heltzendorff, I wish you to become acquainted with the Countess von Leutenberg, and you must afterward introduce me. I have a fixed and distinct reason. I could obtain the assistance of others, but I trust you only."

"But I do not know the lady," I protested, for I had no desire whatsoever to become implicated in any double-dealing.

"Hohenstein knows her well. I will see that he introduces you," replied the kaiser's son. "She's uncommonly pretty, so mind you don't fall in love with her! I've heard, too, that Count George is a highly jealous person, but, fortunately, he will be very busy writing secret reports at Carlton House Terrace. So go and see Hohenstein at once, and get him to introduce you to the pretty little Englishwoman. But, remember, not a word of this conversation is to be breathed to a single soul."

"His Majesty Only Gives Reward When It Is Due."

What did it all mean? Why had the emperor singled out for advancement the husband of the woman, the sight of whom had so greatly annoyed him? I confess that I became more than ever puzzled over the curious affair.

Within a week, however, thanks to the introduction of Hohenstein, I had dined at Count von Leutenberg's pretty house in the Lennestrasse in a fine room, the long windows of which commanded a delightful view over the Tiergarten and the Siegesallee.

The countess, extremely charming and refined, having the misfortune of being English, had not been taken up warmly by Berlin society. She was, I found, a most delightful hostess. The party included Laroque, the elegant first secretary of the French embassy, and his Parisian wife, together with Baron Hoffmann, the burly, round-faced minister of the interior, and Doctor Paulssen, under-secretary at the colonial office. Hohenstein was, however, not here, as he had been suddenly dispatched by the emperor upon a mission to Corfu.

At the table the talk ran upon Leutenberg's sudden promotion, whereupon the Minister Hoffmann declared:

"His majesty only gives reward when it is due. When he discerns talent he is never mistaken."

A week later the crown prince had returned from a surprise visit the kaiser had made to Stettin. The emperor had played his old game of rousing the garrison in the middle of the night, and then laughing at the ludicrous figures cut by his pompous generals and colonels rushing about in their night attire eager to greet their sovereign.

I was in the prince's private room arranging the details of a military program at Potsdam on the following day when he suddenly entered and exclaimed:

"Well, Heltzendorff, and how are you proceeding in the Lennestrasse, eh?" and he looked at me with those crafty eyes of his. "I hear you were at the house last night."

I started. Was I being watched? It was quite true that I had called on the previous evening, and, finding the countess alone, had sat in her pretty drawing-room enjoying a long and delightful chat with her.

"Yes. I called there," I admitted. "The count is returning from London next week to take his wife back with him."

A Visit From Count Zeppelin.

The crown prince smiled mysteriously, and critically examined the curious snake ring which he always wears upon the little finger of his left hand.

"We need not anticipate that, I think. Kiderlen will not grant him leave. He is far better in Carlton House Terrace than in the Lennestrasse."

"I hardly follow your highness," I remarked.

"H'm. Probably not, my dear count," he laughed. "I do not intend that you should."

And with that mysterious remark he turned to meet Count von Zeppelin, the round-faced snow-haired, somewhat florid inventor, who was one of his highness' most intimate friends, and who had at that moment entered unannounced. Zeppelin was a character in Berlin. He sought no friends, no advertisement, and shunned notoriety.

"Ha, my dear Ferdinand!" cried the prince, shaking the hand of the man who so suddenly became world-famous at the age of seventy. "You have traveled from Stuttgart to see me—unwell as you are! It is an honor. But the matter is one of greatest urgency, as I have already written to you. I want to show you the correspondence and seek your advice," and the prince invited his white-haired friend to the big, carved arm-chair beside his writing-table. Then, turning to me, he said:

"Will you see Von Glasenapp for me, and hand him those orders for Posen? He must leave tonight. The general court-martial at Stendal I have fixed for the 25th. I shall be with the emperor this afternoon. Report here at seven tonight—understand?"

Thus was I dismissed, while his imperial highness and Count Zeppelin sat together in secret counsel.

A Startling Discovery.

At ten minutes to seven that evening I unlocked the crown prince's room with the key I carried, the other two keys being in the hands of the crown princess and her husband. I had placed upon the table a bundle of reports which had just been brought round from the ministry of war, and required that scribbly signature, "Wilhelm Kronprinz," when I noticed three private letters that had evidently been placed aside. The envelopes were addressed in a thin, angular, female hand, and bore an English address. I noted it. The name on each was that of a lady residing in Aylesbury avenue, Hampstead, London. The letters bore German stamps. In keen curiosity, I took one and examined it, wondering whether it could be the correspondence which the crown prince had been so eager to show Count von Zeppelin in secret.

I drew the letter from the envelope and scanned it rapidly.

What I read caused me to hold my breath. The signature to the letters was "Enid von Leutenberg."

Those letters of hers had, it was plain, been seized in the post on their way to London. The countess either had a traitor in her household or secret watch was being kept by the secret service upon her correspondence.

All three of those letters I read—letters which opened my eyes and broadened my mind. Then, taking up my bundle of reports, I crept away from the room, carefully re-latching the door. I intended that his highness should return, discover the letters left there inadvertently, and put them away ere my arrival, in which case he would never suspect that I had any knowledge of their contents.

With the papers in my hand I passed along the many carpeted corridors to the south wing of the palace, where I found Tresternitz, marshal of the prince's court, in his room.

The crown prince imitated his father's sharp punctuality, therefore I knew that he would be there at seven or soon afterward.

Tresternitz was always full of scandal concerning those who lived in the higher circles of Berlin, and it was to one of these stories of court scandal concerning one of the ladies-in-waiting which I listened while I smoked one of his excellent Russian cigarettes.

Then, glancing at the clock, I rose suddenly and left him, returning again to the private room.

I found his highness there, and as I entered I noticed that he had hidden those remarkable letters which he had in secret shown to Count Zeppelin.

"You Will Introduce Me to Your Pretty Friend."

A fortnight went past. The kaiser, with his mad love of constant travel, had been rushing up and down the empire—to Krupp's at Essen, to the trials of a newly invented howitzer, thence to an inspection at Kassel, and afterward to unveil monuments at Cologne and at Erfurt. The crown prince and princess had accompanied him, the kaiserin being indisposed, and I, of course, had been included in "Willie's" suite.

The week had been a strenuous one of train travel, luncheons, tiring dinners, receptions, dancing, and general junketings, and I was glad enough to get back to my bachelor rooms—those rooms in the Krausenstrasse that you knew so well before the bursting of the war cloud. To dance attendance upon an imperial crown prince, as well as upon an autocratic emperor, becomes after a time a wearisome business, however gay and cosmopolitan a man may be.

I had only been at home a few hours when a telephone message summoned me at five o'clock to the crown prince's palace.

His imperial highness, who had, I knew, been lunching with the emperor at the Konigliches Schloss across the bridge, seemed unusually serious and thoughtful. Perhaps the emperor had again shown his anger at his peccadilloes, as he did so frequently.

"Count," he said, after a few seconds of silence, during which I noted that upon his table lay a private letter from the German ambassador in London, "You will recall my conversation regarding the Countess von Leutenberg—eh?"

"Perfectly," was my reply.

"I told you that I should require you to introduce me," he said. "Well, I want you to do so this evening. She has taken a box at the Konigliche Opera tonight, where they are to play 'Falstaff.' I shall be there, and you will be with me. Then you will introduce me to your pretty friend. Understand?"

A Puzzling Sentence.

That night, in accordance with my instructions, I sat in the emperor's box with the crown prince, Tresternitz, and two personal adjutants, and, recognizing the Countess von Leutenberg in a box opposite, accompanied by an elderly lady, I took the crown prince round, and there presented her to him, greatly to her surprise and undisguised delight.

The prince and the countess chatted together, while I sat with her elderly companion. Then, when we had withdrawn, my imperial master exclaimed:

"Ah! my dear Heltzendorff. Why, she is one of the prettiest women in all Berlin! Surely it is unfortunate—most unfortunate."

What was unfortunate? I was further puzzled by that last sentence, yet I dare not ask any explanation, and we went back to our own box.

After our return to the palace the crown prince, who was standing in one of the corridors talking with the slim, fair-haired Baroness von Wedel, one of his wife's ladies-in-waiting, left her and beckoned me into an adjoining room.

"I wish you, Heltzendorff, to call upon the Countess von Leutenberg at nine o'clock tomorrow evening. She will expect you."

I looked at his highness, much puzzled. How did he know that the pretty countess would expect me?

But he gave me no time to reply, merely turning upon his heel, and striding down the corridor to the private apartments.

"You Are Witness He Has Drawn His Sword Upon the Heir to the Throne."

Punctually at nine o'clock that wintry evening I called at the Lennestrasse, but Josef, the elderly manservant, informed me that his mistress was engaged, adding that his imperial highness the crown prince had paid a surprise call.

"The crown prince here!" I gasped, astounded.

"Yes, count. And, further, my mistress is in high glee, for my master returned this morning quite unexpectedly from London. He has been out at the ministry for foreign affairs all the evening, and I expect him home at any moment. The crown prince ordered me to ask you to wait him here."

Count von Leutenberg in Berlin! What did it mean? He was absurdly jealous, I recollected. He might return at any moment and find the crown prince alone in the countess' drawing-room. If so, the situation might certainly be a most unpleasant one.

Hardly had the thought crossed my mind when I heard the count enter, his spurs clinking and his saber rattling as he strode up the stairs.

I crept forth, listening breathlessly.

A few seconds later I heard the count's voice raised in anger and high, bitter words. Next moment I sprang up the stairs and, dashing into the room, found the pretty countess standing near the window, white and rigid as a statue, while the two men in uniform faced each other. Von Leutenberg's countenance was distorted with rage as he abused the crown prince, and openly charged him with having brought about his exile to London.

His highness made no reply, but only smiled sarcastically and shrugged his narrow shoulders.

So enraged the other became at this latter gesture that, with a sudden movement, he drew his sword.

The countess shrieked and swooned as I sprang forward and stayed her husband's hand.

It was a dramatic moment. The count instantly realized the enormity of his crime, and his hand dropped.

"Enough!" cried the crown prince, waving his adversary aside. Then, turning to me, he said in a calm, hard voice:

"Heltzendorff, you are witness that this man has drawn his sword upon the heir to the throne."

And with those haughty words he bowed stiffly and strode out of the room.

A Message From the Emperor.

Two hours later I was commanded to the kaiser's presence, and found him in counsel with his son.

The emperor, who wore the uniform of the guards, looked pale and troubled, yet in his eyes there was a keen, determined look. As I passed the sentries and entered the lofty study, with its upholstery and walls of pale green damask—that room from which the empire and the whole world have so often been addressed—the kaiser broke off short in his conversation.

Turning to me as he still sat at his littered table, he said in that quick, impetuous way of his:

"Count Heltzendorff, the crown prince has informed me of what has occurred this evening in the Lennestrasse. I wish you to convey this at once to Count von Leutenberg and to give it into his own hand. There is no reply."

And his majesty handed me a rather bulky envelope addressed in his own bold handwriting, and bearing his own private cipher impressed in black wax.

Thus commanded, I bowed, withdrew, and took a taxicab straight to the Lennestrasse, being ushered by Josef into the presence of husband and wife in that same room I had quitted a couple of hours before.

I handed the count the packet the emperor had given me, and with trembling fingers he tore it open.

From within he drew three letters, those same letters which his wife had written to London, and which had been intercepted by the secret service—the letters which I had read in his highness' room.

As he scanned the lines which the emperor had penned his face blanched. A loud cry of dismay escaped his wife as she recognized her own letters, and she snatched the note from her husband's hand and also read it.

"Tell His Majesty His Command Shall Be Obeyed."

The light died instantly from her beautiful countenance. Then, turning to me, she said in a hoarse, hopeless tone:

"Thank you, Count von Heltzendorff. Tell his majesty the emperor, that his command shall be—yes, it shall be obeyed."

Those last words she spoke in a deep, hoarse whisper, a strange, wild look of desperation in her blue eyes.

An hour later I reported again at the imperial palace, was granted audience of the emperor, and gave him the verbal reply.

His majesty uttered no word, merely nodding his head slowly in approval.

Next afternoon a painful sensation was caused throughout Berlin when the "Abendpost" published the news that Count von Leutenberg, the man so recently promoted by the emperor, and his pretty wife had both been found dead in their room. During the night they had evidently burned some papers, for the tinder was found in the stove, and having agreed to die together, they being so much attached during life, they had both taken prussic acid in some wine, the bottle and half-emptied glasses being still upon the table.

The romantic affair, the truth of which I here reveal for the first time, was regarded by all Berlin as an inexplicable tragedy. The public are still unaware of how those intercepted letters contained serious warnings to the British government of the emperor's hostile intentions towards Britain, and the probable date of the outbreak of war. Indeed, they recounted a private conversation which the countess had overheard between the kaiser and Count Zeppelin, repeating certain opprobrious epithets which the all-highest had bestowed upon one or two British statesmen, and she also pointed out the great danger of a pending rupture between the two powers, as well as explaining some details, regarding the improved Zeppelins in course of construction secretly on Lake Constance, and certain scandals regarding the private life of the crown prince.

Thus the well meant warnings of an honest Englishwoman never reached the unsuspicious address to which they were sent, and thus did "Willie"—who, as I afterward discovered, devised that subtle vengeance—act as the emperor's catspaw.

Photographs With Bubble Background.

Professor Boys of England, experimenting with bubbles, obtained some very large ones, which in the sunshine changed colors so beautifully that he conceived the idea of using them as backgrounds for photographs.

These large bubbles were blown with an ordinary bellows, says the Popular Science Monthly. The soap solution was heated and a large-mounted funnel was dipped into it. The bellows, connected with the funnel, was then worked very gently. Bubbles with as great a circumference as two and a half feet were easily obtained.

Newfoundland Dogs.

A reliable authority states that originally the colors of the Newfoundland dog were red, brown, brown and white, bronze, red and white, and black and white; but these have given place to two orthodox colors—black (which is generally preferred), or black and white. The famous English artist, Landseer, in his celebrated picture, "A Member of the Royal Humane Society," painted a specimen of the latter colors, and hence the black and white are sometimes called "Landseer Newfoundlands."

The Secrets of the Hohenzollerns

STARTLING EXPOSURE OF INNER LIFE OF KAISER AND CROWN PRINCE AS TOLD BY COUNT ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX

THE TRAGEDY OF THE LEUTENBERGS

How the Kaiser and His Heir Conspired for the Undoing of the Beautiful English Wife of a Member of the German Nobility.

A LETTER FROM THE CROWN PRINCE'S PERSONAL ADJUTANT TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX, POSSESSOR OF THE SECRETS OF EUROPE.

Veneux Nadon,
par Moret-sur-Loing,
Seine-et-Marne,
February 10th, 1917.

My dear LeQueux:

I have just finished reading the proofs of your articles describing my life as an official at the imperial court at Potsdam, and the two or three small errors you made I have duly corrected.

The gross scandals and wily intrigues which I have related to you were many of them known to yourself, for, as the intimate friend of Luisa, the ex-crown princess of Saxony, you were, before the war, closely associated with many of those at court whose names appear in these articles.

The revelations which I have made, and which you have recorded here, are but a tithe of the disclosures which I could make, and if the world desires more, I shall be pleased to furnish you with other and even more startling details, which you may also put into print.

My service as personal adjutant to the German crown prince is, happily, at an end, and now, with the treachery of Germany against civilization glaringly revealed, I feel, in my retirement, no compunction in exposing all I know concerning the secrets of the kaiser and his son.

With most cordial greetings from

Your sincere friend,

(Signed) ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF.

EDITORIAL NOTE. — William LeQueux, who here chronicles for his friend, Count Ernst von Heltzendorff, the latter's revelations of the inner life of the imperial German court, has long been recognized throughout Europe as the possessor of its innermost secrets.

The English "Who's Who" says of him: "He has intimate knowledge of the secret service of Continental countries and is considered by the government (of Great Britain) an authority on such matters." Another authority says: "Few people have been more closely associated with or know more of the astounding inner machinery of Germany than he."

LeQueux probably has more sources of secret information at his command than any contemporary in civil life, and for the last six years the British Government has made valuable use of his vast store of secret information through a specially organized department with which LeQueux works as a voluntary assistant.

Count von Heltzendorff became an intimate of LeQueux several years prior to the outbreak of the war; he has been living in retirement in France since August, 1914, and it was there that LeQueux received from the crown prince's late personal adjutant permission to make public these revelations of the inner life of the Hohenzollerns—that the democracies of the world might come to know the real, but heretofore hidden, personalities of the two dominant members of the autocracy it is now arrayed against.

ON AUGUST 5, 1914, I shook the dust of Berlin from my feet, crossed the French frontier, and have since resided in the comfortable old-fashioned country house which you assisted me to purchase on the border of the lovely forest of Fontainebleau.

And now, you have asked me to reveal to you some of the secrets of Potsdam—secrets known to me by reason of my official position before the war.

You are persuading me to disclose some facts concerning the public and private life of the emperor, of my imperial master, the crown prince, known in his intimate circles as "Willie," and of the handsome but long-suffering Cecil, duchess of Mecklenburg, who married him ten years ago, and became known as "Cilli." Phew! Poor woman! She has experienced ten years of misery, domestic unhappiness, by which she has become prematurely aged, deep-eyed, her countenance at times when we talked wearing an almost tragic look.

A Strange, Inexplicable Affair.

In the early days of 1912 I found myself, as the personal adjutant of his imperial highness the crown prince, involved in a very strange, even inexplicable affair.

The drama opened in the emperor's palace in Berlin on New Year's night, 1912, when, as usual, a grand court reception was held.

In the famous White salon, with its ceilings gaudily emblazoned with the arms of the Hohenzollerns as burgraves, electors, kings, emperors, and what-not, its walls of colored marble and gilded bronze, and its fine statues of the Prussian rulers, we had all assembled and were waiting the entrance of the emperor.

Of a sudden the tap of the chamberlain's stick was heard thrice, the gold-and-white doors instantly fell open, and the emperor, his decorations gleaming beneath the myriad lights, smilingly entered with his waddling consort, the crown prince, and their brilliant suite.

The Cause of the Kaiser's Annoyance.

All of us bowed low in homage, but as we did so I saw the shrewd eyes of the "all-highest one," which nothing escapes, fixed upon a woman who stood close to my elbow. As he fixed his fierce gaze upon her, I saw, knowing that glance as I did, that it spoke volumes. Hitherto I had not noticed the lady, for she was probably one of those unimportant persons who are commanded to a grand court, wives and daughters of military nobodies, of whom we at the palace never took the trouble to inquire so long as their gilt command-cards, issued by the grand chamberlain, were in proper order.

That slight contraction of the emperor's eyebrows caused me to ponder deep, for, knowing him so intimately, I saw that he was intensely annoyed.

For what reason? I was much mystified.

Naturally I turned to glance at the woman whose presence had so irritated him. She was fair-haired, blue eyed, petite and pretty. Her age was about twenty-five, and she was extremely good-looking. Beside her stood a big, fair-haired giant in the uniform of a captain of the First regiment of the Hussars of the Guard, of which the crown prince was colonel in chief.

Within a quarter of an hour I discovered that the officer was Count George von Leutenberg, and that his pretty wife, whom he had married two years before, was the eldest daughter of an English financier who had been created a baron by Great Britain's rule-of-thumb politicians.

An Interview With the Crown Prince.

Next day, just before noon, on entering the crown prince's private cabinet, I found "Willie" in the uniform of the Second Grenadiers, apparently awaiting me in that cozy apartment, which is crammed with effigies, statuettes, and relics of the great Napoleon, whom he worships just as the war lord reveres his famous ancestor, Frederick the Great.

"Sit down, Heltzendorff," said his elegant highness, waving his white, well-manicured hand to a chair near by, and puffing at his cigarette. "It is really pleasant to have an hour's rest!" he laughed, for he seemed in merry mood that day. "Look here! Do you happen to know Count Georg von Leutenberg, of the Hussars of the Guard?"

"By sight only," was my reply.

"He is a very good fellow, I understand. Do you know his wife—a pretty little Englishwoman?"

"Unfortunately, I have not that pleasure."

"Neither have I, Heltzendorff. But I soon shall know her, I expect. In that direction I want your assistance."

"I am yours for your highness to command," I replied, puzzled to know what was in progress. After a few seconds of silence the crown prince suddenly exclaimed:

"So good is the report of Von Leutenberg that has reached the emperor that—though he is as yet in ignorance of the fact—he has been promoted to the rank of major, and ordered upon a foreign mission—as military attache in London. He will leave Berlin tonight to take up his new post."

"And the countess?"

"By a secret report I happen to have here it is shown that they are a most devoted pair," he said, glancing at a sheet of buff paper upon which was typed a report—one which I recognized as emanating from the secret bureau of the Polizei-Prasidium, in Alexander Platz. "They live in the Lennestrasse, No. 44, facing the Tiergarten. Note the address."

A Sudden Promotion to London.

Then his highness paused, and, rising, crossed to the big writing-table set in the window, and there examined another report. Afterward, glancing at the pretty buhl clock opposite, he suddenly said:

"The count should call here now. I have sent informing him of the emperor's good will, and ordering him to report here to take leave of me as his colonel in chief."

Scarcely had he spoken when Count von Leutenberg was announced by a flunkey in pink silk stockings, and a moment later the tall officer clicked his heels together and saluted smartly on the threshold.

"I thought you would be pleased at your well-merited promotion," said his highness in quite a genial tone. "The emperor wishes you to leave for London by the ten o'clock express for Flushing tonight, so as to report to his excellency the ambassador before he departs on leave. Hence the urgency. The countess, of course, will remain in Berlin. You will, naturally, wish for time to make your arrangements in London and dispose of your house here."

And with those words the major was dismissed.

"A charming man!" remarked the prince, after the door had closed.

"Heltzendorff," he exclaimed a few moments later, after he had reflected deeply between the whiffs of his cigarette. "Heltzendorff, I wish you to become acquainted with the Countess von Leutenberg, and you must afterward introduce me. I have a fixed and distinct reason. I could obtain the assistance of others, but I trust you only."

"But I do not know the lady," I protested, for I had no desire whatsoever to become implicated in any double-dealing.

"Hohenstein knows her well. I will see that he introduces you," replied the kaiser's son. "She's uncommonly pretty, so mind you don't fall in love with her! I've heard, too, that Count George is a highly jealous person, but, fortunately, he will be very busy writing secret reports at Carlton House Terrace. So go and see Hohenstein at once, and get him to introduce you to the pretty little Englishwoman. But, remember, not a word of this conversation is to be breathed to a single soul."

"His Majesty Only Gives Reward When It Is Due."

What did it all mean? Why had the emperor singled out for advancement the husband of the woman, the sight of whom had so greatly annoyed him? I confess that I became more than ever puzzled over the curious affair.

Within a week, however, thanks to the introduction of Hohenstein, I had dined at Count von Leutenberg's pretty house in the Lennestrasse in a fine room, the long windows of which commanded a delightful view over the Tiergarten and the Siegesallee.

"Ah! my dear Heltzendorff. Why, she is one of the prettiest women in all Berlin! Surely it is unfortunate—most unfortunate."

What was unfortunate? I was further puzzled by that last sentence, yet I dare not ask any explanation, and we went back to our own box.

After our return to the palace the crown prince, who was standing in one of the corridors talking with the slim, fair-haired Baroness von Wedel, one of his wife's ladies-in-waiting, left her and beckoned me into an adjoining room.

"I wish you, Heltzendorff, to call upon the Countess von Leutenberg at nine o'clock tomorrow evening. She will expect you."

I looked at his highness, much puzzled. How did he know that the pretty countess would expect me?

But he gave me no time to reply, merely turning upon his heel, and striding down the corridor to the private apartments.

"You Are Witness He Has Drawn His Sword Upon the Heir to the Throne."

Punctually at nine o'clock that wintry evening I called at the Lennestrasse, but Josef, the elderly manservant, informed me that his mistress was engaged, adding that his imperial highness the crown prince had paid a surprise call.

"The crown prince here!" I gasped, astounded.

"Yes, count. And, further, my mistress is in high glee, for my master returned this morning quite unexpectedly from London. He has been out at the ministry for foreign affairs all the evening, and I expect him home at any moment. The crown prince ordered me to ask you to wait him here."

Count von Leutenberg in Berlin! What did it mean? He was absurdly jealous, I recollected. He might return at any moment and find the crown prince alone in the countess' drawing-room. If so, the situation might certainly be a most unpleasant one.

Hardly had the thought crossed my mind when I heard the count enter, his spurs clinking and his saber rattling as he strode up the stairs.

I crept forth, listening breathlessly.

A few seconds later I heard the count's voice raised in anger and high, bitter words. Next moment I sprang up the stairs and, dashing into the room, found the pretty countess standing near the window, white and rigid as a statue, while the two men in uniform faced each other. Von Leutenberg's countenance was distorted with rage as he abused the crown prince, and openly charged him with having brought about his exile to London.

His highness made no reply, but only smiled sarcastically and shrugged his narrow shoulders.

So enraged the other became at this latter gesture that, with a sudden movement, he drew his sword.

The countess shrieked and swooned as I sprang forward and stayed her husband's hand.

It was a dramatic moment. The count instantly realized the enormity of his crime, and his hand dropped.

"Enough!" cried the crown prince, waving his adversary aside. Then, turning to me, he said in a calm, hard voice:

"Heltzendorff, you are witness that this man has drawn his sword upon the heir to the throne."

And with those haughty words he bowed stiffly and strode out of the room.

A Message From the Emperor.

Two hours later I was commanded to the kaiser's presence, and found him in counsel with his son.

The emperor, who wore the uniform of the guards, looked pale and troubled, yet in his eyes there was a keen, determined look. As I passed the sentries and entered the lofty study, with its upholstery and walls of pale green damask—that room from which the empire and the whole world have so often been addressed—the kaiser broke off short in his conversation.

Turning to me as he still sat at his littered table, he said in that quick, impetuous way of his:

"Count Heltzendorff, the crown prince has informed me of what has occurred this evening in the Lennestrasse. I wish you to convey this at once to Count von Leutenberg and to give it into his own hand. There is no reply."

And his majesty handed me a rather bulky envelope addressed in his own bold handwriting, and bearing his own private cipher impressed in black wax.

Thus commanded, I bowed, withdrew, and took a taxicab straight to the Lennestrasse, being ushered by Josef into the presence of husband and wife in that same room I had quitted a couple of hours before.

I handed the count the packet the emperor had given me, and with trembling fingers he tore it open.

From within he drew three letters, those same letters which his wife had written to London, and which had been intercepted by the secret service—the letters which I had read in his highness' room.

As he scanned the lines which the emperor had penned his face blanched. A loud cry of dismay escaped his wife as she recognized her own letters, and she snatched the note from her husband's hand and also read it.

"Tell His Majesty His Command Shall Be Obeyed."

The light died instantly from her beautiful countenance. Then, turning to me, she said in a hoarse, hopeless tone:

"Thank you, Count von Heltzendorff. Tell his majesty the emperor, that his command shall be—yes, it shall be obeyed."

Those last words she spoke in a deep, hoarse whisper, a strange, wild look of desperation in her blue eyes.

An hour later I reported again at the imperial palace, was granted audience of the emperor, and gave him the verbal reply.

His majesty uttered no word, merely nodding his head slowly in approval.

Next afternoon a painful sensation was caused throughout Berlin when the "Abendpost" published the news that Count von Leutenberg, the man so recently promoted by the emperor, and his pretty wife had both been found dead in their room. During the night they had evidently burned some papers, for the tinder was found in the stove, and having agreed to die together, they being so much attached during life, they had both taken prussic acid in some wine, the bottle and half-emptied glasses being still upon the table.

The romantic affair, the truth of which I here reveal for the first time, was regarded by all Berlin as an inexplicable tragedy. The public are still unaware of how those intercepted letters contained serious warnings to the British government of the emperor's hostile intentions towards Britain, and the probable date of the outbreak of war. Indeed, they recounted a private conversation which the countess had overheard between the kaiser and Count Zeppelin, repeating certain opprobrious epithets which the all-highest had bestowed upon one or two British statesmen, and she also pointed out the great danger of a pending rupture between the two powers, as well as explaining some details, regarding the improved Zeppelins in course of construction secretly on Lake Constance, and certain scandals regarding the private life of the crown prince.

Thus the well meant warnings of an honest Englishwoman never reached the unsuspicious address to which they were sent, and thus did "Willie"—who, as I afterward discovered, devised that subtle vengeance—act as the emperor's catspaw.

Photographs With Bubble Background.

Professor Boys of England, experimenting with bubbles, obtained some very large ones, which in the sunshine changed colors so beautifully that he conceived the idea of using them as backgrounds for photographs.

These large bubbles were blown with an ordinary bellows, says the Popular Science Monthly. The soap solution was heated and a large-mounted funnel was dipped into it. The bellows, connected with the funnel, was then worked very gently. Bubbles with as great a circumference as two and a half feet were easily obtained.

Newfoundland Dogs.

A reliable authority states that originally the colors of the Newfoundland dog were red, brown, brown and white, bronze, red and white, and black and white; but these have given place to two orthodox colors—black (which is generally preferred), or black and white. The famous English artist, Landseer, in his celebrated picture "A Member of the Royal Humane Society," painted a specimen of the latter colors, and hence the black and white are sometimes called "Landseer Newfoundlands."

Help Conserve Your Country's Food Supply.

The following communication addressed to The Republican was received Tuesday from Mr. Chas. F. Trimble, an employe of the United States Department of Agriculture, who will be engaged in Oakland for the next several weeks demonstrating the value as well as the manufacture at the Garrett County Creamery of by-products of that concern. Mr. Trimble will pay especial attention to the manufacture of cottage cheese while in Oakland which has food value of more than ordinary merit. Mr. Trimble's communication follows:

With our Nation at war it is vitally necessary as never before in our history to conseve every ounce of food.

With milk and milk products second only to wheat as an article of human food it is very essential that none of it be wasted. Economy in the diet does not always depend upon limiting the use of certain foods but is sometimes a question of actually increasing the use of foods which furnish nutritive material at a relative low cost. Cottage cheese made from skim milk or buttermilk contains practically all the proteids of milk (the chief materlal for body building) and some of the fat and makes an economical and neutritious food serving as an inexpensive meat substitute. In a pound of cottage cheese there is about one-fifth pound of protein nearly all of which is digestible, while in most meats the price is higher, the protein content is less and besides has a certain waste, such as bone and other inedible material and energy for performing body work must be furnished by food and as a source of energy cottage cheese is cheaper than most meats at present prices. Specialists of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture say that a pound of cottage cheese daily would supply all the protein needed for an ordinary adult engaged in sedentary occupation and by dietetic experts it is said to possess hygienic value as well due to the lastic acid bacteria present in cottage cheese, overcoming other and undesirable kinds in the digestive tract. Served with bread and butter it is said to be a well balanced meal. In addition to being a very nutritious dish cottage cheese can be made a very appetizing one. Specialists of home economies of Dept. of Agriculture have formulated a number of recipes which illustrate a number of ways cottage cheese may be served. It may be served with vegetables, spices, as a salad, or a sauce, and in various other ways in combination with other foods.

Copies of above recipes may be obtained by writing to U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. A limited number are available at Garrett County Creamery.

The Dairy Division of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture is carrying on a widespread campaign of publicity as to the food value of skim milk, buttermilk and cottage cheese and by utilizing these foods in the home, we can all help to conserve our food supply as well as utilizing a cheap substitute for more expensive foods.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Water was turned on in portions of the Park Monday, much to the relief of householders. The delay in getting to users of the water supply was the fact that repairs were in progress and the water was cut off from certain streets.

All difficulties in making the change of the roadway from the bowling alley to the railway station have been removed, I am informed, and the contractors have been instructed to proceed with the work, which will carry the new road alongside the boardwalk down over the glade to the station, cutting out the curve fronting the Mt. Lake Hotel.

Boarding house keepers and those owning and operating hotels are on the ground and are geeting their respective houses ready for occupancy. The Allegany House, Braethorn, Maryland Inn and other hotels have already booked some guests. The Mt. Lake Hotel has been open for some time and the house is filling up.

Misses Rhoda, Alma and Annie Calhoun spent last Thursday in Cumberland, where they attended the wedding of Miss Beatrice Reckley and Mr. John Dawson.

Superintendent Ed. W. Westwood, of Wheeling, spent a few days here last week, returning to his home on Saturday. He is engaged in getting out some advertising matter announcing the Camp Meeting and other gatherings to be held here this summer.

County Commissioner D. M. Dixon and his family are quite snugly housed in the Association building at Chautauqua Park.

Many cottages have been opened here during the past week and a number of inquiries have been made for houses, especially during the months of July and August. It is probable that the Park will enjoy quite a rush during the two months above mentioned.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from A. G. Barrick and Ida B. Barrick, his wife, and William Murray and Missouri Murray, his wife, to The First National Bank of Kitzmillerville, Maryland, dated the 26th day of July, 1915, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 69, folio 267, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said mortgage, and the same having been assigned to the undersigned assignee for purposes of foreclosure, I hereby give notice that on the 22d day of June, 1917,

FRIDAY,

at the hour of 11 o'clock A. M., in front of The First National Bank Building, in the Town of Kitzmiller, Garrett county, Maryland, I will offer for sale and sell at public auction, all of the following described real estate, situate in the said Town of Kitzmiller, Maryland, to wit:

1. All that piece or parcel of ground known and designated as Lot No. 34 in Rafter's addition to the Town of Kitzmiller, beginning for the same at the corner of Lot No. 33 on Front Street, and running thence with said Front Street, North 76½ degrees East, 50 feet, South 13 degrees East, 174 feet to an alley; thence South 77½ degrees West, 50 feet, thence North 13 degrees West, 174 feet to Front Street and to the beginning, being the same property which was conveyed to the said A. G. Barrick by John H. Rafter and wife, by deed dated February 15, 1906, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 52, folio 120, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, Maryland.

The above described parcel will be sold subject to a prior mortgage to Fred. A. Thayer for $600, and any interest accrued thereon, dated Sept. mber 24, 1913, recorded among the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, a statement of which will be made at the time of sale.

This property is improved by a comfortable dwelling house and necessary out-buildings, and is desirably located.

2. All that other lot of ground known and designated as Lot No. 15 in Rafter's Addition to the Town of Kitzmiller, beginning for the same at the Southeast corner of the intersection of Centre Street and Cross Street, and running thence with Centre Street, North 77⅞ degrees East, 50 feet, South 12½ degrees East 100 feet; South 77½ degrees West, 50 feet, North 12½ degrees West, 100 feet to the beginning, being the same property which was conveyed to the said William Murray by The Blaine Mercantile Company by deed dated August 7, 1907, recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 56, folio 127, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, Maryland.

This property is improved by a comfortable dwelling house and all necessary out buildings, and is now occupied by the said William Murray.

TERMS OF SALE—As prescribed by said mortgage—cash on the day of sale. But if any responsible party or parties desire to purchase either or both of the said properties, arrangements can be made upon payment of a reasonable sum in cash at the time of sale, whereby the balance of the purchase money can be carried upon mortgage for a term not exceeding two years from the day of sale. Conveyancing at the cost of purchaser or purchasers.

For further particulars inquire of the undersigned, or to Mr. B. V. Inskeep, Cashier of The First National Bank of Kitzmillerville.

Help Conserve Your Country's Food Supply.

The following communication addressed to The Republican was received Tuesday from Mr. Chas. F. Trimble, an employe of the United States Department of Agriculture, who will be engaged in Oakland for the next several weeks demonstrating the value as well as the manufacture at the Garrett County Creamery of by-products of that concern. Mr. Trimble will pay especial attention to the manufacture of cottage cheese while in Oakland which has food value of more than ordinary merit. Mr. Trimble's communication follows:

With our Nation at war it is vitally necessary as never before in our history to conseve every ounce of food.

With milk and milk products second only to wheat as an article of human food it is very essential that none of it be wasted. Economy in the diet does not always depend upon limiting the use of certain foods but is sometimes a question of actually increasing the use of foods which furnish nutritive material at a relative low cost. Cottage cheese made from skim milk or buttermilk contains practically all the proteids of milk (the chief materlal for body building) and some of the fat and makes an economical and neutritious food serving as an inexpensive meat substitute. In a pound of cottage cheese there is about one-fifth pound of protein nearly all of which is digestible, while in most meats the price is higher, the protein content is less and besides has a certain waste, such as bone and other inedible material and energy for performing body work must be furnished by food and as a source of energy cottage cheese is cheaper than most meats at present prices. Specialists of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture say that a pound of cottage cheese daily would supply all the protein needed for an ordinary adult engaged in sedentary occupation and by dietetic experts it is said to possess hygienic value as well due to the lastic acid bacteria present in cottage cheese, overcoming other and undesirable kinds in the digestive tract. Served with bread and butter it is said to be a well balanced meal. In addition to being a very nutritious dish cottage cheese can be made a very appetizing one. Specialists of home economies of Dept. of Agriculture have formulated a number of recipes which illustrate a number of ways cottage cheese may be served. It may be served with vegetables, spices, as a salad, or a sauce, and in various other ways in combination with other foods.

Copies of above recipes may be obtained by writing to U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. A limited number are available at Garrett County Creamery.

The Dairy Division of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture is carrying on a widespread campaign of publicity as to the food value of skim milk, buttermilk and cottage cheese and by utilizing these foods in the home, we can all help to conserve our food supply as well as utilizing a cheap substitute for more expensive foods.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Water was turned on in portions of the Park Monday, much to the relief of householders. The delay in getting to users of the water supply was the fact that repairs were in progress and the water was cut off from certain streets.

All difficulties in making the change of the roadway from the bowling alley to the railway station have been removed, I am informed, and the contractors have been instructed to proceed with the work, which will carry the new road alongside the boardwalk down over the glade to the station, cutting out the curve fronting the Mt. Lake Hotel.

Boarding house keepers and those owning and operating hotels are on the ground and are geeting their respective houses ready for occupancy. The Allegany House, Braethorn, Maryland Inn and other hotels have already booked some guests. The Mt. Lake Hotel has been open for some time and the house is filling up.

Misses Rhoda, Alma and Annie Calhoun spent last Thursday in Cumberland, where they attended the wedding of Miss Beatrice Reckley and Mr. John Dawson.

Superintendent Ed. W. Westwood, of Wheeling, spent a few days here last week, returning to his home on Saturday. He is engaged in getting out some advertising matter announcing the Camp Meeting and other gatherings to be held here this summer.

County Commissioner D. M. Dixon and his family are quite snugly housed in the Association building at Chautauqua Park.

Many cottages have been opened here during the past week and a number of inquiries have been made for houses, especially during the months of July and August. It is probable that the Park will enjoy quite a rush during the two months above mentioned.

Assignee's Sale OF VALUABLE Real Estate at Kitzmiller, Garrett County, Maryland.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from A. G. Barrick and Ida B. Barrick, his wife, and William Murray and Missouri Murray, his wife, to The First National Bank of Kitzmillerville, Maryland, dated the 26th day of July, 1915, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 69, folio 227, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said mortgage, and the same having been assigned to the undersigned assignee for purposes of foreclosure, I hereby give notice that on the 22d day of June, 1917,

FRIDAY,

at the hour of 11 o'clock A. M., in front of The First National Bank Building, in the Town of Kitzmiller, Garrett county, Maryland, I will offer for sale and sell at public auction, all of the following described real estate, situate in the said Town of Kitzmiller, Maryland, to wit:

1. All that piece or parcel of ground known and designated as Lot No. 34 in Rafter's addition to the Town of Kitzmiller, beginning for the same at the corner of Lot No. 33 on Front Street, and running thence with said Front Street, North 76¾ degrees East, 50 feet, South 13 degrees East, 174 feet to an alley; thence South 77¾ degrees West, 50 feet, thence North 13 degrees West, 174 feet to Front Street and to the beginning, being the same property which was conveyed to the said A. G. Barrick by John H. Rafter and wife, by deed dated February 15, 1906, recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 52, folio 120, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, Maryland.

The above described parcel will be sold subject to a prior mortgage to Fred. A. Thayer for $600, and any interest accrued thereon, dated Septmber 24, 1913, recorded among the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, a statement of which will be made at the time of sale.

This property is improved by a comfortable dwelling house and necessary out-buildings, and is desirably located.

2. All that other lot of ground known and designated as Lot No. 15 in Rafter's Addition to the Town of Kitzmiller, beginning for the same at the Southeast corner of the intersection of Centre Street and Cross Street, and running thence with Centre Street, North 77¾ degrees East, 50 feet, South 12¾ degrees East 100 feet; South 77¾ degrees West, 50 feet, North 12¾ degrees West, 100 feet to the beginning, being the same property which was conveyed to the said William Murray by The Blaine Mercantile Company by deed dated August 7, 1907, recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 56, folio 127, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, Maryland.

This property is improved by a comfortable dwelling house and all necessary out buildings, and is now occupied by the said William Murray.

TERMS OF SALE—As prescribed by said mortgage—cash on the day of sale. But if any responsible party or parties desire to purchase either or both of the said properties, arrangements can be made upon payment of a reasonable sum in cash at the time of sale, whereby the balance of the purchase money can be carried upon mortgage for a term not exceeding two years from the day of sale (conveyancing at the cost of purchaser or purchasers.

For further particulars inquire of the undersigned, or to Mr. B. V. Inskeep, Cashier of The First National Bank of Kitzmillerville.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
Assignee for purposes of foreclosure.

BALLOT LAW WAS KILLED IN SENATE

Bills Deadlocked Between Two Houses Causing Remarkable Situation.

ANNAPOLIS, June 26—A remarkable situation has developed in the Maryland Legislature out of the bitter fight between the state Democratic forces and the city Democratic forces, aided by the Republicans. To straighten out the difference between the two houses, a separate bill repeating the Wilson ballot law was introduced in the House this afternoon and under a suspension of the rules passed. Tonight in the Senate it was beaten by a vote of 13 to 9. To put it out of commission during this session, Senator Norris moved to reconsider this vote and to lay that motion on the table. This was carried by 14 to 9.

Under the rules governing this Legislature this last action prevents further consideration of the subject matter during this session, so the Wilson ballot repealer so far as the Senate is concerned is dead.

After killing the bill the Senate took up the conference report in which the majority recommended a separate bill and adopted this, turning down the minority report favoring the amendment to the soldiers vote bill, which is practically the repealer. The soldiers vote bill as amended is therefore alive in the House and half dead in the Senate. If the repealer amendment becomes part of the bill and the report part of the subject matter it would appear that unless the House recedes there can be no further legislation in this direction at this session. The Senate cannot under its rules again consider the repealer.

The vote in the Senate on the repealers bill was as follows:

Ayes—Allen, Bomberger, Brown, Chesley, Joy, Kaufman, Speicher, Warfield and Williams—9.

Noes—President Archer, Bennett, Collier, Cooper, Duvall, Harrison, Holmead, Johnson, Jones, Legg, Norris, Ogden—13. Senator Frick asked to be excused from voting, though he announced he was opposed to the bill because of an attack made by Senator Legg during debate on his friends in the city delegation.

Senator Warfield was the only Democrat to vote for the bill and he explained he was opposed to the Wilson law on principle and had attacked it in his paper. Senator Parsons, Republican, was absent.

The outlook for a compromise was far from encouraging when the members of the General Assembly arrived today. There were a number of conferences, and wild reports of what the Governor contemplated doing were circulated. The appearance here of the heads of the Anti-Saloon League lent color to the rumor that a state-wide prohibition bill will be introduced.

There was also talk of an anti-race track measure and the introdution of bills that failed. These rumors soon fizzled out, however.

FINAL ADJOURNMENT.

State House, Annapolis, Md., June 21.—When the House met late this afternoon, after a long debate, a message was adopted refusing to accept the Senate message non-concurring in the House Wilson law amendment by a vote of 61 to 29.

Following this Mr. Wilkinson offered a statement declaring the attitude and record of the majority of the city Democrats in the House on war legislation, and putting the blame for the delays on the State Administration Democrats. It was asked that it be spread on the journal.

Mr. Bryant questioned some of the statements made in the document. Mr. Lee also attacked it as a coat of whitewash. Lee defended the Wilson law as a non-partisan measure.

Mr. Wilkinson condemned the law as a disgrace to the State and told of trick ballots he had seen in Southern Maryland. Mr. Hall objected to the presence of ex-Senator Carville D. Benson as an "official tipster" and demanded that he be put off the floor.

The statement of Mr. Wilkinson was adopted by a vote of 56 to 30. The House then adopted a message to the Senate agreeing to adjourn sine die this afternoon. The Senate adjourned at 4 15 and the House a few minutes later.

RANKS OF VOLUNTEERS SWOLLEN

Four More Young Men Will Leave Tomorrow for Army.

Oakland furnishes tomorrow an additional number of young men for the Army in the persons of Alexander Hesen, Percy Frantz, Gordon McRobie and Charles Whetsell, all of whom signed their enlistment papers at the local recruiting station of which Postmaster Deffinbaugh is the head.

These young men are well equipped for any branch of the service being of splendid physique and accustomed to outdoor life. The majority of them have expressed a desire to become ambulance and truck drivers of which the Army stands in need.

This number may be augmented by two or more before the hour of departure tomorrow for Cumberland where the recruits will undergo a physical examination before being sent to the concentration point which will likely be Columbus, Ohio, to which point many of the Maryland volunteers are given their try-out.

ASSISTED IN ESCAPE.

John King Arrested For Helping Men To Get Out Of Jail.

John King, of Vindex, who was recently released from jail after being confined therein for some weeks upon a serious charge, the prosecuting witness failing to appear against him, was arrested and had a hearing before Justice West last Saturday upon the charge of having assisted in the escape of Harvey and Puffenberger, two convicts, from the Jail two or three weeks ago when they sawed through the bars, the charge against King being that he passed to the two men knives which were fashioned into saws.

At the hearing Puffenberger stated that King had given him the knives which King stoutly denied. He was held under $500 bonds for his appearance at the next term of the Circuit Court.

U. S. NOW HAS FORCE OF 700,000

Nearly 500,000 Have Volunteered in Less Than Three Months.

Nearly half a million men have volunteered in the American army and navy during the period of less than three months that has elapsed since war was declared to exist, it is claimed here.

The army, navy and National Guard represented an aggregate strength of little more than 300,000 men when the war resolution was adopted. Today between 700,000 and 800,000 are enrolled in the various branches of the fighting service, and the great majority of them are armed, equipped and under training, asserts the War Department. They will be joined at the end of summer by more than half a million men, selected for the new national army from the ten millions registered for war during June 5.

The regular army totalled a little more than 100,000 men three months ago; it is nearing the 250,000 mark today, and the War Department officials, backed by the press of the country, are bending every effort to bring it up to 300,000 during the present week.

The National Guard, 150,000 strong when war came, numbers nearly 290,000 today, according to the best estimates available. Of that number nearly 75,000 actually are under arms, guarding against German plotters, and doing the job in a thoroughand soldierly way, as shown by the trivial damage the plotters have been able to inflict.

The Marine Corps, whose slogan of "First to Fight" has been respected by the government in attaching a seasoned regiment of sea soldiers to Major General Pershing's expeditionary force to France. The corps has been raised from 17,000 to nearly 30,000 men.

The regular bluejacket force of the navy, the men behind the big guns, and who already are trying their mettle against the enemy in the waters off the Irish coast under Vice-Admiral Sims, or upon armed American freighters, has been raised from less than 60,000 to 120,000. The boys of the country have thronged to the navy in such numbers that training stations could not be built fast enough to accommodate them.

An entire new force of railway engineers for duty in France to handle railway problems behind the fighting lines also has been created. Recruiting figures are not availing, but it is known that some of the regiments are now at full strength and ready to go. Probably 12,000 men have already joined these regiments.

Forty thousand picked men are under strenuous training at the officers' training camps, insuring good junior officers for the National Army. Other thousands are doing their share at the Medical Corps and Engineer Corps training camps, and still others are with the Naval Coast Defence Reserve, keeping the Atlantic coast free from the submarine menace and insuring a clear road for the endless stream of cargo carriers which are taking thousands of tons of American war supplies and food to the French, Belgian, British and Italians, who are holding the lines against the enemy.

The immediate need, Administration officials believe, is to bring the regular army up to its full strength without delay. These are the first line troops, the men who will be the first Americans to face the German hosts. They will be the bone and sinew of General Pershing's army, and there must be no delay in getting them ready to go.

President Wilson has designated the present week as recruiting week for the regulars. Secretary Baker has sought the aid of all newspapers to the end that 70,000 men shall be enrolled before June 30.

No explanation of the need for getting the men by that time has been given, but it has been assumed that it has to do with getting forces to Europe.

Brigadier General McCain, adjutant general of the army, pointed out again today that under the selective army bill every man who volunteers in the regulars now from any state means one man less that state will be required to furnish in the National Army. A careful record of the state distribution of recruits is being kept for that purpose.

CUMBERLAND IN THE CIVIL WAR

Capture of Generals Crook and Kelly and Part Taken in the Event by John B. Fay.

The Cumberland News of last Friday published a halftone of Mr. John B. Fay, dressed in his Confederate uniform, with an historical sketch of Mr. Fay and the part he took in the capture of Generals Crook and Kelly at Cumberland during the Civil War.

The Republican has taken the liberty of making some corrections in the article and publishes it herewith:

The picture here shown is that of John B. Fay, one of the older members of the Allegany county bar, but now residing at Dunn Loring, Va., near Washington, D. C. Mr. Fay practiced his profession here for a number of years, going from here to Oakland, where he became the editor of the Mountain Democrat, until moving to Washington. Mr. Fay is a veteran Confederate, having served in the army of the South during the War of the Rebellion. At the close of the war he returned to Cumberland, studied law and soon became prominent in his profession. During the late Hon. William Walsh's term in Congress, Mr. Fay was his private secretary, and through Mr. Walsh's influence was appointed to a government position, which position he still holds. At the recent Confederate Reunion, the first ever held in Washington, Mr. Fay took a prominent part, appearing in the Confederate uniform shown in the picture, and while thus fraternizing with his old comrades he did not forget his venerable Confederate friend, Judge J. B. Oder, of the Orphan's Court, and founder and editor of the Frostburg Journal for over forty years.

The chief matter of interest that centers in the life of Mr. Fay, which of course took place when he was quite a young man, was the part he played in the capture of Generals Crook and Kelly, officers in the Rebel army during the war of the Rebellion, and in charge of the troops here at the time of their capture by a band of young Confederate soldiers of which Mr. Fay was one. Of this interesting event, one of the most daring in the history of the war when it is considered that six or eight thousand Federal troops were encamped at Cumberland, Lowdermilk's History of Cumberland, says:

FAY'S PART IN CAPTURE OF CROOK AND KELLY.

"One of the most startling events in the history of the war occurred here on the night of the 21st, or early morning of the 22d of February (1865), when a small body of Confederates entered Cumberland and took two major-generals from their beds, while not less than 6000 or 8000 troops were encamped in the city.

"This daring invasion was made by McNeill's Rangers, and was participated in by a number of Cumberlanders, who were perfectly familiar with every foot of ground about the place. One of the leading spirits of the enterprise was John B. Fay, who performed the duty of a scout. He, with C Ritchie Hallar, a young Missourian, crossed the Potomac near Brady's Mills, and from some acquaintances obtained thorough information as to the number of troops in Cumberland, the location of the various headquarters, pickets, etc. With this fund of knowledge they returned and reported the facts to Lieutenant McNeill. Some sixty-five men, a number of them belonging to various companies of General Rosser's command, under McNeill and Fay, at once started for Cumberland. They again crossed the river near Brady's Mills, and almost within hearing distance of a cavalry picket. A portion of the command went to the house of S. D. Brady, amongst them Lieutenants McNeill and Fay, J. L. Vandiver, Joseph Kuykendall, John Cunningham, James Daily, Charles Nicholls and Isaac Parsons, where a consultation was held. McNeill proposed to capture the picket and return, as he was afraid it was too late to do more before daylight. Fay and a majority of others opposed this, and without delay the command was ordered forward. When the cavalry pickets were reached, the raiders were challenged, but by a quick dash they captured the pickets before a gun could be fired. The countersign, 'Bulls Gap,' was extorted, and with thif the Confederates had no difficulty in securing the picket post which was stationed at the junction of the river road and the old pike, just below Steele's. Ten men were then detailed to secure General Kelly, and put him in charge of Sergeant Joseph Kuykendall; ten others to take General Crook and turn him over to Sergeant Joseph L. Vandiver. Sprigg S. Lynn and Charles Nicholls were in the first squad. Lieutenant Fay's duty was to take a number of men and destroy the telegraph lines. The party then rode rapidly along the road to Green street and then leisurely across the bridge and along Baltimore street to the Barnum House, bandying words occasionally with guards on the street. Halting in front of Barnum's, the headquarters guard was taken in custody, and compelled to point out the rooms of General Kelly and Adjutant Thayer Melvin, both of whom were aroused from their sleep, and requested to dress as speedily as possible. The astonished general and his aid quickly comprehended the situation, and submitted. Meantime, a similar scene was being enacted at the Revere House where General Cook was sleeping in fancied security. Lieutenant Fay had also done his work, completely destroying the office of the military telegraph. Eight of General Kelly's best horses, among them his favorite 'Phillippi,' were captured and the Confederates rode off with their prisoners, taking the tow path and crossing at Wiley's Ford. Shortly after their departure the alarm was given, and a company of mounted men went in pursuit. The fugitives were overtaken near Romney, and a skirmish followed, but the prisoners were beyond recapture.

"General Hoyes, Lightburn and Duval were in camp in the city at the time, but the confederates, having carried out their plans to the very latter, did not stop to hazard a further harvest of generals. This event caused much excitement throughout the country, and was commented upon largely in every direction. The captured officers were sent to Richmond, and shortly afterwards exchanged."

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

People Do Not More Than Half Realize The Seriousness of the Crisis Confronting The Nation.

To the Editor of The Republican:

Just now the American people are facing a crisis. We do not seem to more than half realize the situation that confronts us. The government has found it necessary to take the matter in hand. The world needs food. We in America have enough and to spare though we have to pay a needlessly high price for it. More indeed than is just or right. Our wheat crop this year will be shorter than it was last year, but it is hoped the corn and potato crop will supply the demand. The demands of armies, and the ruthless waste of war require larger consumption. So we face the proposition of greatly enlarged demands, increased needs and a diminished supply. Never before has the world stock of food known to be at so low a point at least not in modern times.

The Allies are asking for 550 million bushels of wheat this year, but the prospect is that with U. S. and Canada will not be able to give them more than 300 million bushels. But with wise management and sufficient measures there will be food enough for all the Allies and we have enough for ourselves, and enough more to send abroad to keep the needy Allies supplied. In this we have to considor the submarine danger. They will send to the bottom all they can, so there must be enough sent to meet all demands making allowance for this loss on the way.

Should we fail to feed ourselves and the men fighting for us across the waters the great cause which we have joined may be lost. We can't fail to see then that we must produce abundantly and give lavishly to the Allies. There must be retrenchment on our part. Eat no more than we need and save the waste. Our extravagance is a national sin. It is bound to bring awful results. We are engaged in a warfare against the preposterous doctrine that "might makes right." Should our lack of self restraint prevent us from taking our proper part in this mighty conflict, it would be a lasting disgrace to us.

Few indeed have any proper conception of the amount that is wasted in this country. On an average, it is estimated that every family wastes $50 a year. One ounce of food wasted each day in every home means a yearly waste of nearly 500 million pounds of food. Waste a single slice of bread in every home and that means a daily waste of a million loaves of bread. On the whole it will amount to a thousand million dollars of needless waste every year in the homes of America. This ought not to be. It must be stopped, it can be if each one is willing to do his and her part. We have gotten far away from the frugal habits of earlier days. Money is more plentiful than it used to be; wasteful habits have grown and waste has followed to such an extent that want threatens to stalk abroad.

Buy wisely, a thing that is cheap, if we do not need it, is dear at any price. Take care of what you have. This is a lesson many need to learn. Eat no more than you need. You will feel better, be healthier and better fitted for your work.

In our time of plenty we must provide for the years of possible need, the lean times that seem to be ahead of us. If the nation could supplant a lot of the food sharks and gamblers, whose selfishness, greed and avarice, lead them to sacrifice the needs, rights, and comforts and even lives of their fellow men, if these, could be replaced by the Josephs of Pharaoh's time, the nation would be vastly better off.

We can eat more corn, and England and France can learn to eat it too. If it's good enough for us, it is for them, and they must come down off their stilts and learn to make corn bread, and eat it too. They will be none the worse off and quite as strong for service. An old adage says "Better live on a little than outlive a great deal."

When a business is in peril we must practice economy; for the severest pinching will be better than losing the chance of a livelihood.

Extravagance kills the hen that lays the golden egg. "Extravagance is the common disease of the times," is another saying that does not need verification. We are living at a rate that is frightful. It would make the bones of some of our forefathers turn in their graves. Does it pay? Will it add to our wealth? Does it make the nation richer? Pay for what you get and do not spend more than you owe. Be content with what you have, if you cannot better it. Live within your means and you will be happier and far better off in the end. We are facing our opportunity in the U. S.

Will you join in the work of saving more food for the suffering women and children and orphans and the men who are fighting this great war? The women of our country are alert. They have never failed to answer such a call as comes to them now. They can do more than the men in saving food. Food saving is necessary to win the war. The housewife that practices strictest economy in her home, and so conserves food, is rendering a good service to her country as well.

What the outcome of this conflict will be no one can tell. It ought to bring the church and all christian people down on their faces before the God of nations, in the deepest humility for and confession of sin, for it is sin that has brought this calamity upon us. The Lord of hosts, still lives and He will rule the nation with a rod of iron. They must acknowledge His authority and submit to it and honor and serve Him or lick the dust. He will be honored in all this. They that humble themselves shall be exalted, but he that exalteth himself shall be brought down. "Kiss the son lest he be angry and thou perish by the way."

A Day at The Moody Bible Institute.

To the Editor of The Republican.

A trip to Chicago would no doubt be considered incomplete by many people interested in active Christian work, without visiting the Moody Bible Institute. This institution founded by the world wide evangelist, D. L. Moody, in 1886, is located about eight blocks north of the center of the city, near the corner of Chicago Avenue and North La Salle Street. The main building faces on Institute Place, named in honor of the school.

The visitor finds a cordial welcome at the Institute, and is furnished a guide who directs him about the buildings and explains the different departments, and the daily life of the student body.

Upon entering the main building, the visitor is impressed with the stained glass window at the head of the first landing, illustrating the sower striding across the plowed field sowing broadcast the seed. This is intended to be an object lesson to the students of what is expected of them during the time of their training and throughout their lives.

On the main floor the visitor is shown the library, the missionary museum, the lecture hall, and the accounting and printing departments. On the west wall of the corridor he finds the names of over 750 students who have gone to foreign mission fields,—a roll of honor. Passing down stairs, he next visits the power and heating plant, and the steam laundry, where all the laundry of the students is done at half price.

Through an underground tunnel, across Institute Place, the visitor reaches the men's building, with its gymnasium and dormitories. Then comes the women's building with its large dining hall and kitchen, the Massey chapel, reception room and dormitories for women. Visitors are impressed with the warm, homelike atmosphere of the Institute. The students with the faculty, constitute one big family. Over 500 are seated in the dining hall at each meal,—the women students occupy one side, the men occupy the other, and the faculty are seated in the center.

In the early morning, before breakfast, each student observes "The Quiet Hour" in personal Bible reading and prayer. After breakfast, while still gathered at the tables, a heart-to-heart talk or a Bible exposition is given by some member of the faculty or some visiting pastor, evangelist or missionary.

At 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning of each week the first general class convenes, and the entire forenoon of each day is devoted to lectures and class room work. Some lectures are given in the afternoon, but a good part of the time each afternoon and evening is devoted to study and practical Christian work according to assignments made. Following the evening meal, fellowship meetings are held in the different buildings.

Proper consideration is also given to wholesome recreation. Monday is always taken as a rest day. The gymnasium in the winter and the tennis courts in the summer, with an occasional excursion on Lake Michigan, or a visit to some park, afford proper exercise for those who feel the need of it. At the beginning of each term a reception is given for new students. In these and other ways, the students at The Moody Bible Institute find themselves continually in a wholesome Christian atmosphere, which is conducive to physical, intellectual and spiritual development.

As the visitor watches the 700 or more students of the Day classes and the 300 or more of the Evening classes, and then thinks of over 3000 men and women taking the Correspondence courses, with residences in all parts of the world, he begins to realize that Dwight L. Moody, the founder of the Institute, was a man of faith, vision and purpose, and that those who follow in his steps are following in the right direction. The visitor leaves the Institute with fresh courage for his own life, and the conviction that life is really worth while if spent in the right way.

War on Paper Stock . . By Frederick J. Haskin.

One place that feels the shock of war pretty hard these days is the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. This is the government's model bill and stamp factory. Joseph H. Ralph, the director, and his army of 5,000 are putting up the fight of their lives, for up to date we are making the world safe for democracy mainly on paper—Liberty Bonds by the million, interim certificates to be issued until the Liberty Bonds are finished, 47 new kinds of revenue stamps, a tremendous issue of national reserve bank notes, commissions for brand new officers, disbursers' checks and transportation vouchers, and the mighty threat of a three-cent stamp to take the place of the two.

The bureau does it all, and the worst of it is, it never knows exactly what is going to be required of it. Take this revenue bill. One day some Kansas congressman rises in his place, points out that the cigaret is poisoning the youth of the nation, induces the House to include a tax of a quarter of a cent on cigaret paper; whereupon the bureau has a design made of a cigaret paper stamp with a head of Andrew Jackson on it, and puts an etcher to work and orders the paper and ink. The next week some tobacco-belt senator rises up and proves by sheer eloquence that the cigaret is not only neutritious but also antiseptic, and induces the Senate to strike out that cigaret paper tax. So the men down at the bureau put away the picture of Andy, countermanded the order for paper and wait to see what the conference will do. All this work is being done with paper costing just about twice what it did before the war broke out and labor scarce. They are economizing in every possible way. Commissions for generals and colonels are being printed on paper instead of parchment, for example.

The amount of paper which is necessary to start us fighting is almost incredible. One of the first effects of a declaration of war is that a large number of patriotic citizens grab hold of the government payroll and hang on, stretching that precious document to almost unbelievable lengths. Government checks and vouchers have to be made by the million to pay all these new soldiers and civil service people.

It has been impossible to get the skilled labor which the bureau needs. It has increased its force about 25 per cent. (from 4,000 to 5,000,) but its production has been increased almost 75 per cent. This has been done almost entirely by overtime work. From 10 to 16 hours is now a day's work at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. The day and piece workers get the same rate for overtime as for regular time, and the office people who are on salary get nothing extra except the work. But the morale of the establishment seems to be good. No one is absolutely compelled to work overtime, and women and girls who manifestly cannot stand the strain are always permitted to go home at the usual time. On the other hand, if some able-bodied man is found habitually ducking out at the usual time, a certain amount of unofficial pressure is brought to bear upon him to stay and work a little longer. There are some operations which require a full 16 hours, and certain women employes must stay in their places for the full length of time. Volunteers are called for this work, and every day there are some girls who voluntarily stick to the job from 8 in the morning until 12 at night. But they are let off the next day.

Director Ralph himself is one of the hardest worked employes in the place. Between trying to find out what the government wants on one hand and keeping 5,000 employes at work overtime on the other, his position demands an aptitude for something like jugglery.

Of course the Liberty Bonds are a big item. Just at present the bureau is bending its energies to the production of the "interim" certificates, which will be given to the buyers of the bonds to hold until the bonds themselves are printed. The estimates which the treasury has turned in of the numbers of each denomination it expects to need are an interesting index to the class of people that are doing the buying. These estimates seem to show that neither the very rich nor the poor are doing the work. It is the man who has $1,000, or at most a few thousand, to invest that is making the loan a popular one. For only 200,000 of the $50 certificates have been ordered and only 250,000 of the $100; but 650,000 of the $1,000 denomination are being printed. Of the $50,000 size the treasury only wants 5,000, while the 500 $1,000,000 certificates that have been ordered will doubtless prove sufficient. A million and a half of these certificates are for bonds paid for in full. The other 1,000,000 are for payments of 20, 40 and 70 per cent. So most people are paying cash.

The printing of the bonds is designed to make it very difficult to counterfeit them, or to alter the denomination. In fact, raising a Liberty Bond would seem to be impossible, for each denomination bears the head of a different President and is a certain color. Thus, a blue Thomas Jefferson is worth just $50, neither more nor less, while a bright orange George Washington is worth $500, a pea-green Monroe $5,000, and a carmine McKinley $50,000. Only the very wealthy can afford to own the portrait of Gen. Grant in orange, for they cost $100,000 apiece.

The Liberty idea is to be abundantly represented. On the face will appear a vignette of the Statue of Liberty lighting the world, escorted by a presidential physiognomy. On the back there is to be a vignette of the Statue of America which tops the Capitol dome, on one side, and on the other an eagle. The bonds will be labelled "Liberty Loan of 1917," and the denominations will be printed in five places.

The total number of bonds which, it is estimated, will be made is a little over 5,000,000. It is interesting to note that 4,500,000 of these will be coupon bonds, and only 632,500 registered bonds. It costs the government about $125 a thousand to turn out the coupon bonds and about $30 a thousand for the registered.

Reasons Why You Should Patronize this Horse.

He is an extra good individual and represents the most popular breed in the country today. His pedigree represents the best blood of his breed. His quality is unsurpassed and he has the best disposition of any stallion in the country. He transmits this disposition to his colts. He is a tried horse and a sure foal getter. His colts are easy to sell and bring good prices; they have high life, plenty of vim, but are easy to handle. He will stay here and give you a chance to breed to him again.

We will exercise the greatest care in handling mares, but will not be responsible for accidents.

Will stand for the season of 1917, until July 1, at the following places: Hutton, at M. G. Mellot's, Mondays and Tuesdays of each week, beginning April 23rd and 24th. McHenry, at Jonas Glotfelty's, Wednesday and Thursday of each week. Oakland, at the Fair Grounds, Friday and Saturday of each week.

USE OF SPRAY MIXTURES URGED

Will Greatly Lessen Losses From Plant Diseases.

MUST BE PROPERLY MIXED

Some Practical Directions Given For Preparing Lime-Sulphur and Bordeaux Mixture.

College Park, June 28.—Every producer of farm and truck crops affected by plant diseases is taking unusual precautions to prevent the appearance and spread of disease. Fortunately, most diseases can be prevented or checked by two or three simple spray mixtures that can be prepared and applied by the grower. In a warning issued by the Maryland Agricultural Extension Service, through its county demonstration agents, C. E. Temple, State Plant Pathologist, gives some most practical directions regarding the home preparation of spray mixtures. Prof. Temple says: "Every year, thousands of dollars worth of food materials in our State are destroyed by plant diseases and insects. This great loss can be cut down at a relatively small cost by the use of approved precautionary methods, such as the selection of seed free from disease, the rotation of crops and the spraying for both diseases and insects.

"Directions for making the more important fungicides are given below:

Self-Boiled Lime-Sulphur.

"This material is used for the control of rot and scab on stone fruits, such as peaches, plums and cherries. It is composed of:

"Flowers of Sulphur (finely ground) 8 pounds.

"Stone Lime of good quality 8 pounds.

"Water, 50 gallons.

"To make this spray material, start the lime to slaking in a fifty-gallon container with a little water, using hot water if the lime acts slowly. As soon as the lime begins to slake rapidly, add the sulphur and stir continuously. Add just enough water from time to time to keep the mixture in the form of a thin paste and to allow the mixture to boil violently from three to five minutes. At the end of this time, fill the container with cold water so as to prevent any further action of the lime. The mixture is now ready to strain into the spray tank. Larger quantities may be made in the case of commercial orchardists, but greater care will be required to prevent the mixture from becoming too hot, in which case the sulphur will be dissolved and there will be a red scum formed on the surface after the mixture has been allowed to stand for a few minutes. This red material will injure the foliage and fruits of peaches and plums. When applying this spray, good agitation is essential.

"As a substitute for this home-made spray material atomic sulphur, which is a commercial product, may be used at the rate of five pounds to 50 gallons of water.

Concentrated Lime-Sulphur.

"This material is usually purchased in the concentrated form which usually tests 32 to 34 degrees Baume scale. This solution when diluted to one part to 40 parts of water, makes a good fungicide for spraying apples, pears and quinces for various fungous diseases.

Bordeaux Mixture.

"This is the standard spray for truck crops, potatoes, tomatoes, grapes and for apples in the case of bitter rot and blotch. The material is made from:

"Copper Sulphate (Bluestone), 4 pounds.

"Stone Lime of good quality, 4 pounds.

"Water, 50 gallons.

"In making the spray material dissolve the bluestone by suspending it in a bag near the surface of a few gallons of water contained in a wooden or earthen vessel. Slake the lime and add several gallons of water so as to make milk of lime. Strain the bluestone solution into the spray tank and add enough water to make from 20 to 30 gallons. Then strain the milk of lime into the barrel, agitating the mixture vigorously. Add water to make 50 gallons and use immediately. The secret in making good Bordeaux is to have the bluestone and the milk of lime fairly well diluted before putting them together and then while they are being brought together they should be stirred continuously. If concentrated solutions are put together, a very poor grade of Bordeaux is the result.

"Stock solutions may be made by dissolving bluestone the rate of one pound per gallon of water. Slake the lime and dilute to one pound to the gallon. These will keep indefinitely if kept separate, but they should be covered to keep the water from evaporating. When using them, mix according to the formula above. Prepared Bordeaux, both dry and paste, is on the market and may be substituted for the home-made mixture. Consult your County Demonstration Agent regarding the details of preparing any of the above mixtures.

To Persons Who Are In Arrears For Taxes, 1916.

Up to the present time I have refrained to exercise the power given me by the law to enforce the payment of these taxes by a sale of the property on which same is levied, and I hope that it may not be necessary to resort to this means in order to collect said taxes, I want to state, however, that the bills of the county must be paid and the funds necessary to do so are running low. I hope, therefore, that all who are in arrear in payment of taxes for 1916 will promptly come forward and pay same without further delay

Notice to Water Users

On account of the shortage of gas which prevents the operation of the City Water Pumps at full capacity, a serious condition confronts the citizens of Oakland and a shortage of water for domestic and other purposes may result unless conditions improve. We therefore ask all patrons of the water works system to be as economical in the use of water as possible, thus conserving the supply.

RUSSIAN WOMEN IN THE WAR.

"Scratch a Russian and you'll find a Tartar" was meant to apply to the female of the nationality, if we are to judge by the appeal, or manifesto, issued by the women of Russia intended to goad the men to resume warfare against Germany. The women have formed "Battalions of Death" and threaten to carry on the war themselves if the men shirk their duty. More, they pledge themselves to "turn like tigersses" not only against the common enemy but also against the male malingerers of their own country. "Woe unto you if you earn our scorn!" they admonish the faithless soldiers. Have the Russians heard that "hell hath no fury like a woman scorned"? They would better halt in their futile plottings for peace and ease that can bring them nothing but turmoil and disaster. The women seem to have a better comprehension of the situation confronting Russia than have the men who must carry the nation's arms to victory if any lasting benefit is to be derived from the freedom that has come to the people so long oppressed by the Czar's government.

Since the beginning of the war we have had stories of women fighting in the armies of Russia, but we are not prepared to witness regiments and divisions of Amazons marching to the trenches and facing the guns and bayonets of Germany's forces. The women could do little good on the firing line. They would be easy and pitiful victims. But by their show of vigor and earnestness they may recall the men to their duty and Russia may again take its place as it should among the antagonists of the autocrat who will rule them with an iron hand if they do not vanquish him. The Russians must be driven and there is no force to compel them to fight quite so powerful as the women if they set themselves to the task.

NOW FOR A SANE FOURTH.

There never has been any argument for an insane Fourth; no one has ever had the courage to argue for a big casualty list and a huge fire loss for maimings to limbs or for the destruction of eyesight or for death from that most frightful of afflictions, tetanus or lockjaw. Only greed and puerility and the blind folly of the mature have kept the noisy and deadly Fourth going. But this year the President has sounded a more solemn call to consecration that makes the old Fourth more than usually impossible; and now the Governor, recognizing that the situation calls for definite action, is out in a proclamation for an orderly Fourth that all should heed. The careless and easy-going officials and the easier-going parents who seemingly have always assumed that in the case of fatalties, it was always to be the other people's children who were to be sacrificed, must look the new situation in the face; for in view of all the circumstances now confronting us there is no need of any further exhortations. The Governor has called for an end of the madness of the "old-fashioned" Fourth and for proper observance of the day: so let us have the sane Fourth and be done forever with the follies and frivolties and noise of the "fatal" celebrations of the past.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Yesterday a great many delegates to the Missionary Convention of the Lutheran church, in session today and tomorrow at Accident, arrived in Oakland and were taken from here to that point in automobiles furnished by the good people of Accident whose guests the delegates are. Representatives from the various Lutheran churches of this county and West Virginia points are present at the convention, the sessions thus far being of more than ordinary interest.

THOUSANDS OF UNITED STATES TROOPS ARE NOW IN FRANCE

Pershing's Army Crosses the Atlantic Without a Mishap and In Fighting Trim

A FRENCH SEAPORT, June 27 (5:30 p. m. Passed by the censor)—Pershing's boys are here. Thousands of them came within the last 24 hours out of the misty vastness of the sea. A U-boat infested sea held no terrors for them—not a torpedo scratch on a transport; not a single man lost. Spic and span were weather browned faces, their eyes sparkling fight, every one of them, every inch a man, they tramped down the gangways to the strains of the Star Spangled Banner into a pandemonium of unending cheers.

Tonight they are already encamped, itching to get to the front. The camp is not far from here. It is in charge of Gen. Wm. L. Sibert, who came in command of the troops. Pershing is coming over from Paris to greet them.

As the thousands of American fighting lads came from the transports scores of German prisoners stood on the pier. Teeth set they looked out sideways at the newcomers. Those who watched the prisoners could discern a grudging admiration in their looks.

The remarkable thing about the scene attending the real entrance of the United States into the world war through the safe arrival of the expeditionary force was the spontaneity, the touching warmth of their reception here. Not an inkling of the arrival had reached us before hand. There had been no preparation, no program with speakers or songs, no reception committee or the like. Not until the transport had safely arrived at this port ready to disembark did the real news become known. Then the people here got wild.

The first transport stuck her gray nose into the harbor in the early morning. The tiers were swarming with thousands, men were few, only the aged and wounded. The others are at the front. The realization that these newcomers are shortly to fight side by side with the men of this port who are already in the thick of battle drove the women frantic with joy and gratitude.

The American troops answered the cheers by throwing small silver coins ashore. A roaring scramble among the street urchins followed.

The disembarkation passed off in the most orderly manner. There was not the slightest hitch. Ship after ship slipped into her berth discharging men and equipment.

From the pier the troops swung out through the streets of this port where the populace turned out to give them an ovation. The crowd showered flowers, fruit, cigarettes and dainties upon the marchers. "Vive L'Amerique" was the unending cry.

COUNTY AGENT'S WORK

Meeting Held at Various Points Last Week.

The meetings held throughout the county last week by County Agent Middleton for the purpose of hearing Dr. Buckley talk on the live stock industry, and Mr. Kemp talk on soil, lime and fertilizers, were well attended. The total number that turned out to hear these men were 335. Both men were well pleased with their visit to the county.

It has not been possible to date to get the dog law before the Legislature. The sheep growers have not given up, however, and it is going to keep the petitions circulating and take the matter up in January. All those interested in the securing of such a law should lend their support by signing one of the petitions.

The Boys Agricultural Club of Oakland held a picnic in Brennemans' grove at McHenry, Tuesday, June 26th. Most all the Club members were present. The Club was the guest of the Oakland Club. Two games of base ball were played. A nine inning game in the afternoon resulted in a victory for McHenry. In the evening the Oakland boys won a five inning game. A very pleasant day was enjoyed by all who attended.

Among the farmers visited by the county agent this past week may be mentioned: Weber Bros., Harry Porter, Henry Harvey, H. P. Miller, J. G. Friend, C. A. Miller, E. A. Browning, Jonas Glotfelty, H. M. Speicher, Chas. Wiley, Perry Broadwater, C. J. Yoder, Christ Durst, Sam Otto and Joe Conneway.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Dr. Percival Lantz and his family, accompanied by Miss Louise Hagans, have arrived at the Park and are occupying the Judge Elliott cottage which was recently purchased by Dr. Lantz as a summer home. Dr. Lantz comes from Alaska, West Va., where he is held in the highest regard. His removal to this place gives us a resident physician as I understand he will practice his profession here during his stay.

The electric lighting service is very much like Finnigan: "Off agin, on agin, gone agin." But I presume there is a reason.

We have been in the throes of a near-war, recently, over the location of the new road leading from the Park grounds down through the glade to the Railway station. Today the report is given out that the matter has been adjusted to the satisfaction of everyone concerned and before night a report to the contrary is in circulation. Last Monday the State Roads commission had a representative here who conferred with some of the residents who are most vitally interested and things were fully explained and a satisfactory conclusion arrived at. Before the State's representative was outside the limits of the Park things were again up in the air and now we don't know where we "are at."

The family of the late Rev. J. P. McKee, of Pittsburgh, arrived on last Thursday and will remain during the season.

Mrs. Rockhold, of Baltimore, and her sister, Mrs. Howard Smouse, of Fairmont, are also in the Park for the summer.

For the benefit of the Red Cross fund the Civic Club of the Park will present, at the Hall of Philosophy on Saturday evening of this week, Marguerite Clark in "The Pretty Sister of Kose." Marguerite Clark is so well known to the movie world that no introduction to her and the charming manner in which she takes the part assigned her is necessary. All the ladies want the residents of the Park and those who do not live in the Park to attend the show on Saturday night and thus assist in the cause for the relief of the boys who are now or who may later be in hospitals and on battle fields far from home.

Dr. Carr and members of his family went to Gorman yesterday to see a circus.

Dr. Percival Lantz announces that he has opened an office in the Elliott Cottage on K street, Mountain Lake Park. Hours: 10 to 11 a. m.; 2 to 4 p. m.; 6 to 7 p. m. Bell phone.—Adv.

Miss Kate McLain, who came to the Park some days ago, returned to Wheeling yesterday morning, but expects to be back at the end of the week.

Lawn Fete and Box Supper.

In order to raise additional funds for the purchase of a piano for the Accident public school, a lawn fete and box supper will be held at the Accident school house on the evening of July 4th, to which all are most cordially invited.

Gas Explodes.

Mrs. Lloyd C. Shaffer, of Oakland, was painfully burned about her arms on last Thursday when gas which had accumulated in a stove at her home exploded. For a day or two Mrs. Shaffer experienced much suffering but is now better.

CULP BOY GUILTY MANSLAUGHTER

Jury Recommends Garrett Schoolboy to Mercy Of The Court.

In the Allegany County Circuit Court at Cumberland on Saturday, to which county the case was removed from Garrett county by the defense, the jury in the case of the State of Maryland vs. Thomas Payne Culp, charged with the murder of Thomas Wilson, of near Red Oak school house, after an hour's deliberation brought in a verdict finding the traverser "guilty of manslaughter, but not guilty of murder in the first degree and recommended the prisoner to the mercy of the court."

The arguments on the part of the State was opened by Attorney E. H. Sincell, of Oakland, followed by Gilmor S. Hamill and son for the defense, Attorney A. A. Young, assisting the State in the prosecution also argued the case against the traverser. The closing argument was by States Attorney Jones of Garrett county, who reviewed the testimony of the case from the opening to its close, pointing out that the alleged gang of children, calling themselves a "Jesse James gang," was only a childish society and that the school was conducted in a decidedly creditable manner. The testimony of the principal of the school was to the effect that there was no disorder whatever among the children; that the statement that the children were permitted to bring whisky and hard cider into the school was incorrect and that the carrying of pistols was not known to him.

The defense claimed accidential shooting as the reason for the killing. Ethel Arnold, a little school girl, who witnessed it and who was not related to either of the principals of the tragedy, testified that the two boys were in a struggle when she observed them. She further testified that after the shooting Culp came up to the school building and said "I shot him in selfdefense; they cannot do anything with me." After the shooting the Arnold girl said the Culp boy went to his home and another boy in the school took the Wilson lad to the home of a Mr. Baer, nearby, where the physician, Dr. Drinkwater, was summoned to give the injured boy attention.

It is understood Judge Henderson will sentence the Culp boy next Monday morning.

The case created a great deal of interest in Garrett county where both the Wilson and Culp family are well known.

FACTS AS DISCLOSED AT THE TRIAL.

On Friday, the 16th of March, at the noon hour, young Culp who is 15 years of age, got into some difficulty with Willie Cooper, a much younger and smaller boy than himself, and was cuffing him around, when young Wilson appeared upon the scene and immediately took Culp to task, telling him that he was too big to fight a little fellow like that, and if he wanted to fight to fight some one of his size. One word brought on another, until finally Culp and Wilson got into a fight. While Wilson was the youngest of the two, being but 14 years old, while Culp was 15; Wilson was larger and stronger than Culp. A few blows were struck, and Wilson had the latter under a promise by Culp to let little Cooper alone, Wilson and Culp parted, Wilson going to the school house, and Culp went to the closet.

Willie Bear, a 12 year old witness, stated that he had occasion to go to the closet in just a few moments after he saw Culp enter it, and when he went in found Culp in the act of transfering a revolver from one pocket to another. He had two pairs of trousers on and he was in the act of transfering the revolver from the hip pocket of the under pair to the hip pocket of the outer pair, young Bear asked him what he was going to do with the revolver, and Culp replied "you will see" or "you will find out." While these two boys were in the closet Wilson in company with one or two other boys came down to the closet, Culp came out and took up a position facing the closet, but about twelve feet distant, with his hand at his hip pocket. When Wilson appeared he stopped on the steps, and Culp said to him, "if you have any thing to settle, settle it now." Wilson replied, "yes, you got that old revolver, and nothing but cowards would carry revolvers." Culp replied "that makes no difference."

Several little boys were standing around, and realizing that there was going to be trouble, some of them run, and the others were more or less excited, and as a result the evidence was a little conflicting at this point. All of them agreed, however, that the two boys came together, and the two shots were fired in quick succession.

One little fellow stated that Wilson was attempting to take the revolver away from Culp, and a struggle ensued and shots followed.

Edith Arnold, a little girl who was in the school house, 55 feet away, was standing at the window, and says she saw Culp standing a little to one side of a direct line from school house to closet with a revolver in his hand, and she says she saw Wilson start towards the school house, and Culp intercepted him, threw his left arm around Wilson, and the two shots followed, she says that after Wilson was shot he ran or walked toward the school house, and was assisted by some little boys to a neighboring house. After that Culp came up to the school house, and said, "they can't hurt me; I shot him in self defense."

There was an attempt on the part of the defense to hail that there was a deplorable state of affairs existed at the Red Oak school; that liquor was brought into the class rooms; that the boys generally carried revolvers, etc., but this attempt utterly failed, and the conditions at that school were shown to be as good as any other rural school, with the exception that on some former occasion it was shown that two or three of the boys, at different times, had been seen with a revolver, in the vicinity of the school house but not on the grounds.

Payne Culp was the only boy that was shown to ever had a revolver on the school house grounds, and so far as the evidence disclosed, he was never seen with one until the day before the shooting, but this fact was wholly unknown to the teacher in charge.

The fact of the matter is that the community in which this tragedy occurred has always been looked upon as a law abiding community, and has figured very little in the criminal courts of the county.

There was an attack made upon Mr. Hanft, the teacher, which was not wanted by the evidence. His reputation as a teacher and as a man is too well known in the community to warrant anyone in beheving that this deplorable affair occurred through any neglect or lack of discipline on his part.

At the habeas corpus hearing in Oakland shortly after the shooting, the defense tried to show that a "Jesse James" gang existed among the boys at this school. At the trial no attempt was made to establish this fact. The defense is it was accidental shooting.

Finger Amputated.

Al. Fulk, an employe of the Kendall Lumber Company at Crellin, who has been suffering for several years past with tuberculosis of the bones of his hand and who lost two fingers of his hand as a result, suffered the loss of the third one on Saturday when is was amputated by Drs. McComas and Broadwater.

Home Demonstration and Canning Work.

Have you joined a canning club? If you have not, write to Frances E. Gerber, Home Demonstration Agent for Garrett county, headquarters in Oakland and ask for particulars.

Clubs have already been organized in different places and still more are to be formed. Meetings are being held in the following place during the week of June 24, Grantsville, Friendsville, Accident and Hutton.

During the week of July 1, meetings will be held in Dodson, Bloomington, Kitzmiller, Red House and Oakland.

Empire Theatre.

The Empire Theatre management announces a number of the greatest stars in the picture world for this week's program.

The bill for tonight is "The Happiness of Three Women," featuring House Peters and Myrtle Steadman. This film was shown last night and is held over by request.

Tomorrow (Friday) evening Cleo Ridgeley and Wallace Reid appear in "The Yellow Pawn," a very interesting production.

Saturday night, June 30, "Nanette of the Wilds," with that great actress, Pauline Frederick, in the title role.

"The Road to Love," with Lenore Ulrich, is the bill for Monday night, July 2. Miss Ulrich appears to great advantage in this play, the scenes of which take place in Algeria, and she is supported by a strong cast. This same film will be repeated on the following evening.

Watch for a great production of "Snow White," which has been booked for Friday, July 6th. Marguerite Clark takes the title role in this wonderful fairy story, having previously gained fame in the same production on the stage. She is assisted by a star cast which includes Creighton Hale and others equally as good. When Miss Clark is scheduled to appear the product on may be depended upon as something out of the ordinary.

Mr. Wilson base of operations is at Albright, West Va., where he has assumed control of the large lumbering plant there which was established several years ago under the corporate name of the Ruthbell Lumber Company.

RED CROSS AUXILIARY

Splendid Work Has Been Done by the Ladies Company.

The ladies of the Oakland Red Cross Auxiliary will sew on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings from 9 until 12 o'clock in McIntire's store instead of in the afternoon, as formerly.

The hospital box containing equipments for our soldiers is nearing completion and an exhibition of the articles will soon be given in a drug store window. This box cost Garrett county approximately $150.00 and include the following articles: Fifty-four sheets, 36 pillow cases, 27 suits pajamas, 36 hospital bed sheets, 9 convalescent gowns, 36 pairs socks, 18 pairs bed socks, 18 bath towels, 36 face towels, 27 wash cloths, 9 pairs slippers, 18 hot water or ice bag covers.

The physicians of the Hopkins Unit which recently sailed for France have sent urgent requests for hospital bed sheets. Garrett county hopes to make a large number of these sheets and material for them have been ordered. The Oakland Auxiliary asks the Oakland women to show their patriotism by giving a small portion of their time each week to the making of these garments. They are for the soldiers in the hospitals in France whom our American doctors have gone to save.

MRS. G. SEMMES HAMILL, Jr.
Chairman for Oakland.

Dr. Edward E. Sollars, of Deer Park, was in Oakland yesterday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Savedge at, Deer Park, had as their guest last week Mrs. Roy Bush and little niece, Clara Duff.

Messrs. Daniel and James H. Wilson, of near Kitzmiller, spent yesterday in Oakland when both called at this office.

Mr. William H. Lowe, of Pittsburgh, Pa., spent the week-end as the guest of Miss Grace Bowman at the home of her sister, Mrs. E. J. Riley, south of Oakland.

Miss Virginia Mayer, of Terra Alta, who was in Oakland a few days recently on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Harland L. Jones, returned home yesterday afternoon.

Call and see the stock of Automobile Accessories at the Oakland Auto Supply Company's Store, opposite the First National Bank. What we don't have we get without delay. Advertisement

The ladies of the Presbyterian church will conduct an exchange on Saturday afternoon at the store of Mr. H. Crutzburg on Alder street, and will have on sale pies, cakes, etc. The patronage of the public is invited.

Mr. C. J. Morrow, of Asheville, N. C., spent yesterday in Garrett county, being a guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Riley south of town who is being visited by Mrs. Morrow, the latter having arrived here about two weeks ago.

FOR SALE—One four-year old bay mare; good worker, round and sound. Will work any place. Write or see J. C. Petersheim, Oakland, Md. Adv.

Helen Stewart entertained a large number of her little friends at a birthday party given at her home on Second street yesterday afternoon. About twenty-five of her little friends were present and a most enjoyable time was had by all.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Boardman, of Washington, D. C., arrived in Oakland Saturday night the former returning to Washington Monday. Mrs. Boardman will remain in Oakland several weeks on a visit to her parents, Col. and Mrs. A. G. Sturgiss.

In another column of this paper today Messrs. Trimble & Ruckman, stock dealers of Phillippi, West Va., advertise for lambs for September and October delivery at either Oakland or Deer Park. Mr. Ruckman was in Oakland Tuesday where he made a number of contracts with sheep growers.

Mr. R. L. Neville, of near Gorman, accompanied by two of his sons, visited Oakland Monday evening. In another column of The Republican today Mr. Neville has advertised his farm for sale. The property is one of the best known farms in the county and is exceedingly productive.

Photographs are being received in Oakland from a number of the young men who recently enlisted in the Army showing them equipped and wearing the uniform prescribed by Army regulations. Everyone has a soldierly bearing and Garrett countians are proud of the record made in the number of enlistments so far made.

Rev. E. Roy Hauser, pastor of St. John's Lutheran church at Altoona, Pa., with Mrs. Hauser and their little daughter Jean Eleanor, are spending several days with Mr. and Mrs. John Sanders near town. They were accompanied here by Mrs. Hauser's mother, who has been their guest at Altoona for some week.

The Water Board of Oakland, by advertisement printed elsewhere in today's Republican, advertises against the waste of water by the residents of town, giving as a reason for such action the shortage of gas which is used to operate the motors attached to the pumps. The advice thus given by the board is timely as a shortage of water is threatened unless gas conditions improve and this is not expected for some time to come. Save water as well as everything else is the slogan of today.

Four small boys have been arrested during the past few days charged with entering the Dixon mill and warehouse and tapping the money till, taking therefrom sums of money varying from one to five dollars. For several weeks past money has mysteriously disappeared and to catch the guilty parties a watchman was kept in the building at the noon hour who secreted himself behind piles of grain sacks. Friday a boy named Lewis crept into the building through a window and was helping himself to the funds when he was captured. Later he confessed that the practice had been in vogue for some time and implicated a boy named Wolf and another named Lipscomb. These were arrested and in a statement they implicated another lad named Carney, the latter being released upon bond whilst the three first named are yet in jail.

Oakland Auto Supply Co.

Ravenscroft Building, opp 1st Nat. Bank
OAKLAND, MD.

Baltimore and Ohio Agent H. P. Stuck has prevailed upon his superiors to make some changes and improvements at the station here. While the local man failed to get all he wanted he has made a start and in a short time the traveling public will have better accommodations at the station if persistency counts for anything.

Rev. W. M. Shultz returned home Sunday night from Parkersburg and nearby points after an absence of several days. He was first called to a point in Ritchie county, West Va., to officiate at the funeral of an old friend which occurred on Saturday and on Sunday received another call to attend and officiate at the funeral of Mr. Louis Lattimer at Parkersburg. Both of the deceased were former parishoners of Mr. Shultz's.

Jr. E. L. Picnic.

The annual picnic of the Junior Epworth League of St. Paul's M. E. church of Oakland, was held in Merrill's Grove, near Oakland on last Thursday afternoon. About one hundred and twenty children had gathered at the ceurch from whence they were taken to the picnic grounds in automobiles and Mr. David T. Enlow's big hay wagon and returned to their home late in the evening by the same means. This is an annual event with the children and marks the beginning of the summer vacation and is arranged by the superintendent of the League, Miss Grace Loar, assisted by Mrs. George A. Porter. Miss Eleanor Hinebaugh and others. Thursday's event was a most happy and enjoyable one for all who were present.

HIGH EGG PRICES NOT UNREASONABLE

Advance In Cost of Whole Grain Must Be Met.

MASH MIXTURES CHEAPEST

Poultrymen Of the State Must Meet Changed Conditions.

College Park, Md., June 21.—Although egg prices are nearly double what they were a year ago, the cost of grain feeds has advanced even more and poultrymen are facing failure unless cheaper feeds can be made use of. Poultryman Roy H. Waite, of the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station, in a circular to the poultrykeepers of the State, calls attention to the change in price levels and urges the adoption of mash feeding. Mr. Waite says:

"In June, 1914, eggs were 19 cents a dozen, according to the quotations of a Baltimore commission man. In June, 1917, they were quoted at 26 cents a dozen, an advance of 90 per cent. since the war began.

"This is the part the consumer sees, and he is all too prone to judge that he is being held up by the poultry raisers, packers, or middlemen. He does not come in contact with the increased cost of feed.

"In June, 1914, a Baltimore wholesale feed dealer quoted wheat at $1.07 per bushel. In June, 1917, he quotes wheat at $2.70 per bushel, 152 per cent. increase. Long ago the poultry raisers who keep books gave us the use of whole wheat as a feed for poultry.

"In June, 1914, corn was quoted at 89 cents a bushel. In June, 1917, it is quoted at $1.91 a bushel, 114 per cent. advance. Where does the poultry raiser get his profit with his 90 per cent. increase in the price of eggs? There is only one thing for him to do. He cannot boost the price of eggs, and he cannot bring down the price of corn and wheat; the only thing he can do is to substitute a cheaper ration, if he can find one. Just at present there seems to be an avenue of escape from the excessive high cost of feeds in the use of mill by-products.

"Bran, in June, 1914, sold at $1.40 per bushel. In June, 1917, it is quoted at $2.15, an advance of 54 per cent. Middlings, in June, 1914, were quoted at $1.49. In June, 1917, they are quoted at $2.45, an advance of 65 per cent. These two products are the best part of the wheat for feeding purposes, and by making extensive use of them poultrymen can replace their wheat and still get a feed that will help bring down their total cost somewhere near a place where they can make a normal profit.

"Meat scrap, a poultry feed which in normal times is much the most expensive, has only advanced about 40 per cent. If one will combine bran, middlings, and beef scrap into a mash and feed it liberally, along with corn as a scratch feed, he will get a ration that has advanced about 85 per cent. since 1914, or approximately the same advance as eggs."

CONTROLLING INSECT ATTACKS.

College Park, June 21.—In the general scheme of crop preparedness, growers are finding it most important to be equipped to control attacks of insects in their crops. Valuable suggestions regarding the use of insecticides are given by E. M. Cory, of the Maryland Agricultural Extension Service. Prof. Cory says:

"Combinations of standard insecticides with standard fungicides will prove more economical than separate sprays of each, while being just as effective and in some cases more effective.

"Arsenate of lead or lime, arsenate of zinc, or Paris green may be combined with standard fungicides for the control of insects injuring plants by eating portions of the fruit or foliage. The usual rate for the use of the first three is one pound of the powdered poison to every 50 gallons of spray mixture, or two pounds of the paste form of the poison to the same amount. Paris green is a rather variable compound and should be avoided unless it is impossible to get one of the other poisons. If it is necessary to use it, it should be used at the rate of one-half pound to 50 gallons of spray mixture. In every case the poison should be thoroughly stirred up in a small amount of water before being added to the diluted spray mixture.

"For the control of sucking insects the tobacco products, such as Black Leaf 40, may be combined with the fungicides. Black Leaf 40 should be used for most insects at the rate of one-half pint to 50 gallons of water.

"Where Black Leaf 40 or the poisons are to be used without a fungicide, soap at the rate of two pounds to 50 gallons of water should be added to increase the wetting power of the spray. It must be remembered though, that soap and any mixture containing lime are incompatibles and are never to be used together.

Keep the cholera away from your hogs. If it comes into your neighborhood, be ready for it.

THE DEATH RECORD.

C. B. KING.

C. B. King, 34 years old, of Blaine, died on the Western Maryland passenger train Saturday evening while on his way to the Allegany Hospital at Cumberland, from pneumonia. His body was removed from the train to the Butler morgue where it was prepared for burial and taken to his late home at Blaine. His wife and five children survive.

HELEN WHITE.

Into the home of Albert and Bertha White there came, on the seventeenth of March, 1910, a dear little baby girl who was called Helen Madaline. Bright and winsome, she became the joy of their hearts and the delight of their friends to whom she gave the open frankness of perfect confiednce. The years brought growth in the attractiveness of spirit which was hers and dreams of what should be done to fit her for the deserved place in life were made and talked over many times. These dear dreams are coming true but in another school from that in which they were expected because there came the sudden illness, the days of anxious care, and on the morning of June 16, the promotion to the class that is instructed by the Master Himself. In the glory of the flowers she had loved she was ushered out by a service in the Baptist church of Loch Lynn of which Paul Flanagan, Pastor of the Methodist church of Mt. Lake Park was in charge. Brothers Jones, Hanleiter and Wright also had a share in this voicing of the sympathy and love of the community. Playmates sang and bore the flower-laden form to which they were giving this last ministry of affection. Brother Marquiss, a former Pastor, with his wife had been present with the other friends thru nights and days of mingled hope and fear. Now there is peace and the flower-like Virginia Ruth is doubly treasured in the home where Helen had shared the love of devoted parents.

BITTINGER.

The notable event of the week was the holding of a farmer's meeting in the village school house on Thursday afternoon and evening. The meeting was in charge of County Agent Middleton. Very able and helpful addresses were delivered by Dr. Buckley and Mr. Kemp, of the State Agriculture Department. A very good attendance of farmers was had, notwithstanding the fine weather and the press of work on the farm.

Noah Slabach and family, of near Oakland, are spending some days with relatives here.

Mr. Bordon, of the Salvation Army, spent a day or two last week in this neighborhood, soheiting financial aid for the cause.

Messrs. Peddicord, Davis and Winters, of Oakland, and Mr. Snyder, of Cumberland, motored through this village last week on a mixed mission of politics and business.

Miss Leckaneat, daughter of Dr. Leckaneat, of Cumberland, is a guest in the home of George Wiley, at this writing.

G. W. Engle and family, of Baltimore, drove from that city to this village last Sunday in their Metz touring car and will spend a few days with Mr. Engle's parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Orendorf made a business trip to Oakland one evening last week.

A new use for the automobile has been discovered by a gentleman in this village, who brings his cow at milking time with his car. It is a Ford to be sure.

Dr. C. J. Maust, veterinary physician and surgeon, has opened an office over Bonig's store, Grantsville, Md., and will be at the service of the public in the future.—Advertisement.

Blaine Mining Company, a corporation; Eliza Bowie Mackall, and the unknown heirs-at-law of Robert Swan, deceased, son of Robert Swan, deceased, and grandson of General John Swan, deceased, defendants.

No. 313 Equity, In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of Military Lot No. 285, situate in Garrett County, Maryland, and for a distribution of the proceeds thereof among the parties to this cause according to their respective rights and interests therein.

The bill states that General John Swan in his lifetime and at the time of his death was seized in fee of Military Lot No. 285 containing fifty acres, more or less, situate in Allegany, now Garrett county, Maryland, to which he acquired title by deed from Thomas Rutter, United States Marshal for the district of Maryland, by deed dated February 17, 1843, recorded in Liber G, folio 504, among the land Records of said Allegany county, a copy of which deed is filed with the bill marked "Plaintiffs' Exhibit No. 1," and which, with all other exhibits hereinafter referred to and filed herewith, is prayed to be taken and considered as a part of the bill of complaint; and that being so seized, the said Gen. John Swan, died in the year 1871, leaving a last will, whereby he devised certain of his property therein mentioned to the legatees and devisees therein named, and whereby his four sons, to-wit: John Swan; James Swan; Robert Swan and George Maxwell Swan, as residuary devisees acquired title to said Military Lot No. 285, a copy of said will being exhibited with the bill; that John Swan, son of Gen. John Swan, died intestate about the year 1881, unmarried, without issue, leaving surviving him as his only heirs at law his three brothers above named, who, thereafter, were each entitled to an undivided ⅓ interest in said Military Lot No. 285; that James Swan, son of Gen. John Swan, died about the year 1896, testate, a copy of his last will being exhibited with the bill, whereby he devised his undivided ⅓ interest in said Lot to his son, John Swan, ⅓ to his daughter, Anna Elizabeth, ⅓; and to the children of his deceased daughter, Ellen, ⅓ that subsequently, by deed dated June 25, 1877, the heirs and devisees of said James Swan conveyed their undivided ⅓ interest in said Lot to Manor Mining & Manufacturing Company, and that by deed dated December 17, 1906, said Manor Mining & Manufacturing Company conveyed all its interest in said Lot to Thomas B. Davis, Jr., and Joseph E. Davis, and by deed dated September 20, 1906, said Thomas B. Davis, Jr., and Joseph E. Davis conveyed all their interest in said Lot to the defendant, Blaine Mining Company, whereby said defendant acquired an undivided ⅓ interest in said Military Lot No. 285, copies of said deed being filed with the bill as exhibits in this cause; that Robert Swan, son of General John Swan, departed this life about the year 1855, leaving a will whereby all his property was left in trust to the trustees therein named for the use and benefit of his widow, long since deceased, and his three sons John, Charles and Robert, a copy of said will being exhibited with the bill; that the said Charles Swan died intestate, unmarried and without issue, about the year 1896; that the said Robert Swan, son of Robert, died intestate about the year 1885, leaving a widow, Kate Swan, now deceased, and a daughter, Willie Swan, who died about the year 1901, leaving a will, whereby Christiana S. MacKenzie as her residuary devisee, became entitled to the interest of the said Willie Swan in said Lot, to-wit an undivided ⅓ thereof, and that the said Christiana S. MacKenzie died about the year 1916, leaving a will, whereby her daughter Eliza Bowie Mackall, one of the defendants to this suit, as her residuary devisee, became entitled to said one undivided ⅓ interest in said Military Lot No. 285, copies of the wills of said Willie Swan and Christiana S. MacKenzie being exhibited with the bill; that the above named Robert Swan, son of Robert, and grandson of General John Swan, many years ago removed to the State of California, and their died, but whether testate or intestate, married or unmarried, is to the plaintiffs unknown, entitled to an undivided ⅓ interest in said Lot, his unknown heirs at law being defendants in this case; that George Maxwell Swan, son of General John Swan, died about the year 1815, intestate, leaving as his sole heir at law a daughter, Mary E. F. Swan, who became the wife of Alexander C. Good; that the said Alexander C. Good died about the year 1865, leaving a will whereby she devised all her property to her husband, the said Alexander C. Good; that the said Alexander C. Good died about the year 1905, intestate, leaving surviving him, as his only heirs at law as aforesaid, Maxwell S. Good, daughter, Jessie B. Reveley, intermarried with Albert S. Reveley, and a daughter, Mary Lamar Sloan, widow of David W. Sloan, who died on the 30th day of December, 1904, leaving surviving her as her heirs at law a daughter, Margaret M. Sloan, unmarried and of full age, a daughter, Frances Swan Brady, of full age, intermarried with Hugh S. Brady, a son, David W. Sloan, Jr., under the age of 21 years, and a son, Alexander Maxwell Sloan, under the age of 21 years, both of whom sue by their guardian and next friend, D. Lindley Sloan, the said Maxwell S. Good; Jessie B. Reveley; Margaret M. Sloan; Frances Swan Brady; David W. Sloan, Jr., and Alexander Maxwell Sloan, the plaintiffs in this case, having a one undivided one-third interest in and to said Military Lot No. 285, a copy of the will of said Mary E. F. Good being exhibited with the bill.

The bill further charges, that the said Military Lot No. 285, located in Garrett County, Maryland, is not susceptible of partition among the parties interested herein, without material loss and injury, and that it will be for the benefit and advantage of all the parties interested therein, and especially to the interest of said infant plaintiffs to have the said property sold and the proceeds distributed among the parties entitled according to their respective rights and interests therein, and then prays for a decree for the sale of said land, and for general relief, for process against the resident defendant, Eliza Bowie Mackall, and for an order of publication against Blaine Mining Company, a corporation, non-resident of the State of Maryland, and also against the unknown heirs-at-law of Robert Swan, deceased, and grandson of General John Swan, deceased, who are non-residents of the State of Maryland, giving them notice of the object and substance of the bill of complaint, and warning them to be and appear in this Court, either in person or by solicitor upon a day certain to be named therein, and answer the premises, and abide by and perform such decree as may be passed therein.

It is thereupon, this 30th day of May, 1917, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, sitting in Equity, ordered that the plaintiffs by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett County, Maryland, once in each of four successive weeks before the 30th day of June, 1917, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 16th day of July, next, to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not be passed as prayed.

The Secrets of the Hohenzollerns

STARTLING EXPOSURE OF INNER LIFE OF KAISER AND CROWN PRINCE AS TOLD BY COUNT ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX

Relates How Kaiser Escaped Assassin

EDITORIAL NOTE. — William LeQueux, who here chronicles for his friend, Count Ernst von Heltzendorff, the latter's revelations of the inner life of the imperial German court, has long been recognized throughout Europe as the possessor of its innermost secrets.

The English "Who's Who" says of him: "He has intimate knowledge of the secret service of Continental countries and is considered by the government (of Great Britain) an authority on such matters." Another authority says: "Few people have been more closely associated with or know more of the astounding inner machinery of Germany than he."

LeQueux probably has more sources of secret information at his command than any contemporary in civil life, and for the last six years the British Government has made valuable use of his vast store of secret information through a specially organized department with which LeQueux works as a voluntary assistant.

Count von Heltzendorff became an intimate of LeQueux several years prior to the outbreak of the war; he has been living in retirement in France since August, 1914, and it was there that LeQueux received from the crown prince's late personal adjutant permission to make public these revelations of the inner life of the Hohenzollerns—that the democracies of the world might come to know the real, but heretofore hidden, personalities of the two dominant members of the autocracy it is now arrayed against.

"THE emperor commands you to audience at once in the private dining room," said one of the imperial servants, entering the kaiser's study, where I was awaiting him.

As I passed downstairs to the room, to which entrance was forbidden even to the crown prince himself, I naturally wondered why I had been commanded to audience there.

"Have you any knowledge of the contents of the letter which you have brought from the crown prince?" the emperor asked bluntly.

I replied in the negative.

"Where are you going now?" he asked suddenly.

"To Thorn. His imperial highness inspects the garrison there on Thursday," I said.

"Ah! Of course. I intended to go, but it is impossible."

Then after a pause, the emperor looked me straight in the face and suddenly said:

"Heltzendorff, have you any knowledge of any man called Minckwitz?"

I reflected.

"I know Count von Minckwitz, grand master of the court of the duke of Saxe-Altenburg," was my reply.

"No. This is a man, Wilhelm Minckwitz, who poses as a musician."

I shook my head.

"You are quite certain that you have never heard the name? Try to recollect whether the crown prince has ever mentioned him in your presence."

I endeavored to recall the circumstance, for somehow very gradually I felt a distinct recollection of having once heard that name before.

"At the moment I fail to recall anything, your majesty," was my answer.

The emperor knit his brows as though annoyed at my reply, and then grunted deeply in dissatisfaction.

"Remain here in Potsdam," he said. "Telegraph to the crown prince recalling him at my orders, and I will cancel the inspection at Thorn. Tell the crown prince that I wish to see him tonight immediately upon his return."

Then, noticing for the first time that the emperor held a paper in his hand, I realized by its color that it was one of those secret reports furnished for the kaiser's eye alone—a report of one of the thousands of spies of Germany spread everywhere.

Minckwitz! I impressed that name upon my memory, and, being dismissed bowed myself out of the imperial presence.

Returning to the Marmor palace I sent a long and urgent message over the private wire to "Willie" at Altona, repeating his majesty's orders, and recalling him at once. Quite well I knew that such an unusual message would arouse his highness' apprehension that for some offense or other he was about to receive a paternal castigation. But I could not be explicit, because I had no knowledge of the reason the emperor was canceling our engagement at Thorn.

"Did He Ask You That?"

At nine o'clock that night the crown prince burst into the room wherein I was attending to the correspondence.

"What in the name of fate does all this mean, Heltzendorff?" he demanded. "Why did the emperor fail to reply to my message?"

"I delivered it," I said. And then I described what took place in the emperor's private dining room. When I mentioned the name of Minckwitz the crown prince's cheeks blanched.

"Did he ask you that?" he gasped.

"Yes. I told him that the only person I knew of that name was Count von Minckwitz."

"Ah, that little fat, old master of the court. Oh! The emperor knows him well enough. It is somebody else he is referring to."

"His majesty wishes to see you at once," I urged, full of wonder.

I could plainly see that his imperial highness had been much upset at mention of the mysterious person called Minckwitz. What could the emperor know of him? Was there some scandal at the root of it all, some facts which the crown prince feared might be revealed?

Travel-stained and without changing his tunic, "Willie" went to the telephone and ordered Knof to bring back the car. In it he drove across to the Neues Palais to see the emperor.

I had an appointment in Berlin that night, and waited until quite late for "Willie's" return. As he did not come, I left for the capital, and on arrival at my rooms, rang up Wolff's agency, and gave out a paragraph to the press that his imperial highness, the crown prince, had been compelled to abandon his journey to Thorn, owing to having contracted a chill.

At the Schloss Oels.

Several weeks went by, and one day we were at the ancient schloss at Oels, in far Silesia.

The guests included old Count von Reisenbach, court chamberlain of the prince of Schambourg-Lippe, who was a noted raconteur and bonvivant, with Major von Heidkamper of the Fourth Bavarian Light Cavalry, a constant companion of "Willie," and Karl von Pappenheim, a captain of the Prussian guard, who had been educated at Oxford, and who was so English that it was often difficult for people from London to believe that he was a Prussian.

Von Pappenheim was one of "Willie's" new friends. He was the son of a great landowner of Erfurt, and the pair had for the past month been inseparable. He was a shrewd, keen-eyed man, who seemed ever on the alert, but, of course, obsessed by military dignity. He had a sister, Margarete, a pretty girl, a year or so his junior, who had been to the Marmer palace on one occasion.

One day I had accompanied the party out after stag. Soon after luncheon, which we took at a forester's house, we went forth again, and I concealed myself at a point of vantage, lying behind a screen of ferns and branches specially constructed as cover.

I was alone, at some considerable distance from the others, and had been there waiting for nearly an hour with my gun in readiness, when suddenly I heard the cracking of dried wood not far away.

Something was moving. I raised my gun in breathless eagerness.

Next moment, however, I heard the voices of two men—"Willie" and his friend, Von Pappenheim. They were approaching me, speaking in low, confidential tones.

"You quite understand," "Willie" was saying. "My position is a terrible one. I don't know how to extricate myself. If I dare reveal the truth, then I know full well what their vengeance will be."

"But, my dear Caesar," was Karl von Pappenheim's reply, for he was on such intimate terms that he called his highness by the name Von Hochberg had bestowed upon him, "is it not your duty to risk all and tell the truth?"

The pair had halted only a few yards from me and taken cover behind a dead bush which had been cut down and placed conveniently at the spot, in case the shooting party were a large one and the screen behind which I had concealed myself was insufficient. So near were they that I could hear all that was said.

"The emperor would neither believe nor forgive me," "Willie" said. "Minckwitz is a clever devil. He would bring manufactured evidence which must implicate me."

Minckwitz! That was the name which the emperor had uttered, asking me if I knew him!

"But can he bring evidence?" asked his companion.

"Yes, curse him!—he can!"

"You can refute it, surely?"

"No, I can't. If I could, I should make a clean breast of the whole matter," Willie declared.

"He Holds Me in the Hollow of His Hand."

"But cannot I help you? Cannot I see Minckwitz, and bluff him?" his friend suggested.

"You don't know him," was the reply. "He holds me in the hollow of his hand."

"Ah! Then you have been horribly indiscreet—eh?"

"I have. I admit I have, Karl; and I do not see my way out of it."

"But, my dear Caesar, think of the danger existing day by day—hour by hour!" cried Von Pappenheim. "Think what there is at stake! That letter you showed me this morning reveals only too plainly what is intended."

"It is a letter of defiance, I admit."

"And a catastrophe must inevitably occur, if you do not act."

"But how can I act?" cried the crown prince. "Suggest something—I cannot. If I utter a syllable, Minckwitz will most certainly carry out his threat against me."

"Contrive to have him arrested upon some charge or other," Karl suggested.

"If I did he would produce the evidence against me," declared the crown prince.

A silence then fell between the pair. Suddenly Karl asked:

"Does Von Heltzendorff know?"

"He knows nothing," was "Willie's" answer. "The emperor questioned him, but he was in ignorance of Minckwitz's existence. He was naturally surprised, but I did not regard it as judicious to enlighten him."

"He is your confidential adjutant. If I were you, I should tell him the truth. No time should be lost, remember."

Then, after a few seconds of silence, Von Pappenheim went on:

"Why, I never thought of it! My sister Margarete knows Minckwitz. She might perhaps be useful to us—eh?"

"Why, yes!" cried "Willie," "a woman can frequently accomplish a thing where a man would fail. A most excellent idea. Let us leave the others to their sport and get back to the schloss and discuss a line of action—eh?"

And in agreement, the pair emerged from their ambush, and retraced their steps along the path they had come.

A Message From the Emperor.

Next evening Von Pappenheim's sister Margarete, fair-haired, petite and rather doll-like, arrived at the castle.

During dinner an imperial courier arrived from Berlin with a letter from the emperor, and "Willie" opened it, read it, and then, excusing himself, left the table. I rose and followed him, as was my duty, but when outside the room, his highness sent me back, saying in a thick, husky voice:

"I shall not want you, Von Heltzendorff; I will write the reply myself."

On my return the guests were discussing the effect of the emperor's message upon their host, Von Pappenheim being particularly anxious. He said something in a low voice to his sister, when the latter became at once thoughtful. Indeed, the remainder of the meal was a very dull affair, and it was with relief that we rose and went out into the big ancient hall, with its vaulted ceiling, where coffee was always served.

The courier had left on his return journey to the capital, yet "Willie" did not again reappear. At eleven o'clock I found him lying in a heavy sleep upon the sofa in the room set apart for me for my writing.

I called his faithful valet, and together we half-carried him to his room, where he was undressed and put to bed. Hardly had I returned to my room, when Von Pappenheim entered in search of his host.

"His highness is not well, and has retired to his room," I said. "He expressed a desire to see nobody tonight."

"Oh!" he cried in despair. "Why did he not see me and tell me the truth! Precious hours are flying, and we must act if the situation is to be saved."

"What situation?" I asked, in pretended ignorance.

"You know nothing, Von Heltzendorff, eh?" he asked, looking me straight in the face.

"Nothing," was my reply.

"You have no knowledge of the trap into which the crown prince fell when he was in Paris with you six months ago, and when he and I first met?"

"A trap! What do you mean?"

"Has he told you nothing?"

"Not a syllable."

"Ah! Then I cannot be frank with you until I obtain his highness' permission. He told me that you knew nothing, but I did not believe it. Knowing well what implicit confidence he places in you, I believed that you knew the ghastly truth."

Into what trap had "Willie" fallen during our last visit to Paris I could not conceive. His constant absences alone, his terrible craving for excitement, his wild and reckless search for pleasure had ever been a source of anxiety to me. Times without number had I lifted a warning finger, only to be derided by the son of the all-highest one.

On a Secret Mission for the Crown Prince.

Next day, soon after his highness was dressed, he entered my room.

"Heltzendorff," he said, "I have been chatting with Von Pappenheim and his sister upon a little matter of business which closely concerns myself. I want you to leave in an hour's time and go to Hanover. In the Kirchroder strasse, No. 16, out at Kleefeld, there lives a certain man named Minckwitz—a Pole by birth. He has two nieces—one about twenty and the other two years older. With them you have no concern. All I want is that you engage a photographer, or, better, yourself take a snapshot of this man Minckwitz, and bring it to me. Be discreet and trust no one with the secret of your journey."

"Exactly. There is a doubt as to the man's identity, eh?"

"Willie" nodded in the affirmative.

Satisfied that I should at last see the mysterious person whose identity the emperor wished to establish, I set out from Oels on my long journey right across Germany.

In due course I arrived in Hanover, and found the house situated in the pleasant suburb. Here I found that "Willie's" suspicions were correct, and the man Minckwitz was living under the name of Sembach and pretending to be a musician. I watched, and very soon, with my own camera, in secret took a snapshot of the mysterious individual as he walked in the street. With this I left, two days later, on my return to Oels.

The photograph was that of a thin, narrow-faced, deep-eyed man, with a scraggy, pointed beard—a typical Pole, and when I handed it to "Willie" he held his breath.

"Look!" he cried, turning to Von Pappenheim and his sister, who were both present. "Look! There is no mistake! That is the man. What shall we do? No time must be lost. How can I act?"

A Talk With Von Pappenheim's Sister.

Brother and sister exchanged glances blankly. From inquiries I had made in Hanover, it seemed that the man was a stranger, a music-master, who had arrived there about a month ago. I feared to make inquiry through the police, because my official capacity as personal adjutant to the crown prince was too well known, and suspicion might have thus been aroused.

The trio again held secret counsel, but I was not told the nature of their deliberations. All I knew was that the crown prince was in some terrible and most dangerous difficulty.

That afternoon I met the girl Margarete walking alone in the grounds near the schloss. The autumn sun was pleasant, though there was a sharp nip in the air, which told of the coming of the early Silesian winter.

We had walked together for some distance, when I suddenly halted and asked her point-blank why they were all in such great fear of Herr Minckwitz.

She started, staring at me with her big blue eyes.

"His highness has not told you, count. Therefore, it would ill become me to reveal his secret," was her cold rebuke.

"But if the situation is so grave, and if I had been intrusted with the secret mission to Hanover, I may, perhaps, be of service in the matter. I understand you are acquainted with Herr Minckwitz, alias Sembach—eh?"

"Who told you that?"

"Nobody. I learned it myself," I answered, with a smile.

For a second she reflected, then, with a woman's cleverness, she said:

"I can tell you nothing. Ask the crown prince himself." And she refused to discuss the matter further. Indeed, she left the castle two hours later.

The Crown Prince's Fear.

That night I went boldly to "Willie," finding him alone in a little circular room in one of the towers of the castle, to which he often retired to smoke and snooze.

I stood before him, and without mincing matters, told him what I had overheard, and all I knew.

A LETTER FROM THE CROWN PRINCE'S PERSONAL ADJUTANT TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX, POSSESSOR OF THE SECRETS OF EUROPE.

Veneux Nadon,
par Moret-sur-Loing,
Seine-et-Marne,
February 10th, 1917.

My dear LeQueux:

I have just finished reading the proofs of your articles describing my life as an official at the imperial court at Potsdam, and the two or three small errors you made I have duly corrected.

The gross scandals and wily intrigues which I have related to you were many of them known to yourself, for, as the intimate friend of Luisa, the ex-crown princess of Saxony, you were, before the war, closely associated with many of those at court whose names appear in these articles.

The revelations which I have made, and which you have recorded here, are but a tithe of the disclosures which I could make, and if the world desires more, I shall be pleased to furnish you with other and even more startling details, which you may also put into print.

My service as personal adjutant to the German crown prince is, happily, at an end, and now, with the treachery of Germany against civilization glaringly revealed, I feel, in my retirement, no compunction in exposing all I know concerning the secrets of the kaiser and his son.

With most cordial greetings from
Your sincere friend,
(Signed) ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF.

The effect of my words was almost electrical. He sat up, staring at me, almost dazed at my statement.

"It is true, Heltzendorff. Alas! True!" he replied. But he would even then give me no inkling of the reason of his fear.

"If this Herr Minckwitz means mischief, then surely it would be easy to secure his arrest for some offense or other, and you need not appear in it," I suggested.

"I've thought of all that. But if the police lay hands upon him, then he will revenge himself on me. He will carry out his threat—and—and, Heltzendorff, I could never hold up my head again."

"Why?"

"I can't be more explicit. I'm in a hold, and I cannot extricate myself."

I reflected for a moment. Then I said:

"You appear to fear some action of Minckwitz's. If that is so, I will return to Hanover and watch. If there is any hostile intent, I will endeavor to prevent it. Fortunately, he does not know me."

Next night I was back again in Hanover, having stopped in Berlin to pick up a friend of mine upon whose discretion I could rely implicitly—a retired member of the detective force, named Hartwieg. Together we started to watch the movements of the mysterious Polish musician, and to our surprise we found that he had three friends, one a furrier living in the Burgstrasse, who visited him regularly each evening. They always arrived at the same hour, and generally left about eleven o'clock. Through five days we kept watch, alternately closely shadowing the man who called himself Sembach, and becoming acquainted with his friends, most of whom seemed of a very queer set.

A Strange Purchase.

There was no doubt that Minckwitz and the two young women were associates of some criminal gang, and, further, I was staggered one evening to watch the arrival at the house of a young man whom I recognized as Brosch, an under-valet of the emperor at the Neues Palais.

For what reason had he come from Potsdam?

He remained there till noon on the following day. When he emerged, accompanied by Minckwitz, the pair went into the city, and we followed, when, curiously enough, I came face to face with Von Pappenheim's sister, who was apparently there for the same purpose as myself! Happily, she was too intent in her conversation with Minckwitz, whom she met as though accidentally, to notice my presence.

Then, at last, the musician raised his hat and left her, rejoining the young man, Brosch.

The pair went to a bookshop in the Herschedstrasse, and presently, when they came forth again, Brosch was carrying a good-sized volume wrapped in brown paper.

My curiosity was aroused. Therefore I went into the shop, made a purchase, and learned from the shopman that the younger of the pair had purchased a well-known German reference book, Professor Nebendahl's "Dictionary of Classical Quotations."

Strange that such a book should be purchased by an under-valet!

Leaving the detective, Hartwieg, to watch, I took the next train to Potsdam, where I was fortunate enough to find the emperor giving audience to the imperial chancellor. At the conclusion of the audience, I sought, and was accorded, a private interview, at which I recalled his majesty's anxiety to ascertain something regarding the man Minckwitz.

"Well—and have you found him?" asked the emperor, very eagerly.

The Emperor Showed Me a Letter.

I replied in the affirmative. Then he told me something which held me breathless, for, unlocking a drawer, he showed me an anonymous letter of warning he had received, a letter which, posted in Paris, stated that an attempt was to be made upon his life, and hinting that the crown prince might be aware of it.

"Of course," he laughed, "I do not regard it seriously, but I thought we ought to know the whereabouts of this man Minckwitz, who is probably an anarchist."

"Will your majesty leave the matter entirely in my hands?" I suggested. "The police must not be informed."

"It shall be as you wish. I give you authority to act just as you deem best, if you really anticipate danger."

"I do anticipate it," I replied, and a few minutes later bowed myself out of the imperial presence.

During that day I idled about the palace, gossiping with the officials and dames du palais, awaiting the return of the young man Brosch. That night he did not come back, but he arrived at the palace about seven o'clock on the following morning. The head valet was furious at his absence, but the young man made a very plausible excuse that his sister out at Lichtenberg was very dangerously ill.

I had no sleep that night, but as soon as I was informed of the undervalet's return, I repaired to the emperor's study and secreted myself beneath a great damask-covered settee which runs along the wall opposite the door. For nearly an hour I remained there, when the door was opened stealthily, and there entered the young man whom I had seen in Hanover on the previous day. He carried a book in his hand. This he swiftly exchanged for another similar book of the same appearance, and a moment later crept out again, closing the door noiselessly.

Quickly I came forth and took up the classical dictionary, a copy of which was usually upon the emperor's table. It presented just the same appearance as the book that Brosch had taken away, only it was considerably heavier.

A Narrow Escape.

Without delay, I dashed out, sought the emperor's valet, and was admitted to his majesty's presence.

Three minutes later we were both in the study. I took up the book and held it to his ear. Just as I had heard, he could detect the faint ticking of a watch within.

The book had been hollowed out and a bomb inserted! It was, no doubt, set to explode between eight and nine o'clock, when the emperor would be at his desk.

"Take it out quickly!" shrieked the kaiser, in terror, when he realized the true import of the plot.

In obedience, handling the book very carefully, I rushed with it downstairs, out into the open. I placed it on the grass some distance away, while the emperor followed me, utterly astounded at the discovery.

Having deposited it, I dashed back to where the emperor was standing upon the steps, greatly to the surprise of the sentries, when hardly had I reached him than there showed a blood-red flash, followed by a terrific report and concussion—an explosion which would have blown the emperor's head off as he sat.

His majesty stood white and rigid, instantly realizing what a narrow escape he had had, while the noise caused the greatest alarm, and people began rushing hither and thither to ascertain the cause.

In a few seconds his majesty was calm again.

"Say nothing of this, Heltzendorff," he said. "Let it remain a mystery. Come upstairs, and I will speak on the telephone to the police."

"Your majesty gave the matter unreservedly into my hands," I reminded him.

"Ah, that is so; I forgot," he exclaimed, and after thanking me he added: "Take what steps you like, but have the offenders punished, and also try to find out who sent me that anonymous warning."

The young valet, who had been, no doubt, heavily bribed by Minckwitz to substitute the book, had already disappeared, and, as a matter of fact, has never been seen since in Germany.

The man Minckwitz had also, it seemed, suddenly left Hanover on the night of my departure, for Hartwieg, following him, reported to me by wire that he was in Paris.

What I Learned in Paris.

Without delay I traveled to the French capital, saw my old friend, Pinaud of the Surete, and told him the whole story, explaining in confidence that for some mysterious reason the crown prince feared that if the man were arrested, he might reveal something unpleasant.

"I quite understand," replied the French detective, with a smile. "I know that, six months ago, while the crown prince was in Paris, he was one night enticed into the gaming house kept by the notorious Minckwitz. There a quarrel ensued, and the crown prince, fearing attack, drew his revolver, which went off and shot one of Minckwitz's confederates stone-dead. The crown prince has ever since been paying big sums to hush up the affair.

"Until recently Minckwitz conceived the idea that if the emperor died and the crown prince came to the throne, it would mean to him considerably more money each year. Therefore he conceived that diabolical plot. I warned the crown prince of it, and he threatened to expose Minckwitz and have him arrested. Minckwitz, in turn, threatened that if his highness made the slightest movement to thwart his plans, he would expose to the world that the German crown prince, during his latest escapade in the Montmartre, had killed a man. Finding this to be the case, I myself wrote that anonymous letter of warning, which I addressed to the emperor."

"And which has had the effect of saving his majesty's life," I remarked.

That night Minckwitz found himself arrested upon a charge of blackmailing a Portuguese nobleman, and was later on sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment.

In his solitary hours in prison he often wonders, I expect, why his dastardly plot failed. Had it been successful, however, it certainly would have had a great effect upon the future history of the world.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

OF VALUABLE

Coal AND Timber Property

In Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Clarendon M. Lewis and Mary B. Lewis, his wife, to Marcus A. Patrick, dated the 6th day of February, 1907, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 35, folio 550, one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having been made in the principal sum and the interest secured to be paid by said mortgage, I, Taylor Morrison, attorney named in said mortgage for the purpose, will, on at 1030 o'clock a. m., or immediately following the sale of the Jamesson and Lewis coal and timber lands, in front of the First National Bank in Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, sell at public auction to the highest bidder all the coal and other minerals, natural gas and oil underlying, and all timber, except locust and chestnut, located upon all those certain pieces or parcels of land situated, lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, and which are particularly described as follows, viz:

SATURDAY, July 7, 1917,

All that tract of land known as "McGirrs Homestead," which is composed of parts of the following tracts, known as "Novazembla," "Brady's Defeat," and "McGirrtan," containing One Hundred acres, more or less; and also all the mining rights and privileges granted and conveyed to the said Clarendon M. Lewis, and owned by him by virtue of the deed conveying said property and rights to him from Norman Barnard and Mary Barnard, his wife, dated on the 23rd day of July, 1900, and recorded among the Land Records of Garrett county in Liber E. Z. T., No. 38, folio 537.

The timber on this land is said to be very valuable and the various beds or seams of coal underlying it to be of excellent quality. The property is accessible to the Western Maryland Railroad, and with the Jamesson and Lewis coal and timber to be sold on the above date at ten o'clock, comprises a valuable coal and timber field and presents a rare opportunity to purchase a very valuable property.

TERMS OF SALE: Cash on the day of sale as provided by said mortgage.

TAYLOR MORRISON,
Attorney Named in Mortgage.

FAIR ASSOCIATION IS REORGANIZED

Mr. Henry M. Speicher, of Accident, Elected President.

The Oakland Fair Association of Oakland, Garrett county, which recently took over the holdings of the original fair association and secured a charter under the laws of the State of Maryland, was organized Tuesday evening of this week by the election of the following board of directors who will serve for the term of one year:

John Stevenson, of Mt. Lake Park; Henry P. Miller, of Grantsville; Charles A. Ashby and Charles R. Savage, of Deer Park; Thomas E. Bishoff, of Hoyes; U. O. Blocher, of Grantsville; Joseph T. Glotfelty, Luther J. Brown and Dr. G. C. Melody, of Oakland. The officers for the first year are: President, Henry M. Speicher, of Accident; Wade H. Hinebaugh, of Oakland, vice-president; Thomas A. Gonder, secretary, and Henry Lauer treasurer.

The charter secured by the new association provides that stock to the value of $5,000, divided into one thousand shares of $5 each, may be issued; that no individual may own more than ten shares of stock and that the officers serve without salary.

The intention of the association is to distribute the stock among as many individuals as possible, thus making it a co-operative affair and in this manner interest farmers in every section of the country, thus insuring the success of the fair and make it a permanent institution.

The fair this year will be held four days, the dates fixed by the directors at the meeting Tuesday being October 2, 3, 4 and 5. In anticipation of the patronage to be accorded work upon the grounds and buildings will be started within a short time.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Reopening of Edifice Will Occur Next Sunday Morning.

The Oakland Presbyterian church will reopen for public worship on Sunday morning next after having been closed for four week the time having been consumed in decorating and beautifying the interior of the edifice.

The services on Sunday will be of a semi-patriotic order as follows:

Sabbath school at 9.45 o'clock.

At 11 o'clock a sermon by the pastor. The offering will be for the Red Cross society.

In the evening there will be an illustrated service with hymns which will be thrown upon the canvas and sung by the congregation.

All are most cordially invited to these services.

AUTOISTS MUST ARRANGE LIGHTS

Automobilists Have 30 Days To Comply With New Law.

Automobilists, according to Motor Vehicle Commissioner Baughman, will be given thirty days and perhaps until August 1 to arrange the lights upon their machines so as to comply with the provisions of the new Motor Vehicle Light bill that was passed by the Legislature during the special session.

The act went through as an emergency measure and therefore became a law as soon as it was signed by the Governor. However, the Commissioner thinks that some days of grace should be allowed before attempting to penalize automobile owners for violating it.

Perhaps the most important feature of this bill is that prohibiting glaring headlights on any of the roads in the state. This provides that:

"It shall be unlawful to use on a vehicle of any kind, operated on the public highways of this state, including motorcycles, any lighting device of over four candlepower, equipped with a reflector or arranged that no portion of the reflected light, projected to the left of the axis of the vehicle, when measured 75 feet or more ahead of the lamps, shall rise above 42 inches from the level of the surface on which the vehicle stands under all conditions of load."

Still another provision directs that machines while standing still must have a light on the left side, showing red in the rear and white in front, both lights to be visible for 200 feet. This does not refer to the ordinary tail light.

The provisions of the law are made state-wide and no local law or regulation can be enacted that is in conflict with them.

Former County Treasurer C. A. Beachy, who has been in Oakland for some weeks past settling up the affairs of his office, has been detained at his home for the past two weeks on account of the illness of Mrs. Beachy.

SPEICHER AGAIN FOR THE SENATE

Garrett County Republicans Demanded His Return.

Monday morning's edition of the Baltimore American contained an article that just at this time is of interest to Garrett county Republicans, the article in question dealing with the attitude of State Senator Speicher with reference to entering the primary election contest for renomination as the candidate of the Republicans for a third term in the Senate.

Just now Senator Speicher is in Kentucky, having gone to that State one day the latter part of last week, hence his views upon the subject cannot be obtained. Close personal friends of the Senator, however, have given out the information that he has not intimated to them his intentions respecting his future political aspirations or ambitions. The American's article is reproduced herewith:

Garrett county Republicans who are worth while are demanding the return of Harvey J. Speicher to the Senate. The experience which he has gained during two terms, a total of four sessions, has convinced the citizens of the county, irrespective of party, as well as others throughout the state who have watched his course, that his return is imperative in order that in the next Senate there may be as many members as possible with experience and ripe judgment. Mr. Speicher is mentioned in this connection because the standard of the last Senate—in fact, of the General Assembly—was far below the mark in meeting issues that build rather than destroy. On all "uplift" measures and all "isms" and on untried experiments the legislature made a record. For speeches that carried no conviction, that killed time, that bored members and the galleries the two houses were without peers in the legislative history of the state.

Mr. Speicher has not consented to be a candidate for the Republican nomination and may not enter the primaries, despite the entreaties of his friends in Garrett and in other counties that he return to the Senate. He has large business interests, which he has been compelled to neglect because of his absence from home. John Shartzer, who has been a member of the House for two sessions, and who has been heard from on almost every proposition before the House, has already announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the Senate. Thomas J. Browning, of Oakland, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination.

CAPT. J. A. HAYDEN AGAIN FOR HOUSE

Veteran Soldier Makes Announcement After Being Urged

Capt. James A. Hayden, of the Park, a veteran soldier of the Civil war who was honored by the Republican voters of the county two years ago when they elected him by a handsome majority as a member of the House of Delegates, acceding to the bequests of his friends in almost every district of the county, has announced his candidacy to succeed himself in the Lower House of the State Legislature, as will be seen by referring to the announcement column of The Republican today.

During the regular session of the Legislature during the winter of 1916 as well as at the special session which recently closed, Capt. Hayden held the respect and was highly esteemed by his fellow-members from every county in the State. Upon measures before the House which required keen discernment and quick judgment Capt. Hayden was always found to be on the side of the people he represented. His attitude upon questions that affected the State at large or even individuals was never warped by personal prejudices. He went to the Legislature alert to the interests of the people, free of deals or promises for the sole purpose of representing the entire people and not as a man with the intention to tear down, but to build up.

His record as a public official is clean. His presence in the halls of the State Capitol added dignity to the personnel of the House, and that degree of dignity will be maintained should he be returned and there is no substantial reason why he should not be.

Mr. S. O. Wiley Also a Candidate.

The announcement of Mr. Silas O. Wiley, of Oakland, for nomination for the House of Delegates, was received at this office last night. Mr. Wiley is a native of the county, having been born and reared on a farm in District No. 12 and is the son of the late Thomas B. Wiley, a Civil War veteran. For several years past he has been engaged as a carpenter in Oakland. The candidate is well known in portions of the county where he is esteemed by many. He will make an active canvass prior to the election and impress upon the voters that the laboring men will have a champion in him should he be nominated and elected.

Married.

WENSELL—NICHOLSON—On Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, at the parsonage of St. Mark's Lutheran church, Mr. Floyd Lee Wensell and Miss Bertha May Nicholson were united in marriage by the pastor, the Rev. S. E. Wicker. The ceremony was witnessed by a number of friends and relatives of the contracting parties. After a brief honeymoon to eastern cities they will be at home to their friends at their residence near town. Mr. Wensell is a prosperous young farmer, while his bride has been one of the county's efficient school teachers for the last few years. They have our best wishes for a most happy voyage upon life's sea of matrimony.

Grover Compton, another young man of Oakland, has enlisted in the Army, having left Oakland Friday morning last for Cumberland where he was examined and sent on from that point to Baltimore.

GOV. HARRINGTON TO VISIT OAKLAND

Will Address A Preparedness Meeting In Maryland Theatre Saturday.

Governor Emerson C. Harrington, of Maryland, will come to Oakland next Saturday morning in company with Prof. Thomas B. Symons of the Maryland Agricultural College and address the people of Oakland and Garrett county on the subject of preparedness and other subjects of paramount interest at this time.

The meeting in Oakland will be held at the Maryland Theatre at nine o'clock in the morning to which the public generally will be welcome and will be of interest to the ladies as well as to the men.

Governor Harrington has addressed meetings at various points in the State on preparedness measures and would have been in Garrett county some weeks ago but was prevented from doing so by the extra session of the Legislature when his presence at Annapolis was imperative.

Delegations from every section of the country are expected to be present at this meeting and a full house should be accorded the distinguished visitor.

The Bishop of the Maryland Diocese will visit St. Matthew's P. E. church in Oakland on Friday, August 31st, to administer the rite of confirmation to such as may wish to receive it.

CULP BOY SENT TO REFORM SCHOOL

Judge Henderson Imposed Sentence Monday at Cumberland.

Thomas Payne Culp, who was found guilty of manslaughter in the Circuit Court of Allegany county two weeks ago, the case having been removed from this county to Allegany county for trial before a jury, was sentenced on Monday by Judge Robert R. Henderson to confinement in the Maryland School for Boys at Lock Raven, near Baltimore, until he is of age.

Culp is sixteen years old and will therefore be kept at the school for five years. He was convicted and found guilty of manslaughter and not guilty of the murder of Thomas Wilson, aged fourteen years. The crime was committed at Red Oak School house in Garrett county during the winter.

The evidence in the case was reviewed in these columns last week. The State was represented in the prosecution by State's Attorney Jones, Fred. A. Thayer and E. H. Sincell. Mr. Thayer made the opening argument for the State. His presentation of the case was made in a thorough and masterful manner. State's Attorney Jones closed the argument for the State, whilst Messrs. Hamill and Hamill of Oakland, and Doub, of Cumberland, were the attorneys for the defense.

Zihlman to Address Flint Glass Workers.

Washington, July 3—Congressman F. N. Zihlman will speak before the forty-first annual convention of the American Flint Glass Workers' Union to be held in New Bedford, Mass., July 2-16, on the subject, "The War and Labor's Need and Duty."

Mr. Zihlman is the only member of Congress from the glass workers' trade, having started to work in a glass factory when 11 years of age, and is one of the best known flint glass workers in the country.

PATRIOTIC SERVICE

Was Held Sunday Morning In St. Mark's Church.

On Sunday morning last, as announced previously, the services in St. Mark's Lutheran church in Oakland, conducted by the pastor, Rev. S. E. Wicker, were of a patriotic order, interesting and inspiring, while the music was exceptionally well rendered. Miss Ashby sang a solo and the congregational singing included "America."

The church was appropriately decorated with the National colors and the congregation was large, filling the auditorium to its capacity.

The pastor chose as his text Isa. 5:15, and the sermon delivered by him appears in full as follows:

"And the mean man shall be brought down, and the mighty man shall be humbled, and the eyes of the lofty shall be humbled."—Isa. 5:15.

True patriotism consists in a backward look and a forward look. It is a blending together of memory and of hope. We owe much to a sound religion. At every crisis in our history we have had the counsel of a sound faith. Our memory challenges us not to forget God and our obligations not only in the time of peril but also in the time of prosperity. We are blessed in order that we might be a blessing. And to that end we are not to forget our sister nations and our obligations to them. When Goldwin Smith gave a stone seat for the campus of Cornell University, he selected as an inscription for it, these words, "Above all nations humanity." As a nation we must remember that for there is within the four corners of this great "land of the free and home of the brave" a composite of all the nations of the world. And, here, if anywhere ought the obligations of the whole world be felt.

As a time of living, ours is one of signs and wonders. Great events and crisis times come upon us so fast and thick that they tread upon one others heels. From sheer inability to comprehend all which is taking place the world is in amazement and the human mind is apt to take it all as a matter of course. The Master, himself when He was among men did not forbid the stroke that smits down wrong but He did forbid that animosity which seeks to return evil for evil, or to repay injury for injury. He set forth that the ideals of loving one's enemies and for those who despitefully use one were as binding in war as in time of peace.

With our great Republic involved in world war it is extremely necessary for every Christian pulpit, for every Christian home, every family altar and retreat of prayer, to be a place of instant and continuous war-praying. By that we mean not prayers of bitterness, not prayers filled with hatred, not prayers fashioned after the prayer of the self righteous Pharisee, but prayers whose petitions are filled with nothing but love pity.

That those prayers might ascend to the throne of grace, unadulterated, free from impure or selfish motives, that God shall have His way in the world and that it may please Him to guide the sincere intent of all of us, who dedicate our lives in the service of humanity and for the perpetutation of peace, prosperity and justice.

Then shall the all-wise, ever loving God destroy the wrong and right the right, not according to our poor estimate of right and wrong, but as He sees fit in His eternal wisdom, blessing not one nation alone, nor one nation above another, but equally blessing al the nations upon the face of the earth.

"Our Nation's Glories and Perils," the subject of our study for this morning, naturally divides itself into two main thoughts "Glories" and "Perils." It is quite natural for the bad or less attractive side of any subject to be discussed first, and since that is true we will look at the "Perils" of our nation first.

What then are the Perils of this great land or ours or of any other land be it ever so large or small? The first and most prominent of all perils is that

I, Of forgetting God. Have we as a nation forgotten God? Or are we forgetting Him? Or will we as a nation and as individuals forget Him?

We know from our study of the early Jews that so long as they walked with God they had peace and plenty but just as soon as they forgot Him, just that soon were they in war and famine. We hear Hezekiah and the other prophets calling the people back to the God of their father's, and pleading with them to "give the hand" unto the Lord. Happy! Thrice happy is that nation whose rulers recognize that the peoples true greatness, that the peoples highest worth, that the strongest endurance rests in their being godly. Righteousness is a more powerful offensive and defensive weapon than any which is forged in the factories of the world.

Men and women do not leap into places of responsibility and of power by chance. Their appointment is as much under the control of God as the stars in heaven are. If they forget God, what then?

Hear the words of the psalmist, when he compares the godly man with the ungodly, "The ungodly are not so but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away."

Those who forget God lose hold upon their own selves. They are like a sailing skiff upon a storm tossed sea. "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people." The being of God is a guard to the people and the sense of God is the foundation of all civil order. May it never be said of us as a nation or as individuals that we have forgetten or are forgetting God.

II. The second peril we find to be that of dissipation. Wasting our time and energy upon nothing, so to speak. We hear so much these days about household economy. Where is the cry of individual economy? A saving of the individual and personal resources, of health and happiness, of intellectual, moral and physical energies. We are living—most of us—as though today was our last day to spend amid the whirl and turmoil, the hurry and throe of life. We are wasting our energy upon useless and perishable objects. Nothing will take an individual out of the ranks any quicker than dissipation. Is it a peril to our country and to other countries? Recall the feast of Belshazzar! See the hand writing on the wall! Hear its interpretation "Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting." And why? He was squandering his energy in a useless, selfish and ungodly manner. We need not go so far back in history to see such a picture. There are plenty of them to be seen in the world today. God forbid that we should imperil ourselves as a nation by dissipation.

III. The third and last peril to be thought of this morning is that of Materialism. This is brought about by forgetting God and by dissipation. What did Moses see when he came down from Mount Sinai with the table of law? A golden calf. The immediate result of forgetting God, the product of dissipation, an example of Materialism. The children of Israel were so engrossed in worldly things that they made a God for themselves.

We are so busy these days in making money, especially some, that if we are not careful we will erect an altar to the American eagle instead of to Jehovah of Hosts.

We cannot afford to sacrifice the possibilities of the future and the reward of a life well lived by tightly grasping the material and losing hold of the spiritual. A nation's perils and glories are founded upon the character and personality of every individual in that nation.

We have seen very briefly the three perils to which a nation is subjected. What then we ask are its glories?

I. The first glory of any nation is in its Christian statesmen. In men who realize their own weakness and the nation's weakness and who strive to make strong those weak places. In men who are impelled by high and lofty ideals. In men who stand upon the principle of righteousness and justice. In men who hold their trust, their place of service, not in the fear of man but in the fear of God, knowing that He will require an account of the faithfulness in which those tasks were performed. In men who have a broad mind and a sympathetic heart for all classes and conditions of mankind.

We have those men. But this is not enough. We want more of them. How shall we get them? You know and so do I.

II. Another glory of a nation is an ever increasing appreciation of the value and sacredness of human life. Why do the heathen kill and eat one another? Because they do not know to do otherwise. Why is it that our nation is called "the land of the free and the home of the brave?" Because we are filled with awe and admiration for everything that is pure and lovely, for everything that is holy and righteous. Because we hold close to ourselves the value and sacredness of every human being.

But we must hasten:

III. The last glory which we have time to think of is a better tone in civic affairs. Every nation needs this. No nation will rise above the ideals of its people. And the ideals of those people are fostered by the tone in civic affairs, socially, politically and financially.

Socially in that the relationship of man to man, of community to community and of state to state is to be considered.

Politically that only the highest motives of polity and right shall control the minds and hearts of men.

Financially, that the cause of truth and righteousness should not be hampered but should be encouraged by our gifts of money. So that all men everywhere might not suffer for the want of that which is necessary for the preservation and propagation of the race.

But we have not done all which is to be done. When you read the papers and learn what law and order permits in our great cities and even in our little hamlets and villas, then you ought to be impelled with a greater determination and seriousness of purpose to make right the wrong and strive to make unfortunate man happier because of your having lived.

These closing words of a recent editorial in the L. C. O. impresses us:

"Let us, therefore, celebrate this Fourth in a different spirit from that of other years. Let us put away the empty boasting and noise-producing and dangerous fireworks, and instead let there be public meetings with serious addresses dealing with America's ideals and the great principles of political and religious freedom, not forgetting our American heritage of the Protestant Reformation led by Luther. Gather the children and teach them the lessons of patriotism and the meaning of the flag. Inculcate the lesson of sacrifice and devotion that our country may be strong and right in this hour and that we may deny ourselves to support the church's work, local and missionary, and the great work of the Y. M. C. A. for the moral and spiritual welfare of our soldiers in camp and of the Red Cross in their work of mercy for the allevation of the suffering.—In short, keep the Christian religion and faith more to the front this Fourth of July." 6-28-17.

"I know not by what methods rare,
But this I know: God answers prayer.

"I know not when he sends the word
That tells us fervent prayer is heard.

"I know it cometh soon or late;
Therefore, we need to pray and wait.

"I know not if the blessing sought
Will come in just the gise I thought.

"I leave my prayers with him alone
Whose will is wiser than my own."

May God keep us close to Him and guide us in the path of right for His name's sake. Amen.

At the conclusion of the sermon the pastor announced that four members of the church were enlisted men, namely; Charles Morris Sincell, stationed at Fort Niagara, in the Officers' Training Camp as a member of Co. 3 Infantry; John D. Little, Co. C, 5th Regiment, Engineering Corps; Harry E. Turney, Co. A, 6th Regiment Engineering Corps, stationed in Washington; Edward Kahl, unassigned, stationed at Fort Slocum, New York City.

Letters were read by the pastor from three of the four young men named above—Messrs. Sincell, Kahl and Little, in which each of them gave an outline of camp life and the duties devolving upon them as soldiers in training.

Fallen Apples For Acetone.

There is a possibility of using many carloads of culls and fallen apples for the manufacture of cider vinegar from which acetone is extracted and which is used in the manufacture of high explosives, according to W. H. Manss of the commercial development department of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

It seemed that this would be a happy utilization of an otherwise wasted product and in strict conformity with the now famous slogan "let nothing spoil." The matter was taken up with the chemist in charge of the fruit and vegetable utilization laboratory and it was found that there are far cheaper sources of acetone than the sugars of apples. At present one of the principal raw materials for the manufacture of acetone is black strap molasses, and even the availability of large quantities of culls apples which could be secured at a low figure would not make this plan feasible.

Investigation is being made, however, along other lines that will still make it possible to "let nothing spoil" and utilize in some profitable way the immense quantities of culls and fallen apples which are present every year in territories where thousands of acres of apples are grown as they are in the states of West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland, Illinois and Ohio.

The Secrets of the Hohenzollerns

STARTLING EXPOSURE OF INNER LIFE OF KAISER AND CROWN PRINCE AS TOLD BY COUNT ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX

EDITORIAL NOTE. — William LeQueux, who here chronicles for his friend, Count Ernst von Heltzendorff, the latter's revelations of the inner life of the imperial German court, has long been recognized throughout Europe as the possessor of its innermost secrets.

The English "Who's Who" says of him: "He has intimate knowledge of the secret service of Continental countries and is considered by the government (of Great Britain) an authority on such matters." Another authority says: "Few people have been more closely associated with or know more of the astounding inner machinery of Germany than he."

LeQueux probably has more sources of secret information at his command than any contemporary in civil life, and for the last six years the British Government has made valuable use of his vast store of secret information through a specially organized department with which LeQueux works as a voluntary assistant.

Count von Heltzendorff became an intimate of LeQueux several years prior to the outbreak of the war; he has been living in retirement in France since August, 1914, and it was there that LeQueux received from the crown prince's late personal adjutant permission to make public these revelations of the inner life of the Hohenzollerns—that the democracies of the world might come to know the real, but heretofore hidden, personalities of the two dominant members of the autocracy it is now arrayed against.

With the Kaiser on His Private Yacht.

"GERMANY'S greatness is due to beef, beer and Bismarck," declared the kaiser to me with a laugh, as I sat one summer's afternoon with him in the business cabin aboard the Hohenzollern.

We were going on our annual cruise up the Norwegian fjords as far as Hammerfest, and even farther north, to the island of Spitzbergen, if weather permitted.

It is strange how often small things occupy great minds. The reason of the emperor's good humor that afternoon was because he had learned that the cafe-restaurant in Potsdam of which he was proprietor had paid a handsome profit. The place is called "The Historic Mill," and was and still is managed by Herr Moritz, one of the old stewards of the Neues Palais. The emperor, on purchasing the place, called old Moritz and ordered him to serve the best coffee procurable in Potsdam. And, even today, anybody can go there and pay 30 pfennigs for a cup that is unequaled in all Germany.

In consequence, the place is well patronized, and on many occasions his majesty will halt upon his walks and sample it.

A Mania for Traveling.

At that moment the emperor was busy making up his diary for the forthcoming month, a diary of constant travel. Such a mania has the kaiser for traveling that upon occasions he has been known to sleep in the imperial railway saloon kept at the Wildpark station at Potsdam, ready for an early journey next morning. On such occasions the whole railway traffic is disorganized, for express trains must not run on that line. There must be no shunting or whistling lest it disturb the imperial sleep, and so on. Indeed, the socialists once made a public protest against the emperor's habit of holding up traffic by preferring to sleep in a railway car to reposing in his own bed half a mile distant.

That summer's afternoon as we sat together, and while he smoked his very rank cigar, he dictated certain entries into his private diary.

Suddenly he grumbled about the expenses of a journey which he had to make to Vienna to see the sovereign whom he so openly ridiculed, Francis Joseph.

"I must be there on September the eighteenth," he said. "Even though I hold the old idiot and his empire in the hollow of my hand, I suppose I must grace his capital with my presence. But I begrudge the money, Heltzendorff. I have no further influence to gain in Austria-Hungary. It is in England that my future work lies. Every mark spent there is to our advantage. We shall have much yet to do in Germanizing Great Britain."

The kaiser and his imperial spouse were a parsimonious pair in most directions. Only when it was in the interests of the empire were they lavish in their expenditure. The German public have never yet realized that since William II ascended the throne they have paid 180,000,000 marks into the civil list, and of these 130,000,000 have been expended upon a pageant of unglorious splendor, with a staff of 1,500 persons, that goes to make the all-highest the great war lord.

The general public have no conception of the extent of the German imperial court, the immense suite of ladies and gentlemen in waiting, marshals, equerries, masters of the hunt, chamberlains, treasurers, overseers of the plate, gentlemen of the cellars, gun chargers, chief chefs, with the crowd of footmen, coachmen, chauffeurs, grooms and imperial couriers.

And most of them were usually a grumbling crowd, being upon starvation diet, their remarks approaching dangerously near lese majesty.

At the emperor's orders, as we sat on board the imperial yacht that afternoon, I rang for Herr von Wedell.

A short, thickset man in uniform too tight for him entered the cabin, bowing. To him the emperor complained of an undue expenditure in regard to the last court ball, whereupon Von Wedell pointed out that while huge sums were spent upon his majesty's journeys little was spent at home.

In a moment the emperor, with his keen brows narrowed, silenced him by exclaiming:

"But I thought you liked to be minister of the royal house, eh?"

Von Wedell bowed, and a second later retired.

The emperor's egomania asserted itself that afternoon.

A Scene on the Hohenzollern.

On that calm blue summer sea that afternoon an incident occurred upon the Hohenzollern which accentuated the imperial egomania towards menials. There occurred a grave scandal, which has ever since been whispered up and down the fjords of Norway, with all kinds of ridiculous embroidery manufactured by the all-powerful influence of German gold.

As I happened to be one of the principal actors in the drama, I may perhaps be permitted to here place the real truth upon record.

Herr von Wedell having bowed himself out of the imperial presence, his majesty with all good grace signed some papers I put before him. Sighing, he rose, and with his gloved hand drew away his chair.

"Abominable!" cried the emperor. "Von Wedell, of all men, dares to contradict me!"

The all-highest ascended to the upper deck, and I followed, for it was his habit on a warm afternoon to sit on a lounge chair beneath the awning and dictate orders and dispatches. At that time, the Telefunken system of wireless telegraphy had just been installed upon the imperial yacht. The two operators had a cabin to themselves, full of accumulators, detectors, and other paraphernalia, and were, at odd times, in touch with the German admiralty station at Norddeich.

On the deck, the emperor, instead of seating himself in the cozy nook sheltered from the wind, which the empress had only a few minutes before vacated, strode into the wireless cabin, while I was compelled by etiquette to remain outside.

I stood gazing out upon the blue distant coast of Sweden, for we were still within sight of that broken land, with the Skaw on one side and Hissingen on the other, steering due west into the Skager Rack, towards the Nase, the most southernly point of Norway.

The kaiserin sat close by, deeply engaged in conversation with the old Countess von Stoecker, wife of the court chaplain, and laughing with her.

At last the emperor came forth from the wireless room and, motioning me to follow, descended again to the cabin in which we had been working.

On entering he rang his bell and summoned the captain, who in a few moments appeared, cap in hand, as became him.

"We will go farther east," said the all-highest. "We are too far out."

"Johannsen, the Norwegian pilot, is in charge, your majesty," replied the captain, bowing.

"Then tell the man Johannsen," said the emperor, and he turned to his table, dismissing the captain of imperial yacht.

The Defiant Norwegian Pilot.

Three minutes later there came loud raps upon the door, and the emperor himself gave the order to enter, whereupon a short, thick-set seaman in blue jersey and seaboots, a typical North Sea pilot, came in.

"We are too far out; get nearer in to the coast," his majesty commanded in imperious tones.

"We are not too far out," replied the man in German.

"Who are you to dictate to me?" shouted the emperor in fury.

"You are emperor on land, but I, Carl Johannsen of Ekersund, am in charge of this vessel while she is in Norwegian waters, and I take orders from nobody."

And with that the man coolly turned upon his heels and, saluting, left.

The emperor was white with rage at the rebuff. He flung the papers from him and paced the cabin in silent anger. Yet an hour later he ascended to the bridge and presented the man with a scarfpin with the imperial crown and cipher in diamonds, a fact duly reported to Baron von Richlofen, the kaiser's press cossack (press agent), who duly gave an account of the emperor's munificence without, of course, referring to the defiance of the imperial command.

On that same night, after the kaiserin had retired, I found the emperor walking the deck alone and behaving very strangely. He was capless, waving his healthy arm wildly above his head, and groaning. Then he would break out into fearful imprecations against all and sundry.

A LETTER FROM THE CROWN PRINCE'S PERSONAL ADJUTANT TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX, POSSESSOR OF THE SECRETS OF EUROPE.

Veneux Nadon,
par Moret-sur-Loing,
Seine-et-Marne,
February 10th, 1917.

My dear LeQueux:

I have just finished reading the proofs of your articles describing my life as an official at the imperial court at Potsdam, and the two or three small errors you made I have duly corrected.

The gross scandals and wily intrigues which I have related to you were many of them known to yourself, for, as the intimate friend of Luisa, the ex-crown princess of Saxony, you were, before the war, closely associated with many of those at court whose names appear in these articles.

The revelations which I have made, and which you have recorded here, are but a tithe of the disclosures which I could make, and if the world desires more, I shall be pleased to furnish you with other and even more startling details, which you may also put into print.

My service as personal adjutant to the German crown prince is, happily, at an end, and now, with the treachery of Germany against civilization glaringly revealed, I feel, in my retirement, no compunction in exposing all I know concerning the secrets of the kaiser and his son.

With most cordial greetings from
Your sincere friend,
(Signed) ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF.

In alarm I called Von Wedell, and together we approached him. Together we managed to get his majesty below and hand him over to his valet and the court physician without any of the crew being the wiser.

The Kaiser's Amazing Sermon.

Next morning he appeared fresh and active, and apparently quite normal; but that evening at sunset he ordered the officials, suite officers, and crew to assemble on deck, and then, appearing in clerical garb, he preached a most marvelous and amazing sermon.

"I am God's instrument!" he cried. "He has sent me to unsheath the sword against the world, to lead on the armies of our empire to victory and to world-power! In me," he cried, "you see the one sent unto you as a deliverer!—the all-highest upon this earth—your kaiser!"

He raised his arm toward the sun and shouted: "The enemies of Germany shall wither as grass before the fire. I am your emperor, your deliverer, your master!"

Next morning, at Von Wedell's instigation, the captain swore the whole crew, the officers, and the entourage to secrecy, but the old Norwegian pilot was, a month later, indiscreet when he got back to Ekersund; hence the sensational report which appeared in the Globe in London, a report which, of course, was promptly denied by the Wolff bureau.

Three days later we were winding our way in the smooth water between the island of Smolen and the Hatlerns, that rocky archipelago a little north of Christiansund. The emperor, whom his royal spouse regarded with greatest concern, seemed to have recovered. I had had a most strenuous time, for his majesty had dictated all sorts of wild dispatches and made all sorts of extraordinary dismissals of high officials, together with the most amazing appointments.

Beneath his eye I had been compelled to seal up the papers in the heavy leather dispatch bag, and they had been landed with the imperial courier, one Natzmer, at the little fishing village of Fosnaes, at the entrance to the Folden fjord.

Another matter which greatly perturbed me was the fact that my assistant, the personal adjutant, young Rudolph von Lantzsch, had, while listening to the kaiser's astounding sermon, exclaimed in his amazement, and loud enough for all to hear:

"That man is no emperor; he is crazy!"

The kaiser had heard him, and had turned his eyes towards him for an instant without pausing. But well did I know the fierce imperial vindictiveness.

In desperation I sought the empress in her pale-blue-and-gold salon.

I found her seated alone. I referred to the unfortunate events, and begged her to allow me to use the wireless and sign an imperial order in her august name.

I could see that the poor lady was greatly upset and extremely nervous.

"It is all most unfortunate, Count von Heltzendorff," she said. "I only hope that we may be able to prevent the people from hearing of his majesty's actions. It was truly regrettable that Captain von Lantzsch should have made that very untimely remark. The emperor is absolutely furious regarding it."

"Very naturally," I said. "Lantzsch showed a great want of tact. But, your majesty," I went on, "I am more perturbed regarding the contents of the dispatch bag now on its way to Berlin. Natzmer is now traveling by road to Trondhjem, where he is due at noon tomorrow. Thence by rail he will go down to Christiania and on by the destroyer awaiting him to Hamburg. He will be in Berlin on Thursday."

"I agree. The bag should be stopped," said the empress. "Yet I fear what the emperor may think if I assume his authority. Cannot you effect it by any other means?"

Stopping the Dispatch Bag.

I revealed to her some of the dismissals. There were insulting notes addressed to the imperial chancellor and also to the crown prince, and an open declaration of war to the French ambassador in Berlin.

Her majesty, in her gray silk gown, sat there, pale and nervous. Somebody tapped at the door, but she replied:

"I am engaged. Come later."

"I will endeavor to do my best," I went on, "providing that your majesty will support me."

"I certainly will. These dispatches must be stopped at all hazards," she said. "Cannot you yourself land and overtake the courier?"

It was a wild suggestion. Natzmer had gone off in the steam pinnace an hour before, and the boat, returning, had already been hauled up. I could not step ashore for at least a couple of hours, and then at some point on that rugged coast where I might be compelled to drive by some circuitous rout by carriole down to Trondhjem. Further, the emperor would miss me, and would consequently suspect.

In a few brief sentences I pointed all this out to the empress.

"Try—do try—for our empire's sake!" she urged. "I will assist you with all my efforts. You must arrive at the imperial chancellery prior to those dispatches. The emperor is not himself. Count von Heltzendorff, you are a trusted servant of our house. Into your hands I place the solution of this most difficult problem."

"Will not your majesty allow me to wire in your name to our legation in Christiania to recall the courier?" I suggested. "I will send a wireless message which the minister, Von Petsch, will receive within a couple of hours, and watch will then be kept for his arrival by train. To overtake him now is, I feel sure, impossible."

For the next few seconds the kaiserin was undecided. To reverse the orders of her imperial husband was almost more than she dared. In her own sphere she was autocratic, and ruled her court just as sternly as did the emperor rule his army. But to overrule the emperor!

"Yes," she said, after a few moments' further reflection. "You are quite right, count. I give you orders to act just as you wish. Please give your commands in my name."

In a few seconds I had written out an imperial dispatch to be transmitted by wireless, and to this the empress, grave and sad-eyed, appended her signature.

A quarter of an hour later that message to the German minister in Christiania was being taken down by the wireless operator at Lagesund, in the Christiania fjord.

A Sudden Apparition.

That same evening I was reading in my cabin when Rudolph von Lantzsch, in the uniform of the Red Hussars of Potsdam, entered. He was a tall, fair-haired man, a typical Prussian cavalryman.

"Well, Heltzendorff," he laughed, "my remarks during the emperor's sermon seem to have stirred up quite a lot of trouble."

"Trouble for yourself, I fancy, my dear comrade," I said.

"Well, after all, I only spoke the truth. Didn't he declare to us that he has been sent by providence as the war lord of Europe? Why, Heltzendorff, any man who would talk like that is crazy."

"Hush!" I cried, starting up—the next second to find ourselves in the presence of the kaiser himself.

We both started, staring at the figure in naval uniform, pale and hollow-eyed, standing before us like a sudden apparition.

"So I now know the opinion you hold of your emperor, Von Lantzsch!" his majesty said very slowly, his gaze fixed upon his assistant personal adjutant.

"Your majesty, I have nothing to retract," replied the hussar.

"You declared me to be irresponsible."

"For your words, your majesty; not for your actions," was the cool retort.

The emperor, boiling over with rage, for he had never before had such plain words spoken to him, made a spring forward and struck the captain full in the face.

The latter, his cheeks scarlet, reeled and clutched at the table.

His first impulse was to hit back; but, with self-possession, he drew himself up, clicked his heels together and saluted without a word.

The kaiser, his face white as paper, turned and left the cabin.

I stood aghast.

"Well," exclaimed Rudolph at last, "he shall pay for that blow, even though he be emperor!" and he strode out, leaving me speechless with surprise.

A few minutes later I ascended to the deck in order to refresh my muddled senses. I was walking up the deck when suddenly I saw before me several of the personal suite, who saluted as the kaiser, haughty and erect, passed with quick, angry step.

As he approached I saw a figure emerge and stand in his path. It was that of Von Lantzsch.

The kaiser lifted his hand, and, with some imperious words, struck the man who stood in his path.

In a second Von Lantzsch, in a fury of passion, raised his fist, planting a direct blow at the emperor's jaw and sending him spinning against some deck chairs.

Wild shouts arose from the officers who had been chatting near, two of whom rushed towards the emperor, but the latter had instantly recovered himself, and with a grim smile continued his walk and went below.

Naturally, we all expected the hussar captain to be put under arrest. But he was not. He entered my cabin smiling and merry an hour afterwards—the only man who had dared to give back blow for blow to the emperor.

A Midnight Command.

Among the entourage there was, of course, much gossiping. The cause of the fracas was to them a complete mystery. What had occurred previously in my cabin was unknown to them, and as a loyal servant of his majesty at that time it was not my place to reveal anything whatsoever of a private nature. Therefore the amount of whispering that went on on board that evening may be readily imagined.

Just before midnight, as I was about to turn in, I received a command to go to the emperor's cabin wherein he worked.

On entering I found him seated at his table, his uniform tunic unbuttoned, his hair slighly ruffled, by which I knew that he had been writing hard.

"Von Heltzendorff," he said, as I stood beside his table, "you were witness of the insults placed upon me this afternoon. Does anyone except ourselves know what occurred in your cabin?"

"I have not told a soul, your majesty," was my reply.

"But the officer who has raised his hand against the sovereign to whom he swore allegiance may have done!" he said. "There is but one way in which he may atone for his offense against majesty. Hand this to him."

And he gave me a letter addressed in his own hand—addressed with all Von Lantzsch's titles and distinctions. It was sealed with the emperor's well-known black wax.

Ten minutes later I handed the captain the emperor's letter.

He tore it open, read its contents, and then gave a queer, nervous laugh, it seemed to me.

"Thanks, Heltzendorff. It was my turn tonight to be on duty with his majesty, but I did not feel equal to it. Good-night."

Early next morning one of the imperial stewards entered and, awakening me, asked me to go to Captain Von Lantzsch's cabin.

On entering I found him lying dead on his berth with blood oozing from a pistol wound in the temple.

Upon the little shelf of the folding washstand was a note addressed to me.

On opening it I found these words scribbled in pencil:

"Dear Heltzendorff: I have taken my life at the order of his majesty. Am I not a loyal subject after all?—Rudolph."

By noon the body of the kaiser's victim had been landed at Bodo, where it now reposes in the little cemetery beneath those high snow-clad crags which rise against the gray, turbulent sea.

Many fantastic reports have been whispered concerning the incident, but, being one of the actors in the drama, I am able here for the first time to reveal the actual truth.

MACHINE GUN IS BEST WAR WEAPON

Indisputably the Most Terrible Instrument of Defense, Says Observer.

BIG GUNS OFTEN INACCURATE

While Necessary in Offensive Warfare Heavy Artillery Is Not in Same Class With Machine Guns in Defensive Tactics.

BY A FRENCH SOLDIER.
(In the Chicago Daily News.)

Paris.—Months of furious assault on the French lines at Verdun, which have brought into play the most powerful known means of attack, have barely succeeded in bending the adversary's lines. There is, it is true, a diminution of forces on both sides, and one may look forward to the day when the accumulation of material and the superiority in numbers of men on the side of the allies will enable the latter to break more rapidly the adversary's tenacious resistance.

But why is it, one asks, that despite the accumulation of heavy cannon it costs so much in men and money and time to break the enemy's resistance? It is because this war is being fought in a period of development of the art of war, in which the means of defense are vastly superior to the means of offense in the facility with which they can be brought into action and manufactured at low cost, and above all in their efficacy, arising both from the difficulty which the adversary finds in demolishing them, and from the absolute accuracy of their aim.

Means of Defense.

To understand this one has merely to review the means of defense at the disposal of the armies in the field. First, besides the trenches, and the barbed wire that prevents access to them, which are the basis of the present system of defense, and of which the shell hole wherein the soldier conceals himself from the enemy, is but a variation, the two great arms of defense are the machine gun and the "75" cannon, the last resort of the French army and one of the great defenders of Verdun.

In the factory there is nothing easier or relatively cheaper to make than the machine gun. And at the front there is nothing simpler to transport than this light arm, which three or four men can carry as they run. Its aim is most accurate; it can, when necessary, fire from 500 to 600 cartridges per minute, sowing death on every side with incredible speed. But against a trench it is powerless, and therefore it is pre-eminently the arm of defense. When properly handled, it is so redoubtable that one alone has been known to stop an entire regiment. It is indisputably the most terrible instrument of war.

Yet a well-directed battery of "75" cannon, sweeping a space of ground, is more certain to leave nothing alive.

These, then, are the primordial means of defense, to which naturally are to be added the numerous rifles of the defenders of the trenches, those trenches in which are invisible loopholes where the enemy awaits our appearance.

Heavy Shells for Offense.

What are the adversary's means of annihilating these hidden, powerful defenses? Only heavy artillery; the large shell, the huge torpedo, the heavy projectile of steel, inclosing a violent explosive, is capable of demolishing a netting, of demoralizing those occupants of the trench whom it does not kill and keeping the adversary's nerves on edge by the menace of its sudden arrival several kilometers behind the lines. Thus the means of offensive are the heavy cannon, the large trench mortars, the large caliber howitzers, the formidable marine gun mounted on rails, all that is longest, most difficult and costly to manufacture, to transport, to set in motion. A machine gun can be installed anywhere in two minutes or less. A month is required to install the "320" trench mortar. To put a naval gun on rails in running order necessitates months of work and the installation of a railway. Even guns that are easy to handle, such as the "155," are moved with difficulty; at times it takes two or three days to place them in a battery.

And this is not all. The heavy artillery is naturally less accurate than the field artillery. When one considers that heavy guns soon wear out, as the big gun can fire only a more or less limited number of shots, as its caliber increases, and as it must constantly be replaced, one understands why it is so much easier to take the defensive than the offensive, and why the situation on the western front, at all points well defended, was stationary for so long a time before the means of attack were sufficient to permit of an offensive.

Paradoxical.

"Your blunt people seldom live up to their name."

"How so?"

"As a rule, they generally come to the point."

THEIR IDEA OF PATRIOTISM.

A bill was introduced in the recent special session of the Legislature to provide ways and means whereby the soldiers and sailors, absent from home on the firing line, could be permitted to vote at elections which might be held during their absence. This bill was amended so as to provide also for the repeal of the Wilson Ballot Law, that disgraceful election law which has beed wiped from the books of every county in this State except the Southern Maryland counties. The effect of the bill as amended would have been to not only provide for the ballot of the soldiers and sailors, but to secure a uniform and decent election law for the entire State. The thirteen Democratic Senators, putting party above patriotism, putting partisanship above justice and right-dealing, not only refused to pass this amended bill, but stubbornly allowed the soldiers and sailors to be deprived of an opportunity to vote rather than consent to the repeal of an obnoxious and disgraceful election law. These Democratic Senators almost without exception, concede that the Wilson Ballot Law should be repealed, but contended that its repeal might lose them the election of a Senator from Prince George's county next fall: and they are perfectly willing to sacrifice the rights of our soldiers and sailors rather than face the risk of losing the election of a Democratic Senator.

That is the idea of patriotism which prevailed among thirteen Democratic Senators, under orders from the Democratic State machine.—Cecil Whig.

THREE YEARS AGO TODAY.

Three years ago last Thursday Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the Hapsburg throne, was murdered on the streets of Sarajevo in Bosnia by a fanatical Serbian. The assassination was seized upon by Austria as a pretext for making war upon Serbia. The great conflagration that has swept over the world had its origin in this isolated incident.

There was no evidence that the government of Serbia had any connection with the crime. Not a particle of proof was adduced at the trial of the assassin or later that she was the real criminal. But the excuse that Austria had been looking for was supplied. The rape of Serbia, which had been contemplated two years before and prevented because of the unwillingness of Italy to join the conspirators, was ready for perpetration.

The attack was unprovoked and wanton. An ultimatum was served upon Belgrade. Compliance with ten demands within 48 hours was ordered. Nine were acceded to and the last one could not be granted because there was no constitutional power in the country to order it; but an offer of arbitration was made. Thereupon Austria declared war and in spite of every effort to prevent it on the part of Great Britain, France, Italy and other nations, who saw with consternation the abyss into which all Europe was plunging. Germany, knowing her hour had come, forced her ally into the ring and the world war was on.

After three years the event at Sarajevo stands out in clearer light than ever. We now see what we did not then realize, that this assassination was only an excuse for the long premeditated and carefully prepared plan of the Prussian military party to crush the small nations of Europe in the grand attempt to make Germany the first power on the globe. We see now an unprovoked and wicked assault upon the liberties of other peoples in order that autocracy might be more firmly entrenched in its despotic power than ever before. In the conflict that has followed the whole world has seen with growing understanding the real meaning and purpose of the conspiracy that lay behind the crime of Sarajevo.

DEAD AT CUMBERLAND

George R. Long, Formerly of Friendsville, Died in City Jail.

At Cumberland on Tuesday a coroner's jury investigating the death of George R. Long, Connellsville, who was found dead in the city jail in Cumberland Tuesday morning, found that death was due to alcoholism.

Long was taken to police headquarters Monday night in a badly intoxicated condition and he was taken to the station house without any charge being made against him.

Long was 58 years of age, formerly resided at Connellsville where he conducted a hotel for a number of years, and a few years ago had one at Friendsville. He later retired from business in which he accumulated considerable wealth. He was twice married. After his first wife died he married an actress with whom he lived a number of years. They separated and it is understood she is now residing at Clarksburg. He is survived by two sons, Samuel Long, of Cumberland, and David Long, of Connellsville; one daughter, living at Clarksburg, and two sisters, Mrs. Hannah Fleming, of Connellsville, while the other resides at Uniontown.

Auto Wreck on Pike.

A five passenger Rex car belonging to Mr. Frank Bill, of Lonaconing, turned turtle Sunday about four miles east of Grantsville on the National Road. Charles Neff, of Piedmont, who was driving in the same direction collided with the Bill car. Mr. Bill had as his passengers members of his family, who were more or less injured, Mrs. Bill being hurt the most serious and is suffering from shock. They were former residents of Grantsville and had been to that place Sunday where they visited relatives.

Sheep Growers Meeting.

County Agent Middleton has addressed a letter to the farmers of Grantsville, especially to those interested in sheep sroduction, the following being a copy sent us for publication:

"A meeting of all those persons residing in the vicinity of Grantsville, and interested in the raising of sheep, will be held in the School House at Grantsville, Saturday evening July 14th, at 8 o'clock for the purpose of organizing a local branch of the Garrett County Sheep Growers Association.

"There will be no speeches, but we will try to explain any points that are not clearly understood.

"Make it a point to be there on time; so that we can get right down to business."

County Agent Middleton has also addressed the following letter to the bee keepers of the county:

"You are cordially invited to attend one of the meetings for beekeepers to be held in Garrett county on the 9th and 10th of July. The first meeting will be held in the Grantsville School House on Monday, July 9th, at 2 p. m. a similar meeting will be held in the Court House at Oakland, Tuesday, July 10th, at 10 a. m.

"Mr. Kennith Hawkins, a noted beekeeper and queen breeder of Illinois, now Field Agent of the Department of Agriculture, and Mr. G. H. Cale, formerly Assistant Apairy Inspector of Massachusetts, now in charge of Beekeeping for Maryland, will be present to conduct the program.

"This opportunity should not be neglected. It is highly important that every beekeeper increase his honey crop and advance his business in every legitimate way. Be sure to attend this meeting and bring all your neighbor beekeepers with you. The success of the meetings and also the future support to beekeepers in Garrett depends largely upon your help.

GORTNER

Mr. and Mrs. Harley Wotring and children, of Liverpool, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Guy Sanders, of Fairmont, West Va., arrived Saturday for a visit among home folks.

Mr. Frank Erick, of Lancaster, Pa., is spending several days here the guest of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Beachy, Misses Anna and Lucy Beachy and Elizabeth Tice, of near Meyersdale, Pa., and Miss Sarah Yoder, of Allensville, Pa., motored to this place Saturday, returning home Monday.

Mrs. Will Welch and Alta Schrock spent Saturday and Sunday near Terra Alta, W. Va., the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Matheny.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Spoerlein and sons spent Sunday at N. C. Slabaughs.

Rev. and Mrs. E. R. Hauser and daughter have returned to their home in Juniata, Pa.

There will be church services Sunday morning and evening by the Mennonite brethren. All are invited to come.

Mr. and Mrs. Gill Slabaugh and daughter Madeline and son Frederick, of Akron, Ohio, are visiting friends and relatives.

Those of the Union Sunday school who have received certificates of faithfulness for the second quarter are: S. Webster Slabaugh, Forrest Gortner, Pauline V. Sanders and Emma C. Burkholder. We hope to see more names on the list for the next quarter.

Miss Margaret Slabaugh, of Oakland, spent several days of last week here the guest of her grandmother.

HOW THE U. S. IS TO WIN THE WAR

Food Commissioner Hoover Wants Extravagance Stopped.

United States Food Commissioner Herbert Hoover has sent the following timely article to The Republican and requests its publication:

The weapons in this war are fighting men, munitions, food, ships and finance. If we are to defend liberty in this year 1917 all these must be upon such a scale as will demand the energies of our whole people. In previous wars a small proportion of the community went to fight, another small portion was devoted to their support, but the great bulk of the nation did "business as usual."

Autocracy has been for years organizing its resources to the end that they have placed one out of seven of its population on the fighting line and have so mobilized the civil population as to afford them complete support. They have suppressed production of every luxury and reduced even every necessity. Their arrogant confidence that they will become "Masters of the World" is based upon their belief that the materialism, the selfishness and the jealousy of individual interest in Democracy makes it impossible for it to organize such a strength. They do not deny the bravery of the men of Democracy in battle, but they comfort themselves in the belief that we have not the self-sacrifice at home for their support.

Our problem is not alone to mobilize our civillian population for the support of our fighting men but we also have the responsibility of the support of the fighting men of our allies. And food is not the least of their necessities. One of the great European statesmen has said, "the war will not be won by the last 500,000 fighting men, but will be won by the last 500,000 bushels of wheat. It is within our ability to give this last 500,000 bushels, but only if we organize to produce, organize to save, and organize to supply all.

We must feed our Allies that their people may remain constant in the war. Liberty cannot be obtained upon the empty stomachs of the women and children. Through the drain of war our Allies have steadily decreased in food production and other agencies also curtailed their supplies. Out of our abundance, by eliminating waste and extravagance, it is in our power, and in our power alone, to hold the wolf from the door of the world. Our obligation is greater than war itself—humanity demands it of us.

We must save in all food. We must eat plenty, but wisely and without waste. If we save in our consumption and our waste we can increase our surplus to export; if we substitute other commodities for those we can export, we can further increase this surplus.

Furthermore, by our economies we can save a major portion of the cost of the war. We can increase our ability to subscribe to Liberty Loans. If we save food we can lower the price of living to our own people and relieve the strain and distress under which they labor today. We can only do this by organization so that there shall be no profiteering from our economy, that all shall bear the burden equally.

The Food Administration is a volunteer organization to be endowed with powers by the Government. This volunteer organization is not to be limited to a few executives in Washington. We are solicitous, nay, anxious, to secure as actual members of this volunteer effort, every man and every woman, every boy and girl in these United States who will undertake the task with us. There is no dictatorship in volunteer effort. It is by voluntary mobilization that we can answer Autocracy with Democracy. It is as great in efficiency and greater in spirit.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Among those who have arrived in the past ten days we note John L. Ruhl and family, L. T. Yoder and family, Mr. Stribe and family, the Edwards family, Mr. and Mrs. Speers and others.

Mrs. Sue Gibson and children are with Mrs. Gibson's mother, Mrs. Gilbert.

About all the hotels and boarding houses have guests and all expect to be crowded for the next ten days.

It is expected that the campmeeting will be largely attended, especially on the Sundays. Some great preachers will be here and there will be good music.

Mr. J. A. Enlow has rented his cottage for the summer and has taken the same house he occupied last summer.

Mrs. Annan and daughter, of St. Louis, are occupying the Carroll cottage.

Mrs. John Stephenson is quite ill and will probably be taken to a hospital Thursday.

COAL HOLDINGS SOLD

Approximately 5000 Acres Sold to Pennsylvania Operator.

Mr. Edward H. Sincell has sold to Mr. T. M. Dodson, of Bethlehem, Pa., in the neighborhood of 5000 acres of the Upper Potomac coal situate in the vicinity of Wilson on the Western Maryland Railroad in this county.

The coal in this field is valuable for its by-product qualities and when the property is developed that section of Garrett county will become the centre of the mining industry in this section for the purchaser proposes immediate development.

The engineering force to survey the property went into the field this morning in charge of Mr. P. D. Browning, chief mining engineer of Weston Dodson & Co., incorporated, of Bthlehem, Pa. The chief of the party is Mr. Joseph D. Lewis, of Mahanoy City, Pa., with Harold Reese of the same place, as transitman, assisted by Alfred Sturman, of Pottsville, William Wilkinson, of Shenandoah, and S. David Adams, of Bethlehem, Pa. Mr. Alexander C. Mason, of Oakland, county surveyor and engineer, is also with the party representing the property owners.

THE DEATH RECORD.

THOMAS C. SNIDER.

Thomas C. Snyder, aged fifty-eight years, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at five o'clock at the residence of Stephen Wilson, who occupies a house on the Weber Farm east of Oakland. Mr. Snider was in town yesterday morning when he complained of feeling ill, later going to the Wilson home. He was unmarried and is survived by one brother who lives near Hancock, this state. No arrangements have as yet been made for the funeral.

JAMES WILLIAM WHITE.

The death of Mr. James W. White occurred at his late residence on South Second street last Sunday morning, July 1, 1917, at about 11:15, after an illness which lasted since the middle of February of this year, at which time he took sick with pneumonia from which he never recovered sufficently to enable him to be out although during the months he was confined to his home he was oftentimes able to be out of his room and sit and walk about the house. About six weeks ago he suffered a relapse, an operation being deemed necessary, to which he submitted cheerfully and willingly, but this was without avail, and he grew steadily weaker until the time mentioned above, when he passed peacefully to his Maker, dying as he had lived a Godfearing, noble and upright man.

Mr. White was a son of the late Rowan and Margaret Waltz White, and was born on the old Philips farm, 8 miles South of Oakland, Feb. 15, 1848, being aged some months past 69 years. On March 30, 1873, he united with Miss Flora May McCrum, a teacher in the M. E. Sunday school, the ceremony taking place at the close of the Sunday school session that day, and being preformed by the late Rev. John M. Davis. This union was blessed by the birth of eight sons and four daughters, all of whom survive as follows: Clifton W., and J. Arthur, of Cumberland; Paul M., of St. Louis; Carl B., of Uniontown, Pa.; Ray, of Grafton, W. Va.; Mrs. Mollie P. Rasche, Flora E., Thane O., Mark S., June L., Robert B. and Mabel M., all of Oakland. Mrs. White died on Chistmas day, 1900. He is also survived by the following brothers and sisters: John, Geo. D., Misses Sarah and Bert, Chas. E., Mrs. Delia Slabauge, all of Oakland; Perry, D., of Davis, W. Va., and Mrs. Jennie White, of Kingwood, W. Va.

Early in life he united with the Methodist Episcopal church of Oakland and has since been prominently connected with that religious organization in various official capacities. He took an especial interest in the Sunday school, of which he was a member from boyhood, and in which he has served in an official capacity since 1871, the last thirty years of which he was the recording secretary. The records of the school, since its organization in 1829, have been carefully compiled by him in one volume, and from that date until the present the record is complete, containing notes of more than ordinary historical interest pertaining to local events. In politics he was a life-long Republican and served the county as Register of Wills for more than twelve years, serving one term also as County Treasurer and several terms thereafter as Assistant Treasurer. As a public official he was honest, efficient and faithful to every trust committed to his care.

This community will miss him in more ways than one, for he enjoyed the love, respect and friendship of all with whom he came in contact, his quiet, unassuming manner endearing him to all alike and gaining for him friends without number, and for whom he would go out of his way to do a favor, be it great or small. His church will miss his constant presence at service, but his family to whom he was a good, kind Christian father, will feel the greatest loss, and to them the sympathy of the community goes out in this hour of affliction, but they have the consolation of feeling that, while everything possible for his recovery and comfort was done by faithful and loving hands, he has gone to a better world, where sickness and sorrow are unknown, and can seem to hear the Master say "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord."

Funeral services were held at the late home yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock in charge of his pastor, Rev. W. M. Shultz, assisted by Rev. Dr. Archibald Moore, the former speaking feelingly of the life and character of the deceased, after which interment was made in the Oakland cemetery. The pall bearers were all life long friends and church associates, Messrs. F. A. Thayer, A. D. Naylor, Chas. S. Davis, D. M. Dixon, Arthur Townshend and Jos. E. Harned. Honorary pall bearers Messrs. E. H. Sincell, A. C. Wotring, G. M. Mason, E. Z. Tower, G. A. Fraley and John Yelloly. The floral offerings were many and very beautiful, expressing in mute but eloquent manner the esteem in which the deceased was held and the sympathy of the donors. The flower bearers were Messrs. W. L. Thomas, E. E. Friend, W. A. Sturgiss, J. W. Davis, J. H. and C. H. Loar and E. A. Weimer.

BEAUTIFUL WEDDING IN THE OPEN AIR

Harley O. Beckman, Cumberland, Marries Miss Wildesen at Gormania.

A gay and beautiful scene was depicted on the lawn of the "Kings Manor" at Gormania last Friday, when Mr. Harley Otis Beckman, the popular First Assistant Secretary, of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Young Men's Christian Association, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Eurith Elmira Wildesen, of Gormania.

The wedding took place on the lawn which was turned into a veritable fairyland with Chinese lanterns, floral bowers, etc. The bridal path, leading from the house to an archway of flowers, built between two large shade trees, made a very picturesque and beautiful showing. The Reverend Frank Brooks, of the Presbyterian church of Gormania, officiated.

As the strains of the wedding march broke out, the little Misses Elizabeth Johnson and Bertha Norman, two little tots, beautifully dressed in white, and carrying baskets of pink and white sweet peas, strewed the pathway as the bridal couple, preceded by the bridesmaid, Miss Blanche Wildesen, sister of the bride, and the groomsman, Mr. Carl Blaker, of Ridgeley, marched from the house to the flowery bower.

The bride was beautifully attired in white crepe de chene and carried a shower bouquet of white bridal roses and sweet peas, while the bridesmaid wore a gown of pink satin and carried a bouquet of pink rose buds.

The ceremony was very impressive in the stillness of twilight, with the lights of the Chinese lanterns throwing their shadows across the lawn. Just as the minister proclaimed the words, "I now pronounce you man and wife," two of the male guests, who had secreted themselves in the leafy bowers of the shade trees, took their part in the ceremony and immediately a hail storm of rice decended upon the happy couple. Then followed the usual tears of joy, embracing and kissing, and after all had extended their greetings, the company adjourned to the parlors of the home, where delicious refreshments were served, and to visit the sitting room to view the numberless handsome and useful presents presented to the happy couple by their many friends.

After the refreshments were served, an evening of fun and merriment was entered upon, the festivites keeping up until the midnight hour, when the bridal party, and many of their friends motored to Oakland and took the train East.

The bridal couple will spend their honeymoon camping with a party of friends.

The following were among the guests at the wedding: Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Duckworth, Gorman; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Houck, Gorman; Mrs. Katherine Bay, Gormania; Frank Wildesen, Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. James Chisholm and Miss Mariam Chisholm, Gorman; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wildesen, Gorman; Mr. and Mrs. I. WHAT A BANK CHECK SAYS

A BANK Check has a message aside from its face value. It says that the one who draws it has money in the Bank and that the Bank on which it is drawn will honor this signature. It says that the depositor regularly deposits the money received and pays expenses by writing checks. Your check will say all this for you, when you open an account subject to check with this Bank. You will then have the convenience and safety that the Bank assures and you can write your check for the exact amount of each payment.

THOSE AWFUL CRAMPS

Suggestions that may save Much Suffering

Marysville, Pa.—"For twelve years I suffered with terrible cramps. I would have to stay in bed several days every month. I tried all kinds of remedies and was treated by doctors, but my trouble continued until one day I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for others. I tried it and now I am never troubled with cramps and feel like a different woman. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly and I am recommending it to my friends who suffer as I did." —Mrs. GEORGE R. NAYLOR, Box 72, Marysville, Pa.

Young women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this root and herb remedy.

BREAD AS ECONOMICAL FOOD

Would Be Used More Extensively If Home-Baked Variety Was Always Good, Say Government Experts.

If home-baked bread were uniformly well made, it would be used more extensively than at present in place of more expensive foods, say specialists in the United States department of agriculture, and this would be a distinct economy. From the standpoint of nutrition it makes very little difference whether breadstuffs are served in the form of bread or in the form of breakfast cereals, side dishes with meat, or desserts.

A man engaged in moderate muscular work can profitably consume about three-fourths of a pound a day of breadstuffs in any one of these forms. This quantity is the equivalent of one pound of baked bread. As a matter of fact, however, it is not probable that in the average family this quantity is consumed and the deficiency is made up by the use of more expensive substances. Of course bread alone is not sufficient for the maintenance of health, but from both an economical and a hygienic point of view should be used more extensively than it usually is, declare the experts.

The Reichsrath a Babel.

That parliament of Babel, the reichsrath, now engaged in playing an obscure part in the Austro-Hungarian peace hunt, is permitted to express its emotions in eight official languages—symbolic of the war of tongues raging in the empire itself. In the great vocal chorus the Slovanian may be said to have struck the strident top note, for the very word he has coined for himself expresses the belief that no man is a talker except himself. "Slowan," in Old Slavonic, meant "to speak," and as the Slav understood no other speech, the others were naturally the dumb dogs.—London Daily Chronicle.

BEET-SUGAR INDUSTRY

American Seed Is Usually Superior in Germination.

Soil and Climatic Conditions Favor Production of Seed in Sufficient Quantity to Meet All Future Requirements.

(By C. O. TOWNSEND.)

Our experience thus far indicates that American sugar-beet seed is usually superior in germination and capable of producing larger and better roots than the imported seed.

Our soil and climatic conditions, extending over large areas, favor the production of sugar-beet seed in sufficient quantity to meet all future requirements.

Well-defined strains of sugar beets of high yield and quality are essential to the development of a satisfactory seed industry. Enough has been done to prove that by careful and painstaking work such strains can be produced.

Type of Beet Found in Many Fields.

No intelligent study of cultural methods in the production of sugar beets or of problems involving a comparison of varieties can be made until uniform and fixed varieties with which to work are available.

The production of strains having roots of uniform size and habit of growth and capable of yielding seed stalks uniform in habit of growth and maturity should make possible improved cultural methods, especially in the planting of the roots and in the harvesting of the seed, that will reduce greatly the cost of production.

After seed harvest the beet roots and stalks remain in the ground in a sound and palatable condition for live stock feed. The present practice is to feed these roots in the field, utilizing them as pasture.

The beet-sugar industry in the United States is composed of three distinct branches, namely, beet-seed production, sugar-beet growing, and beet-sugar extraction and refining. They are so linked that each is dependent upon the others, not only for its complete success but for its very existence. Without seed the sugar-beet industry, in which more than 70,000 American farmers are directly interested, could not exist, and without beets the 84 beet-sugar mills now standing, with an invested capital of more than $100,000,000, would be idle. The beet-sugar industry is, of course, the foundation upon which sugar-beet growing and beet-sugar extraction rests. Because of its fundamental character, it is surprising that sugar-beet seed production in this country has not received more general and more earnest attention in the past. The two primary causes that have operated against the development of the sugar-beet seed industry in this country were (1) the fact that a sufficient quantity of seed to meet our requirements was easily obtainable from European countries at a reasonable price and (2) the prevailing idea that conditions in this country, from the standpoint either of labor cost or of climate, would not permit the successful development of the seed industry in the United States. Recent experiences, however, have shown the folly of depending upon foreign countries for our beet-seed supply, while experiments extending over many years have proved the falsity of the opinion relative to labor and climatic conditions.

MAINTAINING PIGS ON RAPE

Minnesota Station Finds It Most Valuable of Forage Crops—Red Clover Also Excellent.

At the Minnesota experiment station more pigs have been maintained on a given area with the pasturage of rape than any other forage crop. Red clover is also an excellent pasture, more palatable than rape and nearly as good as alfalfa. Bluegrass is extensively used for a hog pasture and serves this purpose well until it becomes more or less dead during the late summer. Rye is sown for a late fall and early spring pasture.

COW'S TAIL OF IMPORTANCE

Often Measured in Judging Animal—Chief Purpose Is for Brushing Flies Away.

The tail is often measured in judging a cow and to meet the standard requirements should reach to, or below, the hocks and carry a good switch. This renders it most useful in brushing flies, which is its chief purpose.

Is Your Work Hard?

Werk which brings any unusual strain on the back and kidneys tends to cause kidney ailments, such as backache, lameness, headache, dizziness and distressing urinary troubles. Kidney complaints make any kind of work doubly hard and if neglected there is danger of gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease. If your work is hard on the back, keep your kidneys in good condition with Doan's Kidney Pills. Thousands rely on them.

A Virginia Case

Alex. Umberger, Spiller St., Wytheville, Va., says: "I had a steady, dull ache across the small of my back. Hard work and heavy lifting brought on the trouble. The kidney secretions were irregular and painful in passage and at times, the backache was so severe, I could hardly straighten. It was hard for me to get out of bed mornings. Doan's Kidney Pills strengthened my back and regulated my kidneys and the benefit has been permanent."

NEW METALS BEING SOUGHT

Manufacturers Looking for Substitutes for Those Now Used Because of Advance in Prices.

The recent advance in price of many of the more commonly used metals has led manufacturers to adopt or consider the adoption of various substitute metals or alloys for certain purposes. The advice of the bureau of standards has frequently been sought in this connection. An interesting field of investigation is opened up by such inquiries.

It appears that the metals traditionally and currently used for various articles are in many cases no better adapted for the purpose than others, and a slight difference in price would warrant a substitution. It is not usually possible, however, to suggest substitutes offhand, as there are many factors involving manufacturing peculiarities, durability and other physical and chemical properties that first have to be determined. "There is," says the bureau, "a very wide field of research here, which would undoubtedly repay manyfold the efforts put upon it."—Scientific American.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. SELLERS, Acting Director of the Sunday School Course in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR JULY 8

AHAZ, THE FAITHLESS KING

LESSON TEXT—II Chron. 28:1-5, 20:27.
GOLDEN TEXT—Without faith it is impossible to please him.—Heb. 11:6.
LESSON TEXT—II Chron. 30:1-15.

Ahaz reigned sixteen years from about 739 to 723 B. C., over the kingdom of Judah, its capital being in Jerusalem. The kingdom was nearing its end, and was destroyed within a few years after the death of Ahaz. His character presents many interesting questions for discussion; the character of his reign, the wealth and prosperity of his father and grandfather, the development of his character from the home wherein he originated, why a nation can be successful and not be righteous or virtuous, that is, outwardly successful, and the application of these questions to our present-day political and commercial lives.

I. Ahaz, the Ruler, (vv. 1-5). The character of Ahaz is not to be admired. He played a prominent and evil part in the history of the Kingdom of Judah. We find his name recorded among the Syrian inscriptions of the year 732 B. C., the Hebrew historian having dropped the prefix "Jeho" from his name. The full name indicates that he had "grasped Jehovah," yet he was untrue to his name. The historian says "he did not that which was right in the sight of the Lord." This puts it mildly, but indeed few of the kings of Judah did otherwise, and he patterned his conduct not after the good model of his father, but the thoroughly bad conduct of the kings of the northern nation, Israel. He was but twenty years of age when he took the throne, but had already entered upon a course of action opposed to that of his father.

II. Ahaz Ruined. The choice lay before him of following in the steps of his grandfather Uzziah and his father Jotham (II Chron. 1:10). He chose to defy God, openly disobeyed him and was disloyal to his God and his country, walking in the ways of the kings of Israel, (v. 2), burnt his children in the fire, after the abominations of the heathen, (v. 3), made molten images of Baal, (v. 2), and spread that worship into the high places on the hills and under every green tree (v. 4), made sacrilegious use of the temple's treasury, and was dishonest as well as profane. He trusted Baalim more than he trusted God.

III. Ahaz Rebuked. God did not allow him to pursue his course of action without protest. When the children of good men go wrong, there is no measuring the extent of depravity to which they will sink. Nevertheless, God was opposed and tried to save the young man and the nation. God used the king of Syria as one agency for rebuking this mad young man. He carried away great multitudes captive, one hundred and twenty thousand in one day (v. 6), and "two hundred thousand women, sons and daughters" (v. 8) at another date. Ahaz himself was filled with terror at the great calamity that overtook him. (Isa. 7:2.) While he received temporary help (II Kings 16:9, 10), he received ultimately ruin from the king of Assyria, for he became a vassal and was summoned to Damascus to pay homage to that king, as appears from the account II Kings 16:7-9, and also from the Assyrian inscription, above referred to. Other enemies also attacked him—Edomites from the southeast carried away captives, and the Philistines from the southwest invaded the cities of the low plains, south of Judah, and took possession of them (vv. 17-19) and the army of the Assyrian, which Ahaz led to rob and profane the temple and its treasures in order to buy them off (v. 22-24), completed the ruin of his nation. Ahaz was forced to pay a heavy tribute to the Assyrian king (v. 21), and got no help for his outlay. He put his trust in an arm of flesh instead of in the mighty arm of God, which brought upon him the curse that always comes to those who trust in man (Jer. 17:5, 6). There is a blessing which always awaits those who trust in Jehovah (Jer. 17:7, 8). The wise man turns to God not in the time of his distress but at all times. Instead of sacrificing to the God who saved his father and who would save him, Ahaz sacrificed to the god "which smote him." His defiance knew no bounds (v. 24). He seemed to have dabbled in every known form of false worship, thereby "provoking to anger the Lord God of his fathers" (II Kings 23:11, 12). God is long-suffering to those who wander from him, but there comes an end to his patience (II Peter 3:9, 10).

IV. The Reverse Picture. There are several problems to be solved as we view this picture, for it is a story of real life, not only of the early times but is being repeated even today and in this country. (1) Men will reap that which they sow. One cannot sow wild oats and reap the fruits of righteousness. (2) Jehovah places righteousness above security or prosperity. (3) God's purposes are for the uplift and the making of the nation and the individual better. God never does evil that good may come out of it. A loving father must exercise discipline, and let us not be mistaken.

A Sporting Event.

At a recent sports meeting in a country town an old countryman picked up a disused program of events and was studying it earnestly when a swell approached him.

"Hello, old chap, what's the next event on the program?"

War Spirit Contagious.

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree was more than once placed in a perplexing position by the loss of members of his cast during his tour throughout Canada and the United States. No less than ten members enlisted, including two ladies for service in war hospitals. One humorous incident occurred after the engagement of a "deputy" in the United States. She was not very much interested in the war prior to her appointment, but the talk behind the scenes among the company bore so frequently on the loss of relatives at the front that she felt one night impelled to volunteer as a nurse, was eventually accepted, and her place had to be filled.

Twenty-Five Years' Experience With Kidney Remedy

Between twenty-five and thirty years ago I commenced selling Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and during all that time I have never heard a single complaint from my customers; they are more inclined to praise it; and judging from their favorable remarks and the repeated sales I enjoy I am confident that Swamp-Root is a valuable medicine for the troubles for which it is intended.

Very truly yours,

You will also receive a booklet of valuable information, telling about the kidneys and bladder. When writing, be sure and mention this paper. Regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

Rubber Consumption Growing.

Consumption of rubber per capita is more than twice what it was 25 years ago. One company expects to manufacture uppers of shoes from rubber as well as soles. This company will operate its own merchant marine to bring crude rubber from Sumatra and carry manufactured articles to all parts of the world. The company now employs 28,621 men, and manufactures 218,930 pairs of rubber shoes a day. More than a million trees on Sumatra plantations are being tapped.

Choosing His Words.

Wife—"Why are you speaking so sharply?" Hubby—"Because I want to get a word in edgeways."

Save the Babies

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. There can be no danger in the use of Castoria if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher as it contains no opiates or narcotics of any kind.

Pure Bred Stallion

An announcement of interest to all farmers and stockmen in the Accident, Cove and Keyer's Ridge districts of Garrett county, Md., and Negro Mountain, adjacent to Mason & Dixon's line, is made by John H. Colflesh of Accident, Md., to the effect that he is the owner of a fine Pure Bred Stallion that will make the season at the following places:

In Cove at barn of George Colflesh.
At Keyser's Ridge at barn of Charles Reichenbecher.
On Negro Mountain at barn of C. C. Wisseman.

Mr. Colflesh is a delegate of the Imported Stock Association and hopes to interest all the farmers in the neighborhoods named in the raising of better horses. He hopes to meet all of the farmers and breeders during the season and invites them to come and see his horse and get acquainted with his pedigree and qualities which make him a desirable sire.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Noah's Carpenters.

When the Master was speaking to His disciples of His second coming, among other things He said. "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be also in the days of the son of man." These words are a part of His discourse concerning the Kingdom of the Messiah. He came to establish a Kingdom, but it was rejected; the King was crucified and hence the Kingdom has been held in abeyance for the time being, but it will be established by and by. The expectation of the time was that the Messiah would set up a temporal Kingdom, over which He would reign as a great earthly potentate. They too would figure prominently in it. But they rejected the King, so he turned to the Gentiles and they have the opportunity of becoming members of His Kingdom.

The silent, yet powerful influence of His spirit is felt in the hearts and seen in the lives of His subjects. The gospel of this kingdom must be preached every where. The way to the crown is by the cross, and if the founder of the Kingdom was not exempt from this, no more can His subjects expect to be.

When Christ came to introduce His Kingdom, He found the Jewish nation asleep in calm security and reveling in sensuality, even as the old world was in the days of Noah or as Sodom in the days of Lot. When the days of the son of man come the condition of the world will be the same as it was in Noah's time. But what was their condition in those days? They were eating and drinking; reveling in pleasure; making provision for the flesh; busy with the things of this world; buying and selling and getting gain, thoughtful only of self, doing those things which, though proper in themselves were absorbing their attention and occupying their hearts regardless of the threatenings of God. They had little or no heart to give diligent heed to the things that pertain to their salvation, when they ought to have been like the men of Ninevah sitting in sack cloth and ashes, and in the dust of repentance. From the earnest warnings of Noah and Lot they turned to debauchery and revelry, laughing at the preacher, mocking at his earnestness and making light of the message.

The lives and examples of these holy men were despised and they found their pleasure in fulfilling the lusts of the flesh. For many years Noah preached to his fellow men, but his message seemed like idle tales and they laughed at those who could be so foolish as to build an ark to save himself and family. The idea of a flood coming was preposterous.

Even his carpenters who helped him prepare the ark partook of the same spirit. What was it to them? They didn't believe there was any danger of such a flood coming as would destroy the earth, but it made little difference to them how many he built. It gave them work. They were interested in their wages instead of their souls. They were good workmen, for their work declared them to be such. Yet even while they worked so well on the ark, they were not in it when the doors were closed; hence they perished with the rest. They continued in their course of unbelief and wickedness until the ark was complete.

The last warning was given, the faithful witness and preacher of righteousness has gathered his family into the ark; and the door is closed in expectation of the predicted event. The divine word had said it would come and Noah believed it. Maybe they went in amid the jeers and scoffs of the people who probably thought he was crazy. Maybe they pitied him, but they laughed at his folly as they went to their shops, their farms, or their homes, their pleasure or business. He was a good man to work for, but he was too zealous. He was too religious. He looked upon things of this world as nothing. Perhaps they would say, I'm sorry to lose him, but every one to his own mind, so good bye, Noah, we'll see your ark when it floats.

In the midst of their revelry and carelessness, the heavens overcast, rain begins to fall, it increases till it seems the very windows of heaven are opened and the waters are poured upon the earth.

They begin to say, maybe Noah was right—at least I wish I had taken his advice and prepared for this. I'm sure I'd be more comfortable now in the Ark, than in this place. Besides there is no prospect of its ceasing soon. What will become of us if this flood rises much higher? Still it rises and spreads. It is choking the life out of many. They flee to the huts still it rises till they feel the angry waters about them. They climb the trees and mountains but there is no escape for the wrath of the Lord is poured out upon them and the judgment of God is visited upon rebellious man. Ah, the cries of agony, the shrieks of despair that would rise from that angry flood to Noah to take them in, and to the Lord for mercy! Alas! the voice was choked by the waters and died away to be heard only in the confines of perdition.

In our next we will resume at this point.

Plague of Trenches . . .

By Frederick J. Haskin.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 27—It was the third day of battle. The enemy's guns had ceased firing for some reason which the air scouts were trying to discover, and several thousand Frenchmen, standing knee-deep in ice water that flooded the trenches, relaxed their holds on their rifles for the first time in 30 hours. Occasionally a khaki-clad form stooped over what appeared to be an empty place in the trenches and lifted another khaki-clad form, inert and water-soaked, onto an army ambulance.

An officer in mud-spattered uniform, his face lined and grey as the surrounding mist, pulled himself stiffly out of his trench and walked over to where an army surgeon was working with a group of men lying unconscious in the snow. The officer observed that the surgeon was using not the usual hypodermic of morphin, but a strong reviving stimulant of hot whisky.

"Wounded?" he asked, as the surgeon lifted one man on his arm and thrust a canteen between his lips.

"Yes," answered the surgeon. "Wounded with tuberculosis."

"Wounded with tuberculosis" is one of the bitterest phrases the war has coined. It is bad enough to die on the battlefield, but at least death comes quickly under such circumstances. But to be sent home to die slowly of the white plague, often in a poor law institution—that has been the fate of thousands of trench soldiers. France has discharged nearly 200,000 soldiers on account of tuberculosis since the beginning of the war, and the spread of the disease in the British army has reached such alarming proportions that the civilian population has organized to combat the situation.

AWAKENED BY AMERICANS.

It has taken some time for France to realize her plight, but today the French combative spirit is aroused. An anti-tuberculosis campaign is under way, in which Americans are contributing the major part both in money and service. The officer of the above incident was an American, and it did not take him long to discover that the whole French army was rapidly being weakened by the dread scourge. Later, when wounded, he was sent back to France, he got in touch with his friends from home, to whom he gave a grim account of conditions. "Something must be done," he concluded, "and done quickly, or there will be no French army."

The Americans in Paris immediately organized themselves into a committee—that being one of the things for which Americans are famous—and called upon the French government. The French government was sufficiently alarmed concerning the spread of the disease, but unfortunately it was already handicapped with too many obligations to offer any adequate remedy for the situation. It simply had to be left to the civil population.

In a subsequent investigation it became apparent that the civil population was largely responsible for the disease anyway, and not the army. While trench life certainly aggravates any tendency towards tuberculosis, it was discovered that in the majority of cases the disease was already there, that the whole of France was highly tuberculosis.

Before the war the death rate from tuberculosis was nearly three per 1,000 of population, in the cities the percentage running much higher. In Havre, for example, the death rate from all diseases last year was over three times that of New York City. The death rate from tuberculosis alone was equal to 40 per cent. of the entire death rate of New York City.

FRESH AIR IS NEEDED.

Searching for the cause of this large mortality from tuberculosis, the investigating Americans soon found it. The United States has suffered sufficiently from the scourge to make most of its citizens intelligent and sympathetic anti-tuberculosis campaigners. Every American, although he may not always practice it, is a believer in the value of fresh air. The French, although an extremely enlightened people in the sciences of anaesthesia and surgery, are not an example to the world in sanitary matters. The French do not get enough fresh air.

Fresh air, cleanliness and disinfection are the three greatest essentials in combating tuberculosis. Naturally, when a country neglects all of them more or less and lives in positive terror of the first, you can expect to find the disease flourishing.

In December of last year the War Victims' Fund was established to take care of French tuberculosis soldiers. The sum of $116,118 was collected and a number of sanitariums opened. Soldiers collected from poor institutions and those arriving from the front were given the best of care. The Americans worked as if inspired. It was their chance to show the French civilian population the proper methods of treatment, while curing their soldiers, and they made the most of their opportunity.

The work has been slow, owing to lack of funds, but it is accomplishing its purpose. Many soldiers have recovered and the French people are becoming educated to the value of fresh air. Windows are being sawed in hundreds of peasant homes which boasted none before the war. The propaganda of fresh air and sanitation is having its effect.

HEBREW CHARITIES A PATTERN.

It will doubtless be a long time, however, before France reaches the sanitary status of Great Britain and the United States. Ours is imperfect enough, but it is farther advanced than theirs. Our civil authorities see to it that houses are kept fairly clean and that the water supply is unpolluted. People stand in awe of "the board of health." Moreover, there are municipal provisions for the tuberculosis, including dispenpsaries which treat patients free of charge and send out doctors and nurses to homes where the disease exists.

The United Hebrew Charities in connection with the Society for the Relief of Jewish Tuberculosis has created a new ideal in the care of tubercular victims in its fresh air school and sanitary factory. In the latter simple tasks are provided for tubercular employes, who are thus able to earn their livings, supervised by physicians. If four hours is all a person is able to work without tiring, a doctor is there to see that he works no longer than that. There are nurses to take his temperature, a lunch room where nourishing food is served at bare cost, and, when needed, milk is served two or three times a day to patients. The products made by these people are thoroughly disinfected, so that there is no danger in releasing them to trade.

Some provision such as this is what the French nation needs at present to take care of the large number of its citizens suffering from this dread disease, which is destroying the efficiency of both the military and civil armies. The war has brought many strange diseases into the hospitals. Modern medical men have had to contend with trench foot, trench back, nephritis, cholera, gangrene, gas poisoning and typhus. But their encounters have been swift and decisive—either they conquered or they did not. With tuberculosis it is different. The progress of the disease is slow and weakening.

If taxes are paid before Sept. 1, 1917, deduct 3 per cent. off County taxes, no discount being allowed on State Tax.

N. B.—By an act of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed at the January session, 1890, being Chapter 536, it is provided that all county taxes shall be due and payable on the 1st of September succeeding the date of levy, and on all county taxes paid on or before the said day a discount of 3 per cent. shall be allowed; and after the first day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum until paid; but this discount shall not be allowed any person or corporate institution unless the whole amount of state and county taxes due be paid when the same is made.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE
OF VALUABLE
Coal AND Timber Property
In Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Clarendon M. Lewis and Mary B. Lewis, his wife, to Marcus A. Patrick, dated the 6th day of February, 1907, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 55, folio 570, one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having been made in the principal sum and the interest secured to be paid by said mortgage, I, Taylor Morrison, attorney named in said mortgage for the purpose, will, on at 10:30 o'clock a. m., or immediately following the sale of the Jamesson and Lewis coal and timber lands, in front of the First National Bank in Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, sell at public auction to the highest bidder all the coal and other minerals, natural gas and oil underlying, and all timber, except locust and chestnut, located upon all those certain pieces or parcels of land situated, lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, and which are particularly described as follows, viz:

SATURDAY, July 7, 1917,

All that tract of land known as "McGirrs Homestead," which is composed of parts of the following tracts, known as "Novazembla," "Brady's Defeat," and "McGirrtan," containing One Hundred acres, more or less; and also all the mining rights and privileges granted and conveyed to the said Clarendon M. Lewis, and owned by him by virtue of the deed conveying said property and rights to him from Norman Barnard and Mary Barnard, his wife, dated on the 23rd day of July, 1900, and recorded among the Land Records of Garrett county in Liber E. Z. T., No. 38, folio 537.

The timber on this land is said to be very valuable and the various beds or seams of coal underlying it to be of excellent quality. The property is accessible to the Western Maryland Railroad, and with the Jamesson and Lewis coal and timber to be sold on the above date at ten o'clock, comprises a valuable coal and timber field and presents a rare opportunity to purchase a very valuable property.

TERMS OF SALE: Cash on the day of sale as provided by said mortgage.

TAYLOR MORRISON,
Attorney Named in Mortgage.

REGULATIONS FOR THE DRAFT ISSUED

Every Man Registered Is Subject to Call of the President

Regulations for the draft, announced officially at noon Monday in Washington by President Wilson, show that every one of the 120,000 men in Maryland who registered on June 5 must pass the prescribed tests to determine whether or not he is eligible for service in the armies.

And likewise every one of the nine and a half millions of men throughout the country who registered on June 5 must also pass these tests.

The regulations are designed to eliminate at once from the whole number registered the men who are unfit physically or have certain just claims for exemption and to leave a balance of able-bodied, non-exempt men, who from time to time will be drafted into the new armies.

LOCAL BOARDS TO DECIDE.

The most vital power, that of deciding which men are indispensable and the necessary industries, is placed in the hands of the district boards. One or more boards is created for each federal district in the country.

The entire burden of proof for exemption is saddled upon the claimant.

Appeal from the rulings of the tribunals is provided for in the regulations.

On a day to be set the local boards will meet and organize. The registration cards are secured from the registration boards which then cease to exist. The cards are numbered serially from one up and the names and numbers posted in a public place. At the same time a copy is sent to Washington.

When evary card is numbered and posted in every precinct in the nation the stage is set for the actual drawing. Although the method is left for another proclamation, it is known that the drawing will take place in Washington.

After the order in which the men are called up for service is determined, the quota that each state must yield up to the armies will be announced.

The state governors are directed to divide the quotas among the counties and cities on the basis of population.

Then a certain number of numbers are drawn in Washington. Each number drawn will strike the men of that number in every precinct in the nation.

These numbers and names are again pasted and published and the men called are notified by mail.

Next the "honor men" are summoned for physical examination before the local board. One member of each board is a physician. He is ordered to make the examination in the presence of another member of the board.

To guard against any unfairness in the physical examination, the President makes an ingenious provision. In case the physician designates any man unfit, the board calls in another physician. He makes another examination in ignorance of the first report. If both make the same diagnosis, a certificate of disqualification is issued. Members of the board are barred from passing upon the cases of any of their relatives.

After the physicial examinations are finished the boards take up the exemption of the classes specified in the rules.

A claim supported by affidavits must be made by men seeking exemption. Claims upon occupational grounds must be made to the district board.

In making a claim for exemption on the ground of a dependent, the claimant must furnish an affidavit that the income for the support of the dependent is mainly from the fruit of his labor, and not derived from property. He must bring another affidavit from the dependent affirming the dependency, and another from a head of a family stating the same grounds.

MUST DECIDE IN THREE DAYS.

Within three days after the affidavits are filed the local board must make its decision. Either an absolute, conditional or temporary discharge may be granted.

The local boards next report a list of men discharged and those not discharged to the district board. Again these names are posted and a notice sent to each.

Claims for exemption upon occupational grounds must be made to the district board within five days after the man is notified that he is drawn.

The burden of a double proof rests upon these claimants. They must prove that the industry in which they are engaged is necessary and that they are "indispensable" to its successful conduct.

The regulations provide that claims may be made upon these premises:

"That he is actually engaged in a particular industrial or agricultural enterprise necessary to the maintenance of the military establishment or the national interest and that his continuance therein is necessary to the maintenance of that industry and cannot be dispensed with or replaced without substantial material loss and detriment of that enterprise."

Each claim must be supported by affidavits.

CERTIFICATES OF DISCHARGE.

When, in the opinion of the board, the loss of the man to the industry outweighs the gain to the military establishment, a certificate of discharge is issued.

Claims for exemption may be made by wives, parents, children, employers, or any other person for the man in whom they are interested.

The boards are empowered to investigate affidavits and claims for exemption with any means at their disposal.

After the occupational claims are passed upon the district board next reviews the appeals from lower boards. Upon these appeals their decision is final. When it is adverse the man is drafted into the army.

After all appeals are decided and occupational claims settled, the district board reports the list of eligibles to the adjutant general of the state. These are the men that are to be summoned to the colors in the fall. They are notified by mail.

An appeal from the district board in occupational claims to the President is provided for. But pending the decision of the appeal the claimant may be summoned to the camp.

A LATER PROCLAMATION.

In a later proclamation President Wilson will create a national board to hear the occupational appeals.

The regulations give the President authority to determied from time to time what general classes of industries are necessary to the maintenance of the military establishment. These classes will be announced by proclamation. The district boards are ordered to ascertain the existing conditions of industry in their districts to aid in making equitable exemptions.

Another proclamation to follow within a few days will make the laws governing the final step of the draft—assembling the men and calling them into the camps.

On any disputed decision of the boards a majority rules. Members are barred from taking part in any hearing that concerns any relative closer than a second cousin.

BENEFIT OF DOUBT TO U. S.

In case of doubt in physical examination as to whether the man is unfit, the government is given the benefit of the doubt and the man is certified as "fit."

To guard against partiality, every case of an exemption by a lower board is appealed automitically to the upper tribunal. Unless new evidence is presented after a short time, the higher board affirms the decision. This method gives the public in general an opportunity to present evidence favoring or opposing the decision.

Battery A To Tour W. Md.

The first platoon of the Maryland Field Artillery, Battery A, which spent last week touring the Eastern Shore recruiting, returned to Baltimore yesterday from Easton. About a dozen recruits were added to the ranks, and many prospective recruits were "lined up." The contingent left Baltimore last Wednesday, with about 50 officers and men, under Capt. J. Craig McLanahan. With the unit went two 3-inch field pieces, two caissons, the field kitchen and supply automobiles. Five towns—Tolchester, Chestertown, Centerville, Denton and Easton—were "invaded" and given exhibitions of what the Field Artillery could do.

Next week the second platoon, in commmand of Lieut. Hunter Boyd, will tour Western Maryland. Captain McLanahan also will accompany this contingent.

Reasons Why You Should Patronize this Horse.

He is an extra good individual and represents the most popular breed in the country today. His pedigree represents the best blood of his breed. His quality is unsurpassed and he has the best disposition of any stallion in the country. He transmits this disposition to his colts. He is a tried horse and a sure foal getter. His colts are easy to sell and bring good prices; they have high life, plenty of vim, but are easy to handle. He will stay here and give you a chance to breed to him again.

We will exercise the greatest care in handling mares, but will not be responsible for accidents.

Will stand for the season of 1917, until July 1, at the following places: Hutton, at M. G. Mellot's, Mondays and Tuesdays of each week, beginning April 23rd and 24th. McHenry, at Jonas Glotfelty's, Wednesday and Thursday of each week. Oakland, at the Fair Grounds, Friday and Saturday of each week.

MOTOR ACCIDENT ON NATIONAL PIKE

Three Hurt When Car Turned Turtle.

While motoring from Grantsville toward Frostburg in a Ford car Sunday afternoon F. H. Tibbetts, his son Robert Tibbetts, William Roland and another man met with an accident in front of the residence of Frank Michaels on the National Pike four miles east of Grantsville, in which three occupants of the car were hurt and one escaped without injury.

The car was going at a rapid rate, it is said when a tire on one of the rear wheels bursted. The wheel was not strong enough to stand the strain of rounding a curve on the rim, and as it gave way the car turned turtle, pinning William Roland beneath and hurling the other men in the air.

Taylor Crump, who was a dinner guest at the Michael home, took the injured men to the Miners' Hospital in his car. The injuries were dressed by Dr. Cobey and Dr. McLane.

F. H. Tibbetts was only slightly injured and left the hospital Monday morning. His son Robert has a broken shoulder. Mr. Roland was injured about the spine and has no use of one of his lower limbs.

All the men were from near Bloomington, this county, and were out for a pleasure tour., The machine in which they were riding is badly damaged.

F. H. Tibbetts is mine superintendent of the Mastellar Coal Company at Hampshire, W. Va.

Commissioned First Lieutenant.

This morning Dr. John D. Darby received his commission as First Lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps of the Army and has been notified to hold himself in readiness to report upon being called for service.

WHY NOT SPEICHER?

His Ability Has Been Recognized by the State at Large.

To the Editor of The Republican.

The article appearing in the columns of The Republican last week with respect to Senator Speicher's return to the Maryland General Assembly has appealed very strongly to me. In Mr. Speicher the people of Garrett county have an advocate who has shown no mean ability to do things "worth while." He has accomplished much and has been of material benefit to his county as a Senator and as a citizen, and I trust that he may be prevailed upon to be a candidate at the September primaries.

CUT A SWATHE 200 YARDS WIDE

Cyclone Does Considerable Damage in Vicinity of Shade Mills.

The vicinity of Shade Mills, Garrett county, on the National Pike, a few miles west of Frostburg, was visited by a tornado Sunday afternoon. The swath cut by the cyclone was 200 yards wide. The orchard of William Turner was uprooted and the roofs were torn from the house of William Hetz and the barn of James Hetz, all in the same neighborhood. Others suffered damage, while considerable injury was sustained by orchards and crops.

Red Cross Receipts.

FIVE ADDITIONAL ARMY RECRUITS

Young Men of Garrett County Going to the Training Camps.

Monday in Cumberland five young men of Garrett county added their names to the already long list of recruits who will serve their country in the present war. All of the men are from the Northern section of the county, being as follows:

Roy R. Wilburn, Lawrence Gallagher and Clarence M. Werkheiser, of Jennings, who will be assigned to the infantry. Robert Russell and Walter L. Green, of near Lonaconing, were accepted for service in the United States Marines, going to Baltimore Monday evening to receive their assignments.

Sergeant Cooper, who is in charge of the recruiting office in Cumberland, will be at Kitzmiller three days this week in the interest of the Marine Corps enlistments.

TWO ACCIDENTAL DEATHS

Both Occurred In West Virginia, Victims from Garrett County.

At Rowlesburg Monday morning Reuben Gnegy, son of Mr. Joel Gnegy, of near Red House, was instantly killed when a saw mill boiler which was being tested under steam pressure exploded, a fragment of the boiler striking him and hurling him a distance of thirty-five feet, his death being instantaneous. His remains were taken to his late home Monday afternoon and yesterday morning interment was made at Red House after services conducted by his pastor. He was a member of the Dunkard church.

Yesterday at Newburg, West Va., Robert Miles, employed a few years ago as a baker at the Oakland bakery, was killed when he fell from a mine motor which he was operating. Several years ago he married a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Truman Miller of Oakland.

Empire Theatre Program.

At the Empire Theatre each evening finds the house well filled with an appreciative audience, brought about by the splendid features produced with the leading movie stars in the several casts, and the coming week bids well to outshine in magnitude any previous effort on the part of the management to satisfy a clamoring public for something better.

Tonight (Thursday) the big feature show—Tom Taylor's really and truly wild animal production showing the terrors of the jungles; the Cowboy Millionaire in his management of wild steers and riding bucking broncos. In addition pictures of the world war taken on the field of battle will be shown.

Friday—Golden Fetters, with Wallace Reid and Anita King leading.

Saturday—"His Sweetheart," with George Beban.

Monday next, "Redeeming Love," with Kathleen Williams and Thomas Holding the stars.

Tuesday evening, Monday night's program will be repeated.

Wednesday, "The Slave Market" with Pauline Frederick taking the leading part.

GOV. HARRINGTON VISITS OAKLAND

He Was Greeted By Many Residents at Meeting.

The preparedness meeting announced for last Saturday morning in the Maryland theatre, Oakland, was held as per schedule and was well attended by the farmers and citizens in general, nearly every section of Garrett county being represented.

Governor Harrington, accompanied by President Woods, of the Maryland Agricultural College, and Prof. Thos. B. Symons, Director of Extension Work, of the same institution, arrived here on Train No. 3 and were met at the station by a number of local gentlemen who had been appointed as a reception committee by County Agent Middleton, under whose auspices the meeting was held, the committee being headed by Attorney W. R. Offutt. The party went direct to the Commercial Hotel, and shortly thereafter to the Maryland Theatre, where the Governor and party were greeted by a goodly crowd of ladies and gentlemen. A short reception was held by Gov. Harrington, after which Chairman Offutt called the meeting to order and explained the purpose of the gathering in a few well chosen words, after which he introduced the speakers.

President Woods was the first speaker, he being followed by Director Symons, both of whom talked along agricultural lines and the big part the farmers of the country are to play in the present crisis. These gentlemen left some thoughts with our farm people, which, if heeded and carried into effect, will be of great benefit, not only to the farmers, but to the country at large.

Governor Harrington was the last speaker. He referred to the part Marylanders have played in wars of the past, and talked along lines of general preparedness, expressing the belief that the State would be in the forefront of affairs as they now stand in the present world crisis. He has visited nearly every county in the State and has found the people of every county doing what they can to aid their country in the war with Germany.

The party left immediately after the meeting for Cumberland, going in an automobile, where a similar meeting was held in the afternoon. The Governor expressed his gratification with the success of the meeting, and was well pleased with the manner in which our people turned out at such an early hour to hear the important subject discussed.

Truck Wrecked.

One of the stone trucks used by Frank Marine in transporting material for road repair work on the National Road from Frostburg west, was wrecked last Thursday when the machine got beyond control of the drives, who fortunately escaped injury. The truck was badly damaged and will cost about $2000 to make the necessary repairs. On the last trip of the truck prior to the wreck the machine was driven by Emroy Bolden, of Oakland, who reported to the contractor that the brakes were bad, when Marine took charge of it.

KILLED BY FALLING TREE

John A. Cooper Met Death While Working in Woods.

John A. Cooper, aged twenty-nine years, son of Mr. and Mrs. David F. Cooper of near Dobbin, and residents of this county, met with a sudden and tragic end on Monday evening last when he was killed by a tree falling upon a shack in which he and his brother Brown had taken refuge during a storm.

The death of the young man was instant while his brother escaped without an abrasion of the skin, although both were standing close together.

The funeral occurred on Wednesday with the Rev. Frank H. Harvey officiating.

ADVISORY BOARD.

Of Which Mr. Henry M. Speicher Is President.

At a meeting of farmers and business men which followed the Governor's meeting on Saturday, July 7, the following men were elected to organize the Garrett county Agent's advisory board. C. W. Friend, J. T. Glotfelty, J. G. Friend, Ugene Kelly, Robt. Lathrum, J. T. Beckman, H. M. Speicher, T. E. Bishopp, U. O. Blocher, H. P. Miller, C. E. Ellithorp, A. P. Enlow, Brice Glotfelty, P. S. Fike, Fred. Miller.

At a meeting of the board which took place in the County Agent's office, Oakland, July 10, the following officers were elected.

President Henry M. Speicher, Accident; vice pres., Jos. T. Glotfelty, Oakland; secretary U. O. Blocher, Grantsville.

Following the election of officers the applications for community leaders were considered. The applicants were: R. F. Bartlet, Adrin Glotfelty, John Fitzwater, Harrison Wiley, E. W. Adams, W. A. Carr, T. P. Savage, Fred Livengood.

Each man's qualifications were discussed and the following three men were selected by ballot: T. P. Savage, E. W. Adams, Fred. Livengood.

LOCAL BOY ON DUTY IN FRANCE

Joe Rathbun, of Mountian Lake Park, Arrived There Safely.

Postmaster and Mrs. Joseph Rathbun have been notified that their son Joseph arrived safely in France with the first body of troops sent from this country and is now on duty in that country as one of Gen. Pershing's Army.

The young man enlisted in the United States Marines about two months ago, was stationed in Philadelphia where he received training until placed on board one of the transports and taken to the foreign port where he landed safely as reported by the War Department.

Headlights on at Noon.

Automobile men were complaining of the dense fog on the National pike between Frostburg and Grantsville Sunday. Cars coming east had their lights on at 1 p. m. Sunday night tourists going east were advising those going west not to leave Frostburg on account of the wet condition of the road and fog. Frostburg was visited by a heavy hail storm, coming from the east, and this helped to make the condition bad west of here. The hail is thought to have done very little damage to the crops.

THIS MEMBER OF CONGRESS CAN TELL YOU ALL ABOUT HOW GLASS IS BLOWN

Frederick N. Zihlman Is Representative From Maryland—Newest Member of Labor Group.

BEGAN CAREER IN FACTORY

Went to Night School, He Explains, but Obtained Education Chiefly Through Reading.

By MADAME ON DIT.

WASHINGTON, June 16.

There is no man who comes to the United States Senate or the House of Representatives who cannot talk exhaustively about politics, who cannot discuss national issues and international affairs, who cannot confer about the intricate needs of his district or State from one session to another, but it is a unique experience to meet a member of Congress who can also explain exactly how the glass on his desk is made.

That, however, is what Mr. Zihlman did yesterday, turning the thin tumbler about in his quick, deft fingers, and describing the process of its manufacture with the familiarity of a master craftsman.

"Yes, it happens that I do know all about it," he laughed, "because my trade is that of a glass blower, and has been since I was 15 years old. Indeed, it was my uncle who was responsible for this kind of thin glass; you know it is comparatively only a few years ago that everything in glass was thick, especially all the cheaper quality, and my uncle traveled over the country introducing this thin tumbler. He invented several things in the manufacture of glass with more or less success. The most important at the time, although it is not in use now, was cutting the top off the drinking tumbler.

"They're all made—blown, you know, like a beer bottle—then the neck is knocked of, and the edges smoothed so the lips will not be cut. The process for that was devised by my uncle and successfully used until other processes were introduced."

"How old were you when you first went into the glass factory?"

"Eleven," Mr. Zihlman replied. "I was born in Carnegie, Pa., but my family moved to Cumberland when I was three years old, and I've lived there ever since."

Mr. Zihlman's father, Nochoias Zihlman, was the son of Swiss immigrants, and a pioneer in the manufacture of glass in the State of Maryland. He died when Fritz, the eldest of five children, was five years old. The small boy entered the primary grade of the public schools, and in the next few years acquired the only education he was to get inside academic walls.

"Oh, afterward I did attend a night school for a few months," Mr. Zihlman recalled, "a night school organized by one of the school teachers for the children who were working, but my so-called education was attained through my conviction that to get along in the world, and to get up in the glass trade, I had to know something. That evident necessity drove me to read, write, study whenever and whatever I could. There wasn't much time for it, however, because I was a journeyman glass blower at fifteen."

"What did you study—how did you inform yourself, when you had time?"

"By taking advantage of everything to read that I could find. I recall now, that I read entirely too much fiction for immediate practical benefit, but I couldn't help it, I liked fiction. My mother had a lot books, and of course I indulged in Leatherstockings Tales and Dickens to my heart's content. Later I devoured Kipling (I still have the habit), and I've always read poetry where I could find it. One of the more recent books that influenced—almost to the point of inspiration—was 'The Conqueror.'

"It's amusing, but true, that for years I've read the Congressional Record, faithfully and regularly, and there is no gainsaying the information to be obtained from its pages on national legislation."

"Did you just read it because of what you learned from it on public questions, or did you have an idea that you yourself would some day be in politics?"

"My uncle suggested that to me one day when I was still in my early 'teens, but I cannot recall that it aroused any ambition in my soul. He followed the suggestion with another which I immediately accepted. I remember the time as distinctly as though it were yesterday. He was always interested in seeing us get on; of course I needed no encouragement to work—that was a necessity, but he kept at me to study. 'Fritz,' he said, 'you must study, learn things, and some day you'll go to Congress. Now I have an encyclopedia at the house; you take that and read it; read about everything, an deducate yourself.' Well, of course, I got the encyclopedia, and it provided and educate yourself. Well, of course, it was a gold mine for me."

Mr. Zihlman is one of the youngest men in the House and perhaps the most prominent of the "labor group." He is no stranger in legislative halls, because seven years ago, when he was 30 years old, he was elected as a Republican to the State Senate of Maryland, where he distinguished himself for his earnestness and zeal, not only in the best interests of the State, but in the welfare of the workingman.

"The man who 'has been there' is qualified to talk about things with greater fairness than the man who, although more brilliant, speaks only from theory," Mr. Zihlman observed. "There is a place for every man in the world if he only has the nerve and determination to find it, and I'm sure there is always the necessity for the practical business man in politics.

FREDERICK N. ZIHLMAN.
Representative From Maryland newest and youngest member of the labor group.

"The rule is that young men go through the law department of colleges, and they know law; they are thoroughly versed in all phases of jurisdiction, and it follows that practically all the men with the controlling power in government affairs are lawyers. But when some issue comes up that has at stake the interests and welfare of—well, the men, women or children in the glass factory, for instance—why, I know more or the most about it because I've worked there—right there at the same bench—that are my fellow workmen. So often methods employed by people who are going into welfare work as a calling, a fad, or popular fashion, or for philanthropic purposes, or with any motive whatever, waste their efforts because they don't know personally the practical side of the industry or conditions they're trying to improve.

"I know all about the pitiful and pathetic side of the lives of the children who work before they are grown to working age or strength; I know the disastrous results of endless hours, the misapplied human force to supply the increase in demand—I have personally come up against all of those and many more conditions. So, you see, I've qualified for the place I want in legislation—the place that will help bring about an understanding between the employer and the employed for the greater good of both.

"A lot of trouble arises from the fact that neither one understands the other. It is the intelligent adjustment each to the other that will make for the greater good of all, and greater efficiency in labor, with greater profit to both."

First, last and all the time Mr. Zihlman is a humanitarian, but he does not lay at the door of those who have, all the responsibility for the misfortunes of those who have not.

"The older I grow," he said, "the more I see how little the poor realize their opportunites for helping themselves. Neither do the poorer working classes realize as they should the absolute necessity for an education. There one comes back to the point of instructing the parents in what is needful for their children, and failing that, the children must understand that if they start out to educate themselves the opportunity is never wanting—it is there, if they'll just seize it. Otherwise, without the education, the boy or girl spends his life at the small wage rate.

"So few realize that an education is necessary to help them improve the trade at which they work, that the more they know about things the better able they'll be to suggest new methods, new machinery, better sanitary conditions, oh, a thousand things, that instantly place them where they're marked for promotion! The great trouble is that when a boy is eleven or twelve he has one idea, and that is to get out and earn some money—he cuts out the school idea entirely. He and his parents believe that they're 'poor' and what other people can afford they can't have. Whereas, it is true in Maryland, that if a fellow starts out to educate himself he can do it. The same applies to every other State in the Union.

"History is full of the lives of great men who burned the midnight oil and the tallow dip to study and help themselves along against poverty and hardships. But to-day, really, you have almost to dodge opportunity, because it is so possible to get the education you start out for, no matter if you haven't a cent to your name when you begin."

It was long before Mr. Zihlman attained his majority that he became so intensely interested in the business of bettering the condition of the men and women of the working classes. From his own experience and that of those about him he decided early in the game that the greatest disadvantage the workingman encounters comes from his inability to consider the vital issues from both sides.

Thus while a very young man, and before he was in the public eye, he began to think things out, to consider how the cause of the workingman could properly be presented to the employer, and the position of the employer be explained properly to the employed. When Mr. Zihlman was old enough to vote he had made an exhaustive study of the questions that most concerned him and his people, and became the logical and natural leader in the labor movement in that part of Maryland. He was chosen the first president of the Maryland State Federation of Labor, and while studying and speaking upon economic questions for the workingman became involved in the issue sof State politics, which resulted in his election to the State Legislature.

There, although he was dubbed "the boy Senator," he distinguished himself for his efficiency, his ability as the champion of union labor, and his loyalty to his party. It was before he entered the State Senate that Mr. Zihlman established his reputation as an orator of distinct force and eloquence.

"Originally I was just about as shy as they're made," Mr. Zihlman laughed, "but that was one of the things that had to be overcome. I remember a man in Cumberland gave me an idea about public speaking—about the only suggestion I ever had on the subject. He was a great student of Shakespeare—read him so constantly that he unconsciously spoke his language, until he was ridiculed. But he said to me: 'Do you get so full of your subject that it thrills you from head to foot, that your very fingers tingle with the inspiration of your subject? Well, that's the way to make a speech.' And, of course, when you do get so fired with enthusiasm, why, it is impossible to hesitate because you're shy."

From his extensive reading and wide range of subject, Mr. Zihlman has acquired a manner of speech and writing that is brilliant and finished in style. No verses in magazines or newspaper escape his notice. If they appeal to some sentiment or fact, he takes out his scissors and they're pasted in one of his many scrapbooks. More than that, they're inscribed upon his memory, and at just the right moment they're brought forth to point a moral or adorn a tale.

All scrapbooks possess more or less of a fascination for the curious, but Mr. Zihlman's are unique. One of them is the old bound copies of Congressional Records, from which, years ago, Mr. Zihlman was getting his education, keeping up with the current events of the world. Upon its pages are pasted whatever appeals to Mr. Zihlman's fancy in poetry and anecdotes; there is a motley array of statistics, announcements, or events political or social that he wants to keep.

Close beside a long dissertation on "How Employees Should be Treated" is "Jim Bludso of the Prairie Belle"; near an account of "The Labor Day Picnic" is Dobson's "The Rose and the Gardener"; here and there are long accounts of union labor conventions, interpersed with Riley's, "When My Dreams Come True," and "Don't You Remember Sweet Alice, Ben Bolt, "Sweet Alice Whose Hair Was So Brown"; upon one page is "A Lesson for the American Workingman," and just beyond it is Sam Foss's "Let Me Live in My House By the Side of the Road, and Be a Friend to Man"; a clipping headed in large letters "Republicans Much Alive," is not far from Ingersoll's speech at the tomb of Napoleon; many accounts of Allegany politics are interspersed with Lincoln's epigrams, Burns's "Highland Mary," and Howells's verses on society; there are pages purely political—the election returns, the forecast for elections, sketches of the "candidate for the State Senate," his chances for election, and then there are lines from Alice Cary, Robert Louis Stevenson, Rudyard Kipling, James Russell Lowell and Longfellow.

There is an account of the dance given by the Potomac Glass Company for their employees and their families (incidentally Mr. and Mrs. Zihlman won the prize that night for the best waltz), and just beyond is the poem about "The Music in Life," Edwin Markham's "Lincoln, the Man of the People"; Grantland Rice's "The Last Inn, Abou Ben Adhem," George Cohan's "Life's a Funny Proposition," and Henley's "Master of My Fate."

Mr. Zihlman, the young flint glass worker in Congress, has made only one brief speech on the floor of the House, and that was simple, direct and without a word of poetry in it.

His speech was in favor of the selective draft as the most scientific method of raising an adequate army and at the same time giving protection to the industrial and agricultural needs of the nation. He spoke also for the raising of the basis of pay for the non-commission officer, "to hold out encouragement to the young men of the country whom we are asking to sacrifice everything, even life itself, for the common welfare. . . ."

"That is a grim and tremendous fact," one commented, turning the final page of Mr. Zihlman's scrapbook—to find pasted snugly in the corner, over years-old record of an award of pensions, the lines: Give us men! Men, who when the tempest gathers, grasp the standard of their fathers . . . " But yet there was room on the same page for "The Fortunate Isles," and there one closed the book.

"You sail and you seek for the Fortunate Isles,
The old Greek Isles of the yellow bird's song?
Then steer straight on through the watery miles,
Straight on, straight on and you can't go wrong.
Nay, not to the left; nay, not to the right.
But on, straight on and the isles are in sight.

Pure Bred Stallion

An announcement of interest to all farmers and stockmen in the Accident, Cove and Keyer's Ridge districts of Garrett county, Md., and Negro Mountain, adjacent to Mason & Dixon's line, is made by John H. Colflesh of Accident, Md., to the effect that he is the owner of a fine Pure Bred Stalion that will make the season at the following places:

In Cove at barn of George Colflesh.
At Keyser's Ridge at barn of Charles Reichenbecher.
On Negro Mountain at barn of C. C. Wisseman.

Mr. Colflesh is a delegate of the Imported Stock Association and hopes to interest all the farmers in the neighborhoods named in the raising of better horses. He hopes to meet all of the farmers and breeders during the season and invites them to come and see his horse and get acquainted with his pedigree and qualities which make him a desirable sire.

For particulars call on or address,
JOHN H. COLFLESH,
Accident, Md.

Reasons Why You Should Patronize this Horse.

He is an extra good individual and represents the most popular breed in the country today. His pedigree represents the best blood of his breed. His quality is unsurpassed and he has the best disposition of any stallion in the country. He transmits this disposition to his colts. He is a tried horse and a sure foal getter. His colts are easy to sell and bring good prices; they have high life, plenty of vim, but are easy to handle. He will stay here and give you a chance to breed to him again.

We will exercise the greatest care in handling mares, but will not be responsible for accidents.

Will stand for the season of 1917, until July 1, at the following places: Hutton, at M. G. Mellot's, Mondays and Tuesdays of each week, beginning April 23rd and 24th. McHenry, at Jonas Glotfelty's, Wednesday and Thursday of each week. Oakland, at the Fair Grounds, Friday and Saturday of each week.

TERMS—To insure a mare with foal, $12.00.

The Secrets of the Hohenzollerns

STARTLING EXPOSURE OF INNER LIFE OF KAISER AND CROWN PRINCE AS TOLD BY COUNT ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX

EDITORIAL NOTE. — William LeQueux, who here chronicles for his friend, Count Ernst von Heltzendorff, the latter's revelations of the inner life of the imperial German court, has long been recognized throughout Europe as the possessor of its innermost secrets.

The English "Who's Who" says of him: "He has intimate knowledge of the secret service of Continental countries and is considered by the government (of Great Britain) an authority on such matters." Another authority says: "Few people have been more closely associated with or know more of the astounding inner machinery of Germany than he."

LeQueux probably has more sources of secret information at his command than any contemporary in civil life, and for the last six years the British Government has made valuable use of his vast store of secret information through a specially organized department with which LeQueux works as a voluntary assistant.

Count von Heltzendorff became an intimate of LeQueux several years prior to the outbreak of the war; he has been living in retirement in France since August, 1914, and it was there that LeQueux received from the crown prince's late personal adjutant permission to make public these revelations of the inner life of the Hohenzollerns—that the democracies of the world might come to know the real, but heretofore hidden, personalities of the two dominant members of the autocracy they are now arrayed against.

The Kaiser's Secret Trip to the Hague.

ONE May morning in 1907 I was walking on the terrace of the Castle of Halberg, at that time in the possession of the late Freiherr von Stumm, whom the emperor often visited.

I think, however, that our host became secretly irritated at the frequent visits of his imperial guest, for certainly what with the establishment of the special telegraph to Berlin and a special post office, and the finding of accommodation for the crowd of personal attendants, each visit must have cost poor old Von Stumm a considerable amount.

I had already been busy upstairs in the room allotted to me, and had come out to take a walk in the warm and welcome sunshine, when suddenly I saw the emperor in a suit of brown civilian clothes striding towards me.

He seemed to be in a humorous mood and joked with me as I walked beside him.

Suddenly he halted, as though recollecting something and asked:

"Heltzendorff, have you with you some of our paper for important documents?"

"Certainly," was my reply.

"Ah! then please place some of it with envelopes upon my table, and also wire to Berlin to send here ten couriers."

"Ten couriers?" I echoed in surprise.

"Yes, ten. I may want even twelve or more."

Just before eight o'clock that night I was informed that the couriers were waiting below, and on descending found six of the imperial messengers and four from the ministry of foreign affairs, ready to travel anywhere, even to the uttermost ends of the earth.

A Stupendous Hoax.

On informing his majesty, the latter handed to me about thirty of the great blue envelopes containing "documents of the highest importance," addressed in his own hand to various officers of state, princes, princesses, and other prominent people in all parts of the empire.

"These are to be taken at once, Heltzendorff," the emperor said. "The messengers are to bring us replies."

"In every case?" I asked.

"Yes. In every case," he answered.

Then I carried the batch of correspondence below, and much puzzled at the nature of this latest activity in private letter-writing, I handed them to the couriers, who sorted them out and distributed them among themselves.

Half an hour later the documents were being conveyed to various parts of the empire.

When I returned to the study I found the kaiser laughing quietly to himself, and wondered what could be the reason. He signed some documents I read to him, but ever and anon a broad smile would cross his usually stern features.

Until a week afterwards I did not learn the cause of the imperial merriment, but when I did I burst into loud laughter myself.

Those envelopes containing "documents of highest importance" each contained only a comic postcard, which the emperor had purchased during a visit to Saarbruck.

The kaiser had played a huge joke upon those whom he despised, for the delivery of these formidable imperial dispatches created a great stir in the households of their recipients. Old princes were awakened in the middle of the night to be handed a dispatch from the emperor; old princesses jumped out of bed to receive an imperial communication; officers tore open the envelopes eagerly expecting high appointments; the admiral of the grand fleet believed that war had been declared; and insignificant foreign diplomats were under the impression that the emperor had at last deigned to notice them.

The whole thing was a huge joke invented by the kaiser on the castle terrace, and the court and the imperial family were in fits of laughter over it for a week.

A Message to the Emperor.

One afternoon when we were back again at the palace at Potsdam the emperor was explaining to me a certain order he wished carried out. Presently one of the flunkeys entered with a private note for his majesty. The emperor read it, and instantly I saw that his countenance grew pale and his manner changed.

He read it again, and then re-read it, his lips compressed, his eyebrows narrowed, and his cheeks unduly pale. Afterwards he struck a match and burned the letter in the grate.

That missive no doubt contained some grave news, the nature of which I could not guess, because he suddenly abandoned his work, and, telling me to meet him in the study at eight o'clock that evening, he strode out.

When he had gone out I picked up the blackened tinder and examined it, but it was so charred that I could not read any word, though from the two or three marks of the pen I realized that it had been written by the hand of a woman.

An hour later I learned that the emperor had left Potsdam. He had by receipt of that letter evidently become seriously perturbed.

I called the flunkey who had handed him the missive and questioned him. He had received it from another servant who had received it from someone else, until at last I discovered that it had been handed by a young girl to one of the sentries on duty outside the palace, who in due course had sent it in to his majesty.

While passing along one of the corridors that evening I met bald-headed old Von Klupfel, who was at that time grand chamberlain, and he beckoned me into his cozy room. Then, when the door was closed, he asked—

"What has happened? The emperor has left incognito and all of a sudden. The state ball tomorrow night has been cancelled."

"Cancelled!" I echoed. "Where has the emperor gone?"

"Nobody knows—except Herman, his personal valet, whom he has taken with him."

"Curious," I remarked, thinking of the letter, though, of course, I told Von Klupfel nothing of it. Whatever transpired within his majesty's study was always regarded as a strict secret. More than one serious family quarrel had occurred there in my presence.

"Well, something serious has certainly occurred. That is my belief," declared the old chamberlain. "'Uncle' Zeppelin was coming to the palace tomorrow on a visit, and I have just sent him a telegram to postpone his journey.'"

"But his majesty had two important engagements tomorrow, and, in addition, a military parade in Berlin," I said.

"All is canceled, my dear Von Heltzendorff," replied the old fellow. "The emperor has left for a destination unknown. I suppose I had better report his absence to the imperial chancellor?" he added.

"No, if I were you I would say nothing," I replied. "For some private reason his majesty has evidently been forced to go on a journey. Without doubt I shall hear from him tomorrow. As soon as I do so I will tell you."

A Telephone Message From "Herr Zeller."

My expectation was realized, for the next day just after six o'clock in the evening I received a telegram dispatched from Haarlem, in Holland, ordering me to go to the Adlon hotel, in Berlin, at once and register there. The concluding words of the message, sent in English, were: "You will receive a telephone call at 10:30 tonight." It was signed "Zeller," one of the names used by the emperor when he traveled incognito.

I ordered the car and drove into Berlin, taking with me a small bag, and engaged a room in Herr Adlon's hotel, in which was a telephone.

Soon after ten o'clock I told the telephone operator that if anyone rang me up I should be in my room.

Half-past ten came, and then slowly the hands of the clock passed round to eleven, and past.

Suddenly there was a sharp ring, and I took up the receiver.

A strange voice sounding far away asked for me, and I replied in the affirmative.

Then in a few seconds another voice—which I instantly recognized as the emperor's—asked in English—

"Is that you, Von Heltzendorff?" and having received my reply, he said: "I am Zeller, speaking from the Hotel des Indes, at The Hague. Will you tell madame I am here? Instruct Klupfel to cancel all my engagements for the next fortnight, and tomorrow night come here and bring any papers that I have to attend to. It would be as well to tell them at my office that I have been called to Hamburg. Can you hear me?"

"Perfectly," was my reply. "I quite understand your orders, sir, and will attend to them at once. I shall leave for The Hague tomorrow night."

"Good. And bring me another suit of civilian clothes."

Then there was a sudden buzzing in the instrument, a sharp click, and all was again silence.

I put down the receiver in wonder. I saw that to telephone to me at the palace was impossible, as it would go through the exchange there, and somebody might be listening. For that reason he had sent me to the Adlon, and from his conversation he was evidently representing himself at The Hague to be a prosperous German merchant, as he had done at Nice and other places.

At nearly two o'clock in the morning I passed the sentries on duty, and re-entered the Potsdam palace. It was then too late to give the kaiserin her husband's message, therefore I waited till morning, and gave it to her verbally when alone with her in her breakfast room.

The empress seemed greatly relieved when I told her of the telephone conversation, and during the day wrote me a note to hand to the emperor on my arrival at The Hague. That night I left for Holland, and next morning duly inquired at the Hotel des Indes for Herr Zeller. I was conducted to a small suite of rooms on the first floor, where, dressed in a gray suit, his majesty rose to meet me, smiling at my astonishment.

"Well, you heard me plainly on the telephone, eh?" he asked. "Ah, I see you are surprised that I am here. I, too, am equally surprised to find myself here. And, further, I do not know how long I shall remain."

"I have brought the clothes," I remarked, and afterwards drew the empress' letter from my pocket and handed it to him.

"Her majesty should have left for Prague yesterday," he said. "Did she go?"

"No. She was still at the palace when I left at eight o'clock last night."

The emperor gave vent to a grunt of dissatisfaction. From the books lying about his room I gathered that he passed his time in reading, preferring not to go out in the day time for fear of being recognized. Apprehension on that score was unnecessary, for the kaiser, shorn of his uniform and decorations, presents in civilian attire a very ordinary appearance and not readily recognizable by the man in the street. For that reason he was often able to spend a week in Paris, Nice, or on the Italian Riviera without anybody being the wiser.

Mystery of the Royal Scheme.

I engaged a room close to that of Herr Zeller, and for some hours remained with him while he signed a number of state papers which I had brought with me. He seemed strangely absent-minded, I thought, but presently he took up one of the formidable blue documents which, by the heading, I saw was an urgent report from the imperial chancellor.

"Look, Heltzendorff! Look at this!" cried the emperor.

"The chancellor reports that the editor of the Cologne Gazette has called at the chancellery and inquired how long it was intended that I should remain out of the country? Think of it. My absence is known!"

"That may be so," I responded, "but your majesty's whereabouts is unknown to all save her majesty the empress."

"Yes, yes," said the emperor impatiently. "But our police will commence making inquiries, and I shall be traced here."

"Why not leave at once," I suggested, in the hope of elucidating the truth.

"Ah! That is just the unfortunate point. I am unable to leave," he replied. "I must remain—and I do not know for how long!"

Further than that he would tell me nothing. The fact that his absence from Germany was known greatly upset him. It seemed to me as though, by that truth leaking out, some clever secret plan of his had been thwarted.

From his countenance, as he re-read that document, I saw that serious trouble was brewing for somebody. His majesty, seized by his mania for travel would very often at five minutes' notice leave Potsdam and journey to the farthest end of the empire. But the papers were always at once informed, and the kaiser never went out of his country without first acquainting the chancellor of his intentions. In this case, however, he slipped away by a night train, and nobody knew until next morning.

The Dark-Haired Woman.

On concluding the correspondence, I went out for a stroll, when, not far from the hotel, I noticed a well-dressed, rather handsome, dark-haired woman approaching. To me her face seemed familiar, and I was puzzled to know where I had seen it before.

I passed on, and, entering a cafe, sat down to smoke and to think. Memory of that woman's face still haunted me. I felt that I had met her somewhere, and had had good cause to remember her, yet, for the life of me, I could not recall the circumstances of our meeting.

An hour later, on returning to the hotel, I saw her speaking with the concierge.

She was evidently staying there, hence a few minutes afterwards, when she had ascended the lift, I questioned the man, and learned that she was Madame Rosales, from Malaga, in Spain. She had arrived with her husband three days ago, but monsieur had left the same morning for Paris, and she was now awaiting his return.

The motive of the emperor, usually so restless and pompous, in remaining virtually a prisoner in the hotel, and posing as a merchant, was certainly most mysterious, and even a chat with Herman, his majesty's chief valet, elicited no information.

That night, as I sat alone eating my dinner—for Herr Zeller took his meals in his private sitting room—the dark-haired woman sat at a table near me. With her was a pretty girl in a pale pink dinner gown, evidently a friend who lived in the town.

The pair chatted together and laughed merrily over their meal, while I watched them covertly.

Why, I cannot even now tell, but I held Madame Rosales in distinct suspicion. Yet I could not recollect where we had met before. Now, however, as I sat there in the corner eating my meal I felt convinced that, on her part, she had recognized me, and further, that she had pointed me out to her companion.

Later in the evening I made other inquiries in the hotel, and learned that Madame had several friends. The evening that her husband left for Paris a tall, thin, pale-faced young man had called upon her after dinner, and had a long chat with her in a corner in the lounge. Afterwards they went out together for a short walk, and, returning, he smoked a cigar before he left. On the following day another man, of rather unkempt appearance, called and lunched with her.

Needless to say, I watched madame carefully, and managed during that evening to catch several glances of her. After the pair had dined they spent a short time in the lounge, where they both smoked cigarettes. Then, it being a beautiful moonlit night, they put on their coats and went for a stroll.

The Emperor Peeps In.

So interested had I become in the woman that I followed, and, unsuspected, I dogged their footsteps for nearly half a mile, until they entered a dark, forbidding-looking house which faced a weedy canal.

When the door opened a man greeted them, and slipping in quickly, they disappeared.

They were there for over an hour—yet I remained keeping constant vigil, until at last madame emerged alone, retracing her steps hurriedly to the hotel.

Next morning I met her in the lift at about eleven o'clock, and we descended together. She was dressed to go out, but in the hall the porter handed her a telegram. This she opened, afterwards writing a reply, and taking it herself to the post office.

I was much irritated because my memory was so at fault. There were, I felt, some peculiar circumstances connected with the woman at the time I had known her, but what they were I could not recall. I saw, however, that her memory was better than my own, and that she knew me, and because of that fact had already grown apprehensive.

It was not in Berlin society that I had met her. Of that I felt assured; just as certain, indeed, that her real name was not Rosales.

While I had been out watching the woman on the previous night the emperor had also taken a stroll through the city. What, I wondered, would the Berlin police have thought if they knew that William was walking about at night unguarded and unattended at The Hague.

As I sat with him attending to some correspondence and taking down a number of instructions regarding important matters at the Wilhelmstrasse, he suddenly broke off and told me how he had, on the previous night, spent an hour drinking Dutch beer at that popular resort of tradesmen and their wives, the Royal Brasserie.

"Nobody recognized me," he laughed. "I found out that they sold the best beer one can get outside Germany, and I really enjoyed it. I sent for you, but you had already gone out. Did you go to the theater?"

"No," was my reply, and then I told him practically what I have related in the foregoing lines.

"How curious!" exclaimed his majesty. "I would much like to see this mysterious Spanish lady. She must be interesting."

At first I tried to dissuade him, but he was so persistent that I described at which table she sat at lunch, and it was agreed between us that while we were eating our meal he should come to the door of the dining room and peep in.

This the emperor did, and cleverly, too, for she never saw him, being at that moment engaged in conversation with a waiter.

When I rejoined him in his room he said: "No, Heltzendorff, I have never seen her before."

"Well, majesty," I declared. "I am certain I have seen her or her photograph somewhere, and that she is not what she represents herself to be."

"She's an adventuress most probably," replied the emperor. "Many women are. Indeed, it is difficult to discover one who does not adventure either in love, in politics, or in crime."

A Trip to Berlin for Information.

His words impressed me. An hour later I went to a photographer's and arranged for a surreptitious portrait to be taken of Madame Rosales the next time she took a walk.

All day the young photographer haunted the vicinity of the hotel until the light faded. Yet next morning as she came out he snapped her without her knowledge, and in three hours I had a rough print of it in my pocket.

That night, after writing down a great mass of memoranda, instructions to various departments of the state, I left again for Berlin, with orders to ring up Herr Zeller on the telephone from some unsuspicious place every night at ten o'clock.

I returned to the Berlin Schloss absolutely mystified, and next day spent the greater part of the time visiting the chancellor and the various ministers, and giving them the emperor's commands. Then at about six o'clock I called at the chief bureau of police in the Alexander Platz, and entered the private room of old Leibbrand, who at that time was chief of the detective service.

To him I showed the surreptitious photograph of Madame Rosales. The astute thief catcher removed his spectacles, and examining the picture with the aid of a big reading glass, gave vent to a loud grunt.

In response to his bell a younger and more alert man entered, and to him he handed the photograph, saying:

"Please see if anyone recognizes this. I believe I do—but I may be mistaken."

He then became inquisitive as to where and how I had obtained the picture, but naturally I said nothing.

"I've been away on a journey," I said, "and meeting the woman, I thought her suspicious."

"And if my memory serves me properly I think, Count, that your suspicions are very well grounded."

"Why?" I asked.

"Let us wait for the report from outside," replied the old fellow. Then, in order to turn the conversation, he asked news of Balz, who was at that moment the detective in attendance on the kaiser's person, and whose vigilance the emperor had, of course, evaded.

"Oh! He's at Potsdam," I laughed. "I haven't seen him lately, for I've been away on a mission."

"The emperor is in Thuringia," Leibbrand said. "There seems to be some mystery as to his whereabouts, but Balz telephoned me today to say that his majesty has gone to Thuringia without any staff or personal attendants."

"That is so, I believe," was my reply, but I smiled, for the Thuringia myth had been invented by myself before I had left for Holland. It is at any time difficult to impose upon the Berlin police, but, of course, news given out officially from the court they naturally believe to be the truth.

Peril of the Emperor.

A quarter of an hour later Leibbrand's assistant re-entered the room, and, handing back the photograph, placed a file of papers before his chief, saying:

"The woman is a famous Spanish dancer, and one of the most active members of the anarchist society of Geneva—the society which committed the bomb outrage upon King Alfonso, and who were responsible for the recent attempt on the king of Italy."

"An anarchist!" I gasped.

"Yes," answered the official. "And a very dangerous one, too. If she put foot into Germany, we should have her at once under lock and key."

"Why?"

"Because it is known that there is a conspiracy on foot, organized by that league in Geneva, against his majesty the emperor. We had news of it from the Swiss police a month ago."

"Is there really a plot against the emperor?" I asked, much startled.

"There certainly is in Geneva," replied Leibbrand. "At the present moment we are watching for this dancer's appearance in Germany. I thought I was not mistaken when I first saw her picture."

I stood in that bare official room utterly staggered. I dared not tell those two men the truth or give them warning of the emperor's peril.

I saw, however, that I must act instantly. In five minutes I had gathered that the woman was one of the most dangerous anarchists in Europe, and I also realized that my memory had served me very well, inasmuch as I had seen her picture in an illustrated paper a year before, when she had been arrested in Rome in connection with an alleged attempt upon the life of the king.

"Herr Leibbrand, will you please write down for me the facts you have just related?" I urged.

"Most certainly," was his reply, and taking up his pen he scribbled the truth, signing it with a flourish.

Eighteen hours later I ascended in the lift at the Hotel des Indes to the suite occupied by Herr Zeller.

Without waste of time I produced the snapshot photograph and asked him whether he recognized it.

"Certainly," was his reply. "It is Madame Rosales," adding, laughingly, "I became acquainted with her and her husband in a curious manner in the lift last night. We were ascending together, madame, who wore a soft blue evening blouse, standing next to me. Unfortunately the button on the wrist of my coat caught in the sleeve of her blouse and tore it very badly. I apologized for ruining the blouse, and insisted that her husband should send the damaged garment to me so that I might replace it with something better. It arrived only five minutes ago, and is in that little box over there," and he indicated a cardboard box lying upon the couch.

"Ah! You haven't opened it, I see!" I exclaimed. "Your majesty must not open it! Please read this!" And I put before him Leibbrand's signed statement of the identity of Madame Rosales.

When the emperor read it he instantly realized the situation.

Luring the Kaiser.

"Ah! I see it all, Heltzendorff. My practical joking becoming known, the anarchists have taken advantage of it. I have been lured here, out of Germany, by a cleverly conceived dodge, for I came here believing that I was to meet in secret General Oranovski, chief of the czar's military cabinet, who wished to confer with me. And though he was due three days ago he has not arrived. Instead, this woman and her friends are busy plotting my death."

"Without a doubt. Probably had you opened that box yonder it might have been fatal," I said. "Is it not wise to leave at once for Berlin?"

Herr Zeller acted promptly upon my suggestion, and we carried back to Germany the box containing the actress' blouse. Next day in my presence, the box was carefully opened in the military laboratory, when we found, wrapped in a pretty blue crepe de chine blouse with heavy beaded trimming, a small canister filled with a high explosive, the fuse so arranged that had the string of the box been suddenly released by cutting in the ordinary way a terrible explosion must have ensued.

Certainly the emperor very nearly lost his life as a result of his own practical joking.

As for the Spanish dancing girl, she apparently followed the emperor, for two days later she and a man named Ferroni, a well-known Italian anarchist who was posing as her husband, were arrested at Herbestal when about to enter Prussia, and both were eventually sent to prison for ten years.

A LETTER FROM THE CROWN PRINCE'S PERSONAL ADJUTANT TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX, POSSESSOR OF THE SECRETS OF EUROPE.

Veneux Nadon,
par Moret-sur-Loing,
Seine-et-Marne,
February 10th, 1917.

My dear LeQueux:

I have just finished reading the proofs of your articles describing my life as an official at the imperial court at Potsdam, and the two or three small errors you made I have duly corrected.

The gross scandals and wily intrigues which I have related to you were many of them known to yourself, for, as the intimate friend of Luisa, the ex-crown princess of Saxony, you were, before the war, closely associated with many of those at court whose names appear in these articles.

The revelations which I have made, and which you have recorded here, are but a tithe of the disclosures which I could make, and if the world desires more, I shall be pleased to furnish you with other and even more startling details, which you may also put into print.

My service as personal adjutant to the German crown prince is, happily, at an end, and now, with the treachery of Germany against civilization glaringly revealed, I feel, in my retirement, no compunction in exposing all I know concerning the secrets of the kaiser and his son.

With most cordial greetings from
Your sincere friend,
(Signed) ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF.

MORE OFFICERS NEEDED.

For the second series of officers' training camps the government is particularly keen to get men of thirty-one years or older who have executive ability. While any man of good physique and character, who is twenty years and nine months old, is eligible to make application, the older men are most wanted. The camps are an emergency measure and the special object is to train a body of men fitted to fill the more responsible positions of command in the new armies. Every effort will be made to select men of exceptional character and proved ability in their various occupations.

While it is desired to give opportunity for all eligible citizens to apply, no man need make application whose record is not in all respects above reproach and who does not possess the fundamental characteristics necessary to inspire regard and confidence. Applicants who are accepted for training as reserve officers enlist for the period of the camp—three months—agreeing to take such commissions in the army as may be tendered them at the conclusion of the training period. The enlistment obligates the man to service in the training camp only. Officers commissioned as the result of these camps are intended to help handle the second draft of a half million men for the national army. So far as is now known this will furnish the last opportunity for citizens not in the military service, or drafted in the future, to become officers.

The camps will run from August 7th to November 25th, and all applications must be in by July 15th. Ample time will be given successful applicants to put their private affairs in order. The pay of an officer is presumed to be sufficient to maintain his family in comfort, if not in the luxury to which they may be accustomed. The government of course is asking Americans to make sacrifices. We must all make them in one degree or another. It is for the individual above the draft age to decide whether or not he should answer this call. The need exists for men of some maturity and judgment to officer our troops. The best leaders will naturally obtain the best results.

The enlisted men have the right to careful, competent leadership. They will miss this in many instances unless the right men apply now and prepare for this patriotic service.

BOUNTIFUL CROPS FORECAST.

A smashing blow to German hopes is the government crop report issued yesterday. Cautious persons will reserve the celebration until the harvests are completed, but there is no reason why everybody should not be uncommonly cheerful over the prospect and put forth additional effort to realize all that is forecast. Spring wheat apparently will more than make up the loss of the winter variety and the total yield of this grain is now estimated at 678,000,000 bushels, or 38,000,000 more than the yield last year. Corn, with an indicated yield of 3,124,000,000 bushels will stuff the cribs with 541,000,000 bushels more than the harvest of last year. An increase of 167,000,000 bushels in the white potato crop is indicated, a traction over 58 per cent more than last year, while of "sweets," which disappeared from the markets last spring, there will be 10,000,000 bushels more than last year's crop. Other field crops and fruits reported on make good showings also; there is no occasion for alarm if disastrous weather conditions do not interfere with growth. So there should be plenty of food for America and a good surplus for export. The Allies may be better fed than they have thought possible, even though we keep for them all the food that has been finding its way surreptitiously to Germany through neutral countries.

The prospect for America becomes even brighter than the government report indicates when it is remembered official cognizance is taken only of the commercial crops. In the potato report, for example, no account is taken of the war gardens that are numbered by the thousands in every populous center. None knows what these will produce, but it is certain the harvest in the aggregate will be very large. That is to be added to the 452,000,000 bushels the farmers are raising. And it will be a factor in keeping prices at a reasonable level next winter and next spring. So also with corn. Almost every gardner has a couple of rows of sweet corn that is not reconed in the almost fabulous 3,124,000,000 bushels the farmers stand to harvest. But it will figure prominently in family accounts in the late summer and fall. Make the most of it. And now that you "have your hand in" make up your mind to have a garden again next year. Europe will want all we can export then just as she does now. If the people do not help themselves as they are doing this year they will have some high prices to complain about. Bountiful crops are a most opportune gift of God; the effect of them must not be to discourage any from planting all possiole next year.

THE NEWSPAPERS AND THE DRAFT.

Aside from ascertaining, his serial number in the selective draft, a registered man has only to watch the newspapers for further announcements and wait. The lists of the registered with the numbers assigned to each are posted at exemption board headquarters in each district, not at local registration or polling places. The numbers of the first draft are to be drawn in Washington and will be published in the newspapers. Following this each district in the city and county will make up its list of chosen men and this will be posted at district headquarters. Then the national call will be published in the newspapers, followed by a period of seven days in which men called may make known their claims for exemption, and a 10-day additional period in which they may furnish proofs.

These details have been in the papers; they are emphasized here to impress upon men of draft age and their families the advisability of reading the newspapers for the expected government announcements, especially that making public the serial numbers of the men drawn. Too many young men are misled by opinions voiced off hand by persons who have "heard" things. All the facts of the draft will be published and instructions that appear in the newspapers are the ones to obey.

Family Reunion.

On Tuesday, July 3rd, a family reunion was held at the old home farm of James L. Harvey which was attended by many of the immediate family with their connections. The farm has been the home of Mr. Harvey since babyhood, it having been cleared by his father about the year 1843, and is now occupied by himself and Mrs. Harvey with their daughter Miss Clara. The occasion of the gathering was to celebrate not only the anniversary of his Mr. Harvey's wedding but also his birthday and that of his brother Joseph Harvey, who resides near Deer Park. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. John W. Harvey and son; Mr. Jeremiah Harvey, Frank Harvey, Miss May Harvey, all of Wilson; Mr. and Mrs. Josephus Harvey, of Deer Park; Mrs. Sallie E. Harvey, Mr. Scott Harvey, ex-Judge Daniel Wilson, Mrs. Jane Lipscomb, Miss Elsie Lipscomb, Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Beckman, Mrs. Huldah Lower, Miss Agnes Wonderly Queer, Mr. and Mrs. John M. White; Messrs. George and Charles Harvey, sons of Mr. James Harvey, and their families. A bounteous picnic dinner was served beneath the shade of the orchard trees with the Stars and Strips overtopping all. H. J. W.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The camp meeting is now at full tide and being largely attended. Last Sunday the attendance was fully up to any first Sunday in the history of the meeting, and next Sunday, if the weather is favorable, the attendance will probably be one of the largest in the history of this great camp. The preaching of Rev. L. J. Miller and the Bible teaching of Rev. D. F. Brooks could not be excelled. Come next Sunday and see the great crowd and hear these great preachers and teachers.

There are yet many empty cottages and the hotels and boarding houses are doing very little.

July 20th will be the beginning of the Epworth League Institute and also the Summer School of Missions.

Rev. Dr. Stone and family are now here.

Mr. W. H. Mallette has purchased the Felty store building and will open a confectionery and ice cream parlor next week. He expects to make an attractive place.

Estray Notice.

There came to the Cranberry Glade Farm about June 15th a two-year old Black Mare. Owner will please call, pay damages and costs and take away.

LOCAL WOMEN ON DEFENSE COUNCIL

To Act in Harmony With Male Members of State Board.

The personnel of the Women's division of the State Council of Defense has been announced by Governor Harrington. While the women's division has no legal status, as has the State Council of Defence, which was created at the special session of the Assembly, the two bodies will work together in the handling of local war and preparedness problems.

The new women's commission is in the main the original Women's Preparedness and Survey Commission, which has been doing splendid work for the last six months. To the original list several new names have been added and all vacancies have been filled.

The personnel for Garrett county is as follows: Mrs. Lorilla F. Tower, chairman; Mrs. Elizabeth Sliger, Mrs. Mary H. Offutt, Mrs. Emily M. Hamill, Mrs. Harriett Pollock, Oakland.

MRS. MARGARET CONNELL

Death of An Old and Esteemed Lady.

MRS. MARGARET CONNELL.

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret Connell took place on Tuesday, July 10th, from the Presbyterian church. Seldom are we called upon to chronicle the death of one whose life has been crowned with so many years. She was born in Scotland Jan. 1, 1827, and died at her home in Oakland July 7th 1917. At an early age she united with the church in Scotland. She married John Connell in Scotland and with one child they came to this country and located on a farm at Hutton 63 years or more ago. She was a woman of rare qualities of head and heart. A devout Christian, a devoted mother, a constant student of the Bible, she developed a beauty and strength of character seldom attained.

Her trust in her Saviour was beautiful. It was interesting to hear her read selections of her own Scotch poetry, in the beautiful dialect she loved so well. It was peculiarly appropriate that at her funeral there should be sung, "My Ain Countrie," which she loved so well and many a time "Fond memory brought the light of other days around her."

For some time she has been gradually failing but her mind was quite clear and active to within a few days of her departure. Two days before she fell asleep, when her pastor spoke to her of the theme andPerson ever uppermost in her mind, she roused enough to give evidence that she understood what was said, and at the close of the prayer she said—as she never failed to do "Thank you." It was refreshing to hear her repeat the scriptures, showing that her spiritual food was derived from that word. It took from her every element of the fear of death. To her the future was a blessed reality, and death was but the opening of the gate into the glories of the immortal life.

She loved the gates of Zion and until incapacitated by declining years, she was always in her place in the house of God, for worship. She was one of those of whom Solomon speaks in the last chapter of Proverbs. Her life's example is worthy of imitation. Her memory will be cherished by her loved ones, and children will rise up and call her blessed.

"She went up from the wilderness, leaning on her beloved,
Into the joys of the ransomed,
Into the light of His love,
Into the fadeless beauty, of mansions
prepared above,
Into that sinless perfection,
That her soul so longed for here,
Into that blessed reunion
The communion of saints most dear."

She has entered into the rest that remaineth for the people of God.

A FRIEND.

BITTINGER.

A series of splendid showers fell over this section on last Friday, Saturday and Sunday, greatly relieving the crops which were much in need of moisture.

Work has been begun on our much neglected main highway and it is earnestly hoped that the work may continue uninteruptedly until the road is in first class condition.

Milton Opal and family, of near Somerset, Pa., spent Sunday as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brenneman.

MAKES FORTUNE DIGGING COAL

Lawrence B. Finzel Called the World's Most Frosperous Miner.

The man who is said to be the world's greatest coal miner is a Marylander, being a native of Garrett county. His name is Lawrence B. Finzel and is a brother to Patrick Finzel, mine foreman at Montell mines in Allegany county.

A reporter recently requested Patrick Finzel to write up a little story of the marvelous record of his brother and the story as written by Mr. Finzel is given herewith in full:

Near the village of Finzel in Garrett county, Md., is the farm owned by Henry Finzel, one of those sturdy Germans who left the Fatherland to find a home in the land of the free, where he might become a useful citizen. For fifty years he followed the occupation of a miner. His six sturdy sons were taught the value of being industrious. They cleared a farm where the densest of forests grew while the father labored in the bowels of the earth to earn a livelihood and support a large family.

After the farm was in cultivation the boys followed in the footsteps of the father and all became miners. The third brother, Lawrence B. Finzel, now a resident of Pennsylvania established a record as a miner which stands today unsurpassed by any other miner. When a resident of Maryland he was employed by the Consolidation Coal Co., and drew the largest wages ever paid a miner in small vein mines in the state.

After leaving the Consolidation Coal Co., he moved his family to a point near Richwood, W. Va., where he secured employment with the Saxman Coal and Coke Co. At this place he worked in a seam of coal three feet high and for one year he earned $2,360.60, an average monthly wage of one hundred and ninety-six dollars a month. He loaded four thousand tons of coal, an average of twelve tons daily. This is without doubt the greatest amount of coal ever dug in West Virginia in a single year by a miner.

Getting tired of his abode among the mountains of West Virginia he moved to Pennsylvania, near the city of Johnstown, where he soon broke all previous records for the state. In the month of April he drew the sum of $294.60. He has surpassed all records in the three sister states. Many stories are told of his work. In West Virginia when he was absent a driver was dispensed with. In Maryland he was given a heading to drive and the mining superintendent gave the air course to two Austrian miners who were splendid workers, and in a month the heading was driven a distance of sixty feet deeper in the coal than the air course.

He is a man of medium weight and height and in a physical examination at Johns Hopkins Hospital he was pronounced the finest muscled man that ever came to the institution. He has kept this record for twenty years as a miner and as he walks along the pathways he is pointed out as the "big digger."

He leaves his home with his fellow miners and returns with them and does as much work as two or three ordinary miners with apparent ease. His friends are proud of his record and challenge the world to produce his equal.

A Social Event.

An unusually pleasant social affair was given at the home of Editor Sincell and his good wife on Wednesday evening. It was the occasion of the anniversary of the Editor's birthday. The honor was extended to the members of the Masonic lodge, which was very generally represented a few of the uninitiated were honored with an invitation which was truly appreciated. The hostess was equal to the occasion, as she is to every other one that confronts her, and was at home in every sense of the word. At the appointed hour nearly forty men sat down to a bounteous repast. After the feast of fat things, when every man seemed to forget his pledge of conservation of food—and who could blame him, with the tempting viands before him—then followed the flow of soul. Mr. Sliger acted as toast master and a number of gentlemen responded to the call and made short and complimentary remarks and appropriate also. It was a delightful occasion full of good cheer and fellowship and all could heartily congratulate the host on the return of his birthday, and wish him many happy returns.

The success of the entertainment was recognized as being due to the hostess, who certainly was in her sphere, and graced it too. The same must be said of her fair and efficient helpers.

"They talk about a woman's sphere as though it had a limit;
There's not a place on earth or heaven,
There's not a task to mankind given,
There's not a whispered yes or no,
There's not a life or birth,
That has a feather's weight of worth—
Without a woman in it."

Woman, woman! "She needs no elogy—she speaks for herself."

I'm sure all who were present will join me in this toast to our genial host. "May the hinges of friendship never grow rusty." A GUEST.

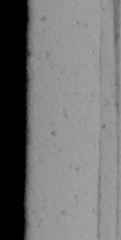
THOSE AWFUL CRAMPS

Suggestions that may save Much Suffering



Marysville, Pa.—"For twelve years I suffered with terrible cramps. I would have to stay in bed several days every month. I tried all kinds of remedies and was treated by doctors, but my trouble continued until one day I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for others. I tried it and now I am never troubled with cramps and feel like a different woman. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly and I am recommending it to my friends who suffer as I did." —Mrs. GEORGE R. NAYLOR, Box 72, Marysville, Pa.

Young women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this root and herb remedy.

BREAD AS ECONOMICAL FOOD

Would Be Used More Extensively If Home-Baked Variety Was Always Good, Say Government Experts.

If home-baked bread were uniformly well made, it would be used more extensively than at present in place of more expensive foods, say specialists in the United States department of agriculture, and this would be a distinct economy. From the standpoint of nutrition it makes very little difference whether breadstuffs are served in the form of bread or in the form of breakfast cereals, side dishes with meat, or desserts.

A man engaged in moderate muscular work can profitably consume about three-fourths of a pound a day of breastuffs in any one of these forms. This quantity is the equivalent of one pound of baked bread. As a matter of fact, however, it is not probable that in the average family this quantity is consumed and the deficiency is made up by the use of more expensive substances. Of course bread alone is not sufficient for the maintenance of health, but from both an economical and a hygienic point of view should be used more extensively than it usually is, declare the experts.

The Reichsrath a Babel.

That parliament of Babel, the reichsrath, now engaged in playing an obscure part in the Austro-Hungarian peace hunt, is permitted to express its emotions in eight official languages—symbolic of the war of tongues raging in the empire itself. In the great vocal chorus the Slovanian may be said to have struck the strident top note, for the very word he has coined for himself expresses the belief that no man is a talker except himself. "Slowan," in Old Slavonian, meant "to speak," and as the Slav understood no other speech, the others were naturally the dumb dogs.—London Daily Chronicle.

Still One More Task to Face.

"So your long day's work is done?"

"Not yet. I've finished as far as the office is concerned, but as soon as I get home and eat my supper I've got to go with my wife to some moving picture show."

Say So!

"Do you support any charity?"

"Rather. I've got a son in college." —Life.

"There's a Reason"

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. SELLERS, Acting Director of the Sunday School Course of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR JULY 15.

HEZEKIAH, THE FAITHFUL KING.

LESSON TEXT—II Chron. 30:1.

GOLDEN TEXT—He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.—Heb. 11:6.

The reformation under Hezekiah is one of the bright and attractive spots in the latter history of the kingdom of Israel. It was a most thorough reformation and God set his seal upon it in many wonderful ways. Teachers ought to give their classes a comprehensive view of all that Hezekiah did, as recorded in II Chron., chapters 29-32.

I. Hezekiah's Proclamation. (vv. 1-6). The proper introduction to this lesson would be to return to chapter twenty-nine and note the restoration of the worship of Jehovah. How it began in one man's heart, Hezekiah; how he called the people to be clean (29:15), then called upon a cleansing of the house of God and its restoration (vv. 18, 19). How he called them to renewed sacrifice and worship (vv. 20, 21). The restoration of the sin-offering and of the burnt-offering, and the result of these offerings in the Levitical music and in the worship of the great congregation (29, 28). The sequel of song always follows and accompanies a true revival of religion. Having consecrated themselves unto the Lord, Hezekiah sends out this proclamation. The consecration of the people, as referred in chapter 29, was very complete. (See vv. 31-36.) Hezekiah was a man of deep discernment as well as of true piety. He saw the meaning of the sacrifice of redemption and put the passover forward as the very heart-center of the worship of Jehovah. (See vv. 1, 2.) Whoever understands the passover, understands God's way of salvation. (See Exodus 12:13-23; I Cor. 5:7, 8; Rom. 3:25, 26; John 1:29.) Hezekiah did not confine his call to those of Israel alone, but extended it beyond its borders to those of Ephraim, thus manifesting the true missionary spirit. Hezekiah had ample Scriptural warrant keeping this passover out of its regular order (vv. 9-13). God is not a God of time or place. Wherever obedience is possible, whether it be a matter of time or not, God approves. Hezekiah, however, did not act upon his own initiative, but sought counsel. (See v. 2.) The man who is the most clearly led of God is the man who is most eager and anxious to know how God is leading other men and will listen most patiently to their counsel. The fact that the people had not "gathered themselves together at Jerusalem" for a long time, might have warranted a further delay. Not so with this enthusiastic young king. He was not bound by precedent, but was anxious to please God.

II. Hezekiah's Exhortation (vv. 7-13). Hezekiah began his exhortation by calling attention to the trespasses of their fathers (v. 7). At the same time he reminds them that if God gave them over to desolation because they themselves were stiff-necked (v. 8) and yielded not themselves unto the Lord to enter his sanctuary, which he had sanctified unto them, they would come under the fierceness of God's wrath, for they had turned from the Lord; they had "trespassed against the Lord God of their fathers." Because of that trespass God had "given them up to desolation." Literally he had made them "an astonishment." This astonishment and desolation was well known, "as ye see" (v. 7). Anyone with eyes open can see today the desolation of individuals, of families, communities and nations who trespass against God. For a generation we have had the deity of Christ and the inspiration of his Word called into question and that the individual man is the dictator of his own conscience and life, and it is because men have departed from their faithful allegiance to Jesus Christ and fail to obey his command, that we see the strife and desolation of today.

The first departure caused people to be "stiff-necked" and Jehovah is calling them to repentance, but they would not hear (see Ch. 36:13; Ex. 32:9; Rom. 10:21). In place of this "stiff-neckness" of their hearts Hezekiah entreats them to turn again to the Lord and not to be stiff-necked as were their fathers (v. 8), that if they will turn again unto the Lord (v. 9) they will find compassion so that they shall again enter his gracious and merciful dealings. Having yielded themselves they were to enter into communion with him and "enter into his sanctuary, which he had sanctified forever."

They were also to serve him. Most blessed results were to follow for them and for their brethren and their children, but all of this bright prospect is conditioned upon repentance, surrender, communion and service, which is based upon the fact that Jehovah "is gracious and merciful" (Ex. 34:6, 7; Ps. 86:5; Jonah 4:2; Mark 7:13). Then, even as now, there were those who would not yield themselves to God's gracious invitation. As the priests passed through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh, even unto Zebulun, they were "laughed to scorn and some mocked" (v. 10).

Is Your Work Hard?

Work which brings any unusual strain on the back and kidneys tends to cause kidney ailments, such as backache, lameness, headache, dizziness and distressing urinary troubles. Kidney complaints make any kind of work doubly hard and if neglected there is danger of gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease. If your work is hard on the back, keep your kidneys in good condition with Doan's Kidney Pills. Thousands rely on them.

A Virginia Case

Alex. Umberger, Spiller St., Wytheville, Va., says: "I had a steady, dull ache across the small of my back. Hard work and heavy lifting brought on the trouble. The kidney secretions were irregular and painful in passage and at times, the backache was so severe, I could hardly straighten. It was hard for me to get out of bed mornings. Doan's Kidney Pills strengthened my back and regulated my kidneys and the benefit has been permanent."

Certain members of the house party were describing the accidents that had happened to them during their respective careers. Adventures by flood, fire and field had all been well received, and Mr. Brown, eager for fame, thought it was his turn.

"D'you know," he said, "I had a very painful experience once. I ran a confounded splinter quite half an inch long right under my finger-nail, don't you know!"

"Really, Mr. Brown," said a maiden of the party; "how did you do it?"

"Well," he said, "it happened like this."

As he spoke he unconsciously raised his hand and scratched his forehead.

"Oh, I see," she interrupted, sweetly; "how very careless of you!"

Fulton Was a Great Man.

The class in history was studying the life of Robert Fulton. In connection with it they, of course, brought in the topic of the steamboat, which you know, made Fulton famous.

"What are many of the great uses of the steamboat?" asked the teacher. "What things might not have happened if the steamboat had not been invented?" she hinted.

"Well," answered little Johnny, who had been called on, "well, um-m-a, Columbus might not have discovered America."

NEW METALS BEING SOUGHT

Manufacturers Looking for Substitutes for Those Now Used Because of Advance in Prices.

The recent advance in price of many of the more commonly used metals has led manufacturers to adopt or consider the adoption of various substitute metals or alloys for certain purposes. The advice of the bureau of standards has frequently been sought in this connection. An interesting field of investigation is opened up by such inquiries.

It appears that the metals traditionally and currently used for various articles are in many cases no better adapted for the purpose than others, and a slight difference in price would warrant a substitution. It is not usually possible, however, to suggest substitutes offhand, as there are many factors involving manufacturing peculiarities, durability and other physical and chemical properties that first have to be determined. "There is," says the bureau, "a very wide field of research here, which would undoubtedly repay manyfold the efforts put upon it."—Scientific American.

STORY OF SEAGOING STEER

It Floated Around New York Harbor for Many Hours and Caused Much Excitement Before Rescued.

Several longshoremen were biting into thick sandwiches of garlic on the water front when there came a prodigious thumping on the plank underneath. The floor of the pier gave forth a hollow sound.

One of the longshoremen, the Brooklyn Eagle testifies, swallowed his garlic the wrong way and let out a Polish exclamation. Then he bent over and applied his eyes to a crack in the woodwork. At first he could not make out anything in the murk, but at length a pair of green eyes met his horrified gaze, it seemed, to his untutored mind, conclusive evidence of a personal call from the evil one, and when horns rapped the planking and a long tail swished the water he went away from there very quickly. With him went the rest of the longshoremen.

Up winding Fulton street they sped and around the crooked corner into narrow Poplar street, where they very nearly carried the door of the Poplar street police station off its hinges. They arrived before the desk sergeant all abreast and told their story, as their knees smote one against another and their hands groped feebly for the desk rail. The desk lieutenant thought at first it was a case of "greenhouse" whisky, but he finally sent a man down to investigate. The patrolman found that the apparition was only a steer which had been thrown into the river and had swum up under the dock. He did not know just what to do and his police manual gave him no help. Obviously he could not loosen the steer's collar and roll it over a barrel. Nor could he give it an antidote for poison.

At last he had a bright thought and called up the dock department, the steer being at a dock and therefore, per se a fit subject for the dock department.

The dock department responded—or part of it did—with saws. Then having opened a nice round hole in one of the city's docks, its work was done, and it sent for the S. P. C. A. The S. P. C. A. does all hoisting jobs appertaining to steers, mustangs or other animal flotsam lifted from the river.

Some brave man passed a rope around the middle of Taurus and everybody gave a "Yo, heave ho!" Up came the steer and stood dripping on the dock with the seaweed hanging from his flanks.

This steer is supposed to have been in the river for 48 hours before it was rescued.

Communal Kitchens.

It is expected that, with the assent of the food controller of Great Britain, an experiment in the use of communal kitchens will be in vogue very soon. The need for these aids to the feeding of the people is threefold; the large number of families who are unable, through ill-health or other causes, to participate in the economic advantages of the war; the difficulty of obtaining suitable and nourishing food for children; and the necessity of having an organization like this in direct touch with the central headquarters. The food once cooked at the central kitchen would be sent out in large tin-lined boxes or double cans to the various depots for sale, and in these big, closed receptacles it would keep hot a long time. At the depots it might be well to supply hot plates for the food to stand on so that when bought it would need little reheating before it was served, says a London correspondent. The demand for a variety of diets can all be met, and plans have already been thought out for dealing with a thousand-and-one interesting questions that arise.

Substitute for Copper.

The use of soft steel and iron as a partial substitute for copper in the manufacture of decorative metals is being experimented with in the department of manual arts at the University of Wisconsin.

For years it has been traditional for decorative metal products to be made wholly or in large part of copper, brass or some other alloy of copper. The price of copper is now so high, more than 50 cents a pound, that a substitute is needed in decorative metal.

The kind of steel and iron required in this kind of work costs at present 14 cents a pound. In many respects this steel is as good, if not better, than copper. It works easily, wears as well, is not discolored or oxidized as quickly, and for many uses is even stronger than copper. It lacks the red-gold luster, but can be given a silver-hued burnish, or can be decorated with paints.—University of Wisconsin Bulletin.

Humanity's Lengthened Life.

Fifty years ago the average length of human life in the United States was in the neighborhood of thirty-four years. Today the average American citizen lives to be forty-five years of age. And fifty years from now the average human life will have lengthened to almost sixty years.

All of this gain in lengthened life is due to the practice of disease prevention. And if the world would put into practice all that is known of disease prevention today, the life of even the present generation might be lengthened by a dozen years or so.

War Spirit Contagious.

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree was more than once placed in a perplexing position by the loss of members of his cast during his tour throughout Canada and the United States. No less than ten members enlisted, including two ladies for service in war hospitals. One humorous incident occurred after the engagement of a "deputy" in the United States. She was not very much interested in the war prior to her appointment, but the talk behind the scenes among the company bore so frequently on the loss of relatives at the front that she felt one night impelled to volunteer as a nurse, was eventually accepted, and her place had to be filled.

Consumption of rubber per capita is more than twice what it was 25 years ago. One company expects to manufacture uppers of shoes from rubber as well as soles. This company will operate its own merchant marine to bring crude rubber from Sumatra and carry manufactured articles to all parts of the world. The company now employs 28,621 men, and manufactures 218,930 pairs of rubber shoes a day. More than a million trees on Sumatra plantations are being tapped.

Save the Babies

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. There can be no danger in the use of Castoria if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher as it contains no opiates or narcotics of any kind.

Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

LAST CHANCE TO BECOME OFFICERS.

The second series of Officers Training Camps, which opens on August 27th, will probably be the last chance for men not in the military service to become officers during the war.

The purpose of these camps is to train men fitted to become the first lieutenants, captains majors, and some lieutenant colonels of the second 500,000. The second lieutenants, and some first lieutenants will be selected from the younger men in the first camps and promoted from the first draft.

The men most wanted are those from 25 to 44 who stand out in their communities because of their success in business, civic or similar activities—men who have proven themselves competent LEADERS.

Men of this type will stand a good chance of appointment and should feel every encouragement to apply for admission to the camps. Previous military training is not necessary. The training camp for this district is Fort Myer, Va. Men selected will receive transportation, uniforms, subsistence and $100.00 a month pay during the three months in training. When commissioned they will receive the same pay and allowance as officers of similar grade in the regular army.

Application blanks, with detailed instructions will be sent from my office on request. Requests for these should be made at once, as NO APPLICATIONS RECEIVED AFTER JULY 15TH CAN BE CONSIDERED.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Take Ye Away the Storm.

Resuming where I left off in my last, let me say, the stupid Sodomites thought Lot was a fanatic. They were not afraid of fire and brimstone, so they mocked at his warnings, despised his entreaties and lived in open and defiant wickedness and rebellion against God, until they reached the climax of licentiousness and depravity on the night the angels came to warn Lot of the doom of the city. Even the blindness with which they were struck was not enough to arouse them and the sounds of revelry and debauchery were heard till the fire fell from heaven and Sodom was swept out of existence by the mighty power of God.

The Lord told the Jews that Jerusalem would be destroyed that not one stone of the temple should be left upon another, yet they would not believe it, until they found the Roman armies about them and saw the place out side the walls so full of crosses, bearing their fellow men that no more space could be secured; saw the temple in flames and themselves falling before the sword of their conquerors or being carried off tor a worse fate. Ah, then they believed the word of the Lord, but it was too late. The very fate they had been apprised of was a surprise to them and was the means of their destruction. It is as true today as it was then. Sinners know that the end will come soon they are warned of their danger, yet will not heed the warning, but continue as stupid in a sinful course as they did in the days of Noah as reckless as those Sodomite sinners and as careless and indifferent as those Jerusalem sinners. Its the old way that has chracterized sinners from the beginning. Men stumble along and at last, surprised at the destruction that cometh upon them, fall into hell, exclaiming perhaps like the dying man to his pastor, "The day when I should have worked is now gone and there comes in upon me the blackness and darkness of night and I am lost." As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be at the coming of the son of man. As the Jews were surprised at the destruction of Jerusalem so will the world be at the coming of the King to the Judgment of which the destruction of Jerusalem was the type. Here we learn the suddenness of the second coming of Christ. It shall be in an hour ye think not of; as a thief in the night and when He comes, He will find the same condition of things that characterized the world in the days of Noah. Such a state was one of danger. Such too is the condition of things we may expect when the Lord comes in the glory of His Father with the holy angels. He shall find the world in the same indifferent, careless condition and in open defiance of His authority and unbelief of His promises. It is dangerous, not only to individuals but to nations and the world at large. What a day that will be! There will be sudden waking to a sense of danger and unfortunate crying for mercy, but alas, too late for mercy. Justice shall be loosed and with flaming sword will devour the adversaries. Men will be heard calling on the rocks and hills to fall on them and hide them from the presence of the Lord, but whither shall they go? They cannot hide from the Omnipresent One. If they take the wings of the morning and fly to the ends of the earth, He is there.

If they go down into the depths of the ocean even there He is; and if they descend into the awful anguish of hell, they can not hide from Him, for they are still conscious of bearing His wrath and curse due sin.

As it was in the days of Noah with the righteous so shall it be with such in the days of the Son of Man. When He cometh in judgment, they shall be safe. It shall be well with them. Righteous Noah obeyed the command of God for he believed the promises. He entered within the Ark and when the flood came and lifted the Ark, he and his were safe. Could he look out upon the seething flood, may be he could hear the cry of despair, the wailing of the lost, and the shrieks of frightened sinners.

But he was safe, for the strong arm of the Lord was upholding him. God always takes care of His own. He had a representative in wicked Sodom and the city could not be destroyed until He had sent His angels and brought Lot and his family to Zoar. When righteous Lot was safe, then swift destruction came on the city whose name is the synonym of unblushing wickedness. He had 7000 who did not bow the knee to Baal and when armies encompassed Jerusalem, they were not permitted to raise the sword, till His own were in a place of safety.

He provided a place of refuge for His children in Jerusalem, beyond Jordan, and brought them into it, before the enemy had access to the city, to commit those atrocious deeds that shock the world for barbarity.

Jerusalem had been warned by Christ and His apostles, yet they rejected Him, but before the Roman armies could destroy that nation and their city, the Christians were withdrawn to a place of safety and then the deluge of judgments flowed down upon the city reveling in iniquity of every description.

Yes, the righteous can sing in death and as the joys of earth fade away, their eyes will open upon the infinitely grander joys of heaven. Even now when encompassed with clouds of distress and beset with many temptations and harrased on all sides they can look away from earth, and longing and praying for the coming of the Lord, can say "Lord haste the day when the faith shall be sight, the clouds be rolled back as a scroll, the trump shall resound, and the Lord shall descend, even so it is well with my soul."

JOANNES.

The Transformation of Washington Society From Purely Social Affairs To Social Workers.

BY MRS. J. CHAS. LINTHICUM.

To the Editor of The Republican:

I mention the transformation of Washington Society because I am more familiar with its present working than I am with those of other places except that of my own city of Baltimore, which is likewise following the footsteps of the National Capital.

Before the war began there were vast numbers of receptions, dinners and other social activities. Each while giving much pleasure and gratification to the participants left no permanent or lasting benefits for the community and the country at large. At the outbreak of the war, however, many persons closely interested in those abroad began taking up lines of endeavor for the relief of the suffering and for the greater comfort of those in the hospitals and on the battlefields, notably Belgian relief work. These activities were confined at first, to those more or less interested in persons abroad and those accustomed to such work. It has now spread throughout the entire social fabric of Washington to such an extent that aside from social activities rendered necessary by the visiting missions from foreign nations, and dinners and other affairs to show them the great welcome which the American people have to bestow upon them, the social activity of Washington is almost solely confined to those affairs wherein the participants not alone enjoy themselves, socially, but have combined charity and relief work with it.

I mention for instance the vast number of women who meet often for the purpose of sewing for the soldiers abroad, the making of comfort bags, bandages and all those things which are necessary on the field of battle and in the hospitals abroad. Then there are the Red Cross workers who work day after day in the interest of that splendid organization. There are those engaged in food conservation and in the spreading of information which will tend to help our people in preparing for the months to come in the nature of food products. In fact the great body of women who formerly knew little other than society work have become efficient and useful social workers.

The situation has been of great benefit to womenkind in general. It has shown them that each and every one can do her part to ameliorate the hardships of this cruel conflagation. At home, in the club, in the social center or whatever place it may be, they are doing their bit, just as much as the soldiers on the fields of battle.

It has shown American women who heretofore have engaged only in the social affairs of life that they can enjoy themselves just as well in doing something for humanity as they could in pleasure seeking. It has enabled each one to find herself, as it were, and to demonstrate that they can accomplish things along this line just as well as those who have been practicing it all their lives. One may be a good seamstress and do splendid work along that line; another may be adapted to nursing and find that she can accomplish great results in her particular line; another may find that she can teach others to conserve the food resources of the country, and then there are those who can teach health regulations and first aid work.

That America is ready to give physically as well as moral and financial support to safeguard her own people and help her oppressed allies was demonstrated when 10,000,000 Americans of legal fighting age placed their names on the nation's roll of honor and published to the world that the truths enunciated in the Declaration of Independence over a century ago were no mere scraps of paper, but a living breathing message that has gathered force and breadth as the years have passed.

Back of this 10,000,000 men, from which will be selected the first actual fighting forces, stands a population of 93,000,000 ready to help sustain them in the field, and, if need be, furnish more fighting men to keep the aggressor from strewing the seas with the bodies of American women and children and laying waste the broad acres of the greatest agricultural and industrial country on the globe. This body of 10,000,000 fighting men, many of them descended from the patriots of 1776, is only a beginning of this twentieth century war of independence. Every man, woman and child in the United States is ready to put shoulders to the wheel.

Woman has found that there is a great work for her to do. That each and every one can and should do something to assist Uncle Sam and his allies in the prosecution of this war. Woman has her particular sphere of usefulness and is loyally meeting her task. The things she can accomplish are varied indeed, and useful. They extend from the kitchen or sewing room at home to the bloody battlefields abroad. Never in the world's history has woman found so much to do and never have they more quickly risen to the emergency and become efficient. When this cruel and inhuman war is over there will be a chapter written which will give due credit to the splendid womanhood of the world and which will say in part that it was woman's work which preserved the home, gave comfort on the field of battle, relieved suffering in the hospitals and camps and carried the final word home to mothers, sweethearts and relatives. God bless the work of woman.

G. S. HAMILL ON DEFENSE COUNCIL

Gen. Carl R. Gray, Chairman—Governor Names Fifty Men to Act on Board.

Friday last Governor Harrington made public the names of 50 men who will constitute the Maryland Council of Defense, under the act passed by the Legislature during the special session recently ended. As he announced he would do, he named as members of the council all of the members of the Preparedness and Survey Commission, and to that list added the names of Frank A. Furst, Gen. Francis E. Waters, Judge Hammond Urner, Stevenson A. Williams and Louis K. Gutman. Joseph Y. Brattan was substituted in the general list for Gen. Felix Agnus, who declined to serve.

The appointment of Messrs. Furst, Williams and Urner paves the way for the appointment of an executive committee consisting of the men whose names were mentioned at Annapolis as being entirely satisfactory to those who first insisted upon naming the executive committee in the War Loan Bill. The other men the Governor's opponents asked to have made members of the executive committee are Gen. Carl R. Gray and James C. Legg, both of whom were members of the Preparedness and Survey Commission and, therefore, will be members of the Council of Defense.

The council will name its own executive committee. Therefore, simply because the Governor has appointed as members of the council the men whom his opponents asked to have made members of the executive committee does not give the absolute assurance that they will be appointed. It is presumed that the council will meet in a few days and organize. The probabilities are that the executive committee will be named at that time.

General Gray will be chairman of the council. Ae was chairman of the Preparedness and Survey Commission and as such did excellent work.

It is understood that the Governor thought of having State Senator William I. Norris as a member of the council, but that the latter declined to serve, saying that at Annapolis he had supported the administration's program because it was the proper thing for him to do and that he did not want to be placed in any position where anyone could say that he had taken his stand with the hope of receiving some reward. In fact, Senator Norris has made it clear that, under the circumstances, he would not accept any appointment.

The following is a list of those who will constitute the Council of Defense:

Carl R. Gray, Howard Bruce, Frank N. Hoen, James C. Legg, Charles C. Cohn, A. W. Thomas, Holden A. Evans, Charles E. Rieman, G. R. Sinnickson, Frank R. Kent, William H. Killian, John M. Dennis, Stuart Oliver, Francis M. Jencks, Joseph Y. Brattan, B. H. Griswold, Jr., Redmond C. Stewart, Albert C. Ritchie, Henry M. Warfield, Dr. Gordon Wilson, W. H. Manss, Dr. William Bullock Clark, Judge Hammond Urner, Louis K. Gutman, Frank A. Furst and Gen. Francis E. Waters, all of Baltimore.

Daniel Annan, Cumberland.
Hon. Frank M. Duvall, Annapolis.
Charles J. Fox, Orangeville.
Dr. Philip Briscoe, Mutual.
Hon. Harvey L. Cooper, Denton.
Dr. Henry M. Fitzhugh, Westminster.
Dr. Howard Bratton, Elkton.
Dr. L. C. Carrico, Bryantown.
W. Henry Laird, Cambridge.
James M. Gambrill, Jr., Frederick.
Gilmor S. Hamill, Sr., Oakland.
Thomas H. Robinson, Belair.
R. A. Johnson, Laurel.
W. W. Beck, Chestertown.
Otho H. W. Talbott, Rockville.
George W. Waters, Laurel.
John E. George, Sudlersville.
E. Plowden, Leonardtown.
Colonel Henry J. Waters, Princess Anne.
Frank G. Wrightson, Easton.
John B. Sweeney, Hagerstown.
L. W. Gunby, Salisbury.
Marion T. Hargis, Snow Hill.

Card of Thanks.

We desire through the columns of this paper to thank the many friends and neighbors far and near for their kindness and sympathy shown us in the untimely death of our brother, Thomas H. Wilburn.

HIS BROTHERS AND SISTERS,
Swanton, Md., July 9, 1917.

Married.

HAGER—CALE—In Pittsburgh on June 28th, Miss Jocie Cale, formerly of Mountain Lake Park, and Mr. E. O. Hager, of Uniontown, Pa., were joined in the bonds of wedlock. The announcement of this wedding came as a surprise to the friends and relatives of the bride, who is well known in this county.

SNYDER—HESS—On June 25, at St. Mark's Lutheran church, J. Lindsey Snyder and Sarah Lexie Hess, both of Morgantown, W. Va., were united in marriage by the pastor, Rev. S. E. Wicker. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Shartzer, formerly of Oakland but who now reside in Morgantown. Mrs. Snyder is a cousin of Mrs. Shartzer.

BROWN—BLAMBLE—Elisha Sargent Brown, of Kingwood, W. Va., and Eunice May Blamble, of Aurora, W. Va., were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at the Lutheran parsonage by the Rev. S. E. Wicker.

SHANK—STEIDING—On last Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in St. Mark's Lutheran church, Samuel Robert Shank and Bessie Beulah Steiding, both of Swanton, were united in holy wedlock by the pastor, the Rev. S. E. Wicker. The impressive ceremony was witnessed by a number of friends and relatives of the contracting parties. Both Mr. and Mrs. Shank are popular young people of Swanton and their host of friends join us in hearty good wishes for a happy and long married life.

Women and the War . .
. By Frederick J. Haskin.

A few weeks ago a khaki-clad regiment marched through the streets of London on its way to Frace. Proudly and right gallantly the regiment marched, with the erect carriage and firm assured tred of the trained soldier; with hats jauntily cocked and short skirts fluttering in the breeze. The soldiers were women!

Months ago the British military authorities started recruiting a large number of women clerks and mechanics and putting them through a strenuous course of physical training. The idea was to send them to France to relieve men who were occupying positions other than the trenches. There are now some 1,200 women, with firm hard muscles and strong constitutions, in the French war zone doing military work under the strictest kind of military discipline. They are not actually fighting, although even that may come. They are filling jobs of military cooks, clerks, carpenters and ambulance drivers, who have been moved up to the front.

In view of social conditions, it is remarkable to find the British women serving as a clerk on the battle-front of France. During the past three years politics has been forgotten in England. Even many of the men have not voted, and the women have been too busy to devote much time to the ballot: They have worked with an inexhaustible patience and self-sacrifice, and if their energy was all the greater because they hoped for a reward in the end they deserve sympathy. For, according to the best observers, the reward has been very slight.

At the beginning of the war, when the women began to organize for war work, the government gave them to understand that their assistance would necessarily have to be limited. There were certain things women were fitted for and they were to stick to these. Germany had 500,000 women in munition factories before England had 50,000. Finally it was the private corporation in England which insisted upon their employment both in the factories and in railways and police departments. In other fields, too, the government proved stubborn. When the women attempted to handle the problem of Belgian refugees the government would lend no assistance, even presented opposition—took over the work and performed it very inefficiently. But such opposition met its defeat in its encounter with medical women.

Trained medical women all over the United Kingdom offered their free services to the government in its time of need, only to be refused. Undiscouraged, the women then went to France and France received them gladly. In December, 1914, the first hospital at the front under British women was thrown open. This hospital is now considered one of the most efficient in France, and it is entirely run by women, even to doctors, nurses, cooks and ambulance drivers.

After this Great Britain slowly began to realize its mistake. Gradually women have been admitted into all fields of war work, until now there is a woman's army working in the very midst of battle in France, and two prominent women, Mrs. Sidney Webb and Dr. Marion Phillips, have been asked to serve on the British Commission of Reconstruction.

In France, from the beginning, it has been different. The feminine influence in France since the days of the French Revolution has always been great. As a rule, the Frenchwoman is gifted with a practical commonsense and business judgment equal to that of her husband, and when she speaks the men listen to her. There women have made and broken cabinets without the weapon of the ballot.

When war broke out the French government immediately realized the immense extent to which it should have to rely on its women. As soon as the women started filling the places of men in the munition factories, the government threw open all the technical schools to them, so that they might secure the necessary training. When the women philanthropic workers started their campaign for the care of Belgian refugees and for the destitute children of Northern France, the government not only did not interfere but ordered every prefect to provide the headquarters of the women's societies in Paris with lists of all the refugees in his district. Thirty thousand Belgian families were brought together, fed, clothed and put to work or into school.

It is the women of France now who are wrestling with the problem of rehabilitating the towns and villages ransacked and left practically deserted by the invading Teutons.

With such tremendous tasks following one another in rapid succession, the women of France have been called time and again to put forth almost superhuman effort. They have had to build up whole provinces while the enemy was destroying new ones. In France the women realize to the fullest extent the part that women all over the world will play in winning the war. They know that all nations at war are dependent upon the labor of their women. They realize, further, that the future of the nations is very greatly dependent upon the attitude with which women perform their new tasks.

ARE MAKING USE OF LAND BANK

Maryland Farmers Organizing Loan Associations.

STEPS TO TAKE

Aid Of County Demonstration Agents Can Be Secured In Organization.

College Park, July 5.—In co-operation with the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, the Extension Service of the Maryland State College of Agriculture, through its county demonstration agents, has begun a campaign of education, with a view of making the farmers of Maryland better acquainted with the Federal Farm Loan Act and its uses.

It has been recognized from the beginning that the farmer would be slow to take hold of the idea of a new kind of banking institution; and that especial efforts would have to be made to arouse popular interest in the organization of the Farm Loan Associations in the various counties. In order to accomplish these ends, the Extension Service has just published Bulletin No. 4, entitled, "The Federal Farm Loan Act and The Farmer," by F. B. Bomberger, Assistant Director.

This bulletin is designed to present in simple language such directions and explanations as will enable any group of farmers, who desire to borrow money upon the security of their farm lands, to proceed step by step in the organization of a National Farm Loan Association, and actually to do the things necessary to be done in order to receive from the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, the loans which they may desire in order to finance their farming operations.

The bulletin explains the purposes of the law and furnishes the general outlines of the Farm Loan System. Then follow the successive steps necessary to be followed in the formation of the organization. Blank forms of organization, provided by the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, are printed in the bulletin in order to make very explicit exactly how the association is to be formed and how it is to proceed after it has been organized.

In discussing the scope of territory to be included in any one association, it is pointed out that the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore, recommends that the county be made the unit of organization, and that the Secretary-Treasurer be located at the countyseat where the records of the county will be readily available.

Any ten farmers who desire to borrow an aggregate amount of $10,000 may form an association, although it is desirable to have more than ten in the initial organization. A farm may borrow any sum from $100 to $10,000.

After a charter has been granted to the original association, any farmer of the county must borrow through the county association.

An interesting feature of the System is that each borrower must become a member of the County Association by investing five per cent. of the proceeds of his loan in the stock of the Association. This stock will participate in the earnings of the Association and the amount invested in the stock will be returned to the borrower when his loan is paid off.

All loans run for the period of thirty-six years, but the borrower may pay off the loan at any time after five years. An interesting feature of the system is the fact that the borrower is required to pay an annual installment of one per cent. on the principal in addition to the interest. Thus, at present the loans bear interest at nve per cent. and by adding one per cent., making a total of six per cent. per year, the loan is fully paid off in thirty-six years.

The advantages inherent in this system of long term loans, with low rate of interest and the privilege of paying off the principal of the loan in annual installments of only one per cent., should make it very attractive to farmers who want to borrow money upon their farm land. These features remove the dangers that have heretofore attended the borrowing of money upon short term mortgages and do away with the expense of making new mortgages and securing new loans.

THE HOME GARDEN.

College Park, July 5.—Maryland farmers are taking especial pains with their home gardens this year. They are aiming to keep up a constant and sufficient supply of vegetables for their own use and for their local markets. They are accomplishing this purpose by adopting a rotation of garden crops that will keep every foot of garden soil busy during the growing season. In a bulletin recently issued by the Maryland Agricultural Extension Service, S. B. Shaw, specialist in Horticulture, says: "The systematic rotation of farm crops has been advocated for a number of years, the principal end in view being an improvement of soil fertility. A well planned rotation of garden crops brings about this same result and, in addition, accomplishes two other purposes. It affords a greater amount of food supplies for a longer period of time, and, to a certain extent, it aids in the control of certain insects and diseases."

VOLUME 42. OAKLAND, MARYLAND THURSDAY, JULY 19, 1917. NUMBER 21

GARRETT COUNTY TO FURNISH 140

Comparatively Few Men Will Be Drafted From This County.

When the men of the nation are called for examination for the National Army Garrett county will furnish comparatively few as drafted men, but considering those who have volunteered her quota will compare very favorably with any other section of the country and in many cases will surpass in point of numbers communities whose population far exceed the westernmost portion of the State.

Under the revised census estimate which were promulgated by the War Department a few days ago which says that each city, county or state must furnish two-thirds of one per cent. of its total population, this county will be called upon for about 140 men, the estimate being based upon 21,000 as the total population. The registration shows 1520 men eligible under the selective draft for service and that number will be easily secured.

An estimat of the number who voluntarily enlisted from various portion in the county is conservatively placed at 100 men, all of whom are now in training at various points in the country.

PROMOTED AS ENGINEER.

Mr. Getty Browning Will Have Charge of Road Work.

Mr. Getty Browning, son of the late R. T. Browning and Mrs. Browning, of Oakland, who has been engaged for the past several years in road and bridge work under the State Roads Commission, has been promoted to a very responsible post and will hereafter be in charge of road work as resident engineer of the five upper counties on the Eastern Shore.

Mr. Browning spent a day or two last week on a visit to his mother and other relatives.

DR. COPELAND WITHDRAWS

From the Contest as a Candidate for House of Delegates.

The following letter from Dr. H. P. Copeland, of Kitzmiller, who was one of the first to announce his candidacy for nomination for the House of Delegates to be voted for at the September primaries, was received at this office recently. It is self-explanatory and is as follows:

To the Editor of The Republican,
Oakland, Md.,

Dear Sir:—Owing to the fact that I am liable to be called to France at any time it becomes my duty to my county and country to withdraw my name as a candidate for nomination to the House of Delegates.

Thanking you and my many friends for their kindness to me, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
H. P. COPELAND.

Blaine, West Va., July 11, 1917.

MR. FRIEND ALSO WITHDRAWS.

To the Editor of The Republican:

I wish to state to my friends throughout the county that unfortunately at this time it will be impossible for me to make a campaign through the different districts of the county, without which it would be impossible for me to become acquainted with the voters and I think no voter should vote for the nomination of a candidate unless he is acquainted with the character and qualifications of such candidate, and it is also good to know something of his personal appearance as well.

Therefore, being a farmer, and having had an accident in my family which makes it compulsory for me to stay at home, I take this opportunity of thanking my friends who have given me assurance of their support, for their loyalty, and respectfully withdraw my name from the list of aspirants for the nomination for county commissioner at this time.

DRAWING OF DRAFT ARMY MAY BE CONDUCTED TOMORROW

Lottery To Take Place In Capitol At 10 o'Clock And Will Require But An Hour's Time

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The draft will be held Friday morning at 10 o'clock in the great Capitol building here.

One of the largest committee rooms will be the scene of the drawing which will determine those of America's manhood who must go to the colors.

The actual drawing hinges only on reports from five states, that their work of numbering registration cards has been completed. All have assured Provost General Crowder that they are working under high pressure to get their work done before 9 o'clock tomorrow.

The War Department today rejected a plan to hold the drawing in the chamber of the House of Representatives. Objection was made on two grounds, first, that it would make a spectacle out of a solemn occasion and second, that the noise would be confusing to the tally clerks and might lead to regretable errors invalidating the entire draft.

Everything is ready as far as the War Department is concerned. Printed pamphlets, explaining the system to be implied in the drawing, were distributed to all the local boards to day and given to the press in confidence to be released when Secretary of War Baker shall permit. They probably will be made public Friday morning just before the drawing. Not a word is to be made public until all the states have reported themselves ready as a precaution against tampering with the serial numbers.

The states which had not concluded the work at a late hour tonight were Michigan, Mississippi, Pennsylvania and New York. Illinois was complete except for one board in Chicago. One county in Missouri held up the state's report.

Gen. Crowder this evening said:

"The system evolves all to the elements of chance. It has been carefully designed to give an absolutely fair deal to every man registered.

"From present prospects the draft will be held Friday. It had been planned to hold it in the big reception room of the War Department, but it was decided that this was too small. So it will be held in one of the large committee rooms of the House.

The drawing will take one hour. A trial drawing exclusive of the short feature, took exactly 56½ minutes and not an error was made.

"I hope that no numbers will be sent out by telegraph before they have been officially checked up, so that no regretable errors should cause discomfort to any man or his family.

"The capsules which will be used on the drawing have been carefully prepared; the numbers verified and have been placed under seal in a place of complete safety. They will not be touched until the drawing.

"The numbers will be brought to the Capitol from their present place of safety under armed guards. At least three responsible officials will have them in charge.

"The final announcement regarding the draft will be made tomorrow morning. Secretary of War Baker now on a trip down the Potomac, will return to Washington at 7 o'clock. Gen. Crowder will meet him an hour later and at this conference it will be determined when announcement is to be made of the way the draft machinery will work and the exact place where the drawing will be held.

Conferences also have been arranged between Secretary Baker and the chairmen of the House and Senate military affairs committees.

These committeemen will be official witnesses on the part of Congress to the drawing.

Space has been reserved and wire service arranged for the press so that each number may be sent broadcast over the country from the committee room where the drawing will be held.

Officials in charge of the drawing today showed how heavily the responsibility weighs upon them.

Three tally clerks have been selected, but their names are not made public. They will be responsible members of the provost marshall's staff, trained especially for the work.

The system devised by General Crowder will draft approximately 35,000 men a minute. America is banned to lottery, but within less than forty-eight hours she is going to have the biggest gamble in the world in which the stakes are the lives of men by millions.

By Friday night every man in the country will know his position on the conscription list. A few days later he will be officially notified and will be sent a complete list of the numbers in his district so that he may judge how soon he is likely to be called.

If among the first quota he will be given five days to appear before the local board for physical examinations; he then will have another five days in which to file affidavits to claim exemption.

No penalty will attach to his failure to appear before the board. He will merely forfeit his right to exemption and will be listed as "held for service." If, however, he fails to appear when ordered to report for transportation to the camp he will be arrested as a deserter and face a heavy penalty by a military court.

Electric Headlights.

All locomotives used by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad in road service are to be equipped with electric headlights. The headlights are being installed at the rate of 75 engines a month, there being 2,500 locomotives to so equip. The work is being done by the company's forces.

Many Seek Appointments In Second Training Camp.

Maryland's sons are eager to become officers in the new national army. The state's quota in the second officers training camp to begin August 27 at Fort Meyer is 250 and 780 applications for appointments have been made. The time for applications to be filed expires Monday at midnight.

NAME CHANGED

Hutton, Orignal Name, Authorized by Department.

Several years ago the name of the postoffice at Hutton was changed to Ottaway for some reason that did not appeal very strongly to the patrons of that foffice, but notwithstanding the protest sent in to the Postoffice Department at Washington the new name stuck until one day last week when it was ordered changed back to Hutton following a petition sent in by the people residing in the village and community surrounding.

Hutton is one of the oldest settlements along the line of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. At this point many of the men employed in building the railroad over the mountain erected their homes and it became a purely Irish settlement. With the passing of the years since that time the old folks have died but their places have been filled by their descendants, so it remains peopled in large part by the sons and daughters of the hardy stock that came to America in the early fifties from the Emerald Isle.

Hutton, originally, was known from one end of the Baltimore and Ohio to the other as Hutton Switch. Many years ago the name was shortened to Hutton, changed to Ottaway and it again becomes Hutton, with Mr. James R. Craig its recently re-commissioned postmaster who has served in that capacity for some years past.

Fell From Train and Injured.

Arthur E. Friend, son of Mr. Josiah G. Friend, of Swanton, is slowly recovering from painful injuries received a week or two ago when in attempting to alight from a moving freight train at Swanton, he fell and a boxing on one of the cars of the train struck him on the hip, seriously bruising him besides cutting a deep gash in his leg. He is now able to be out of bed and move about his home on crutches.

FUTURE IS DARK TO DEMOCRATS

Party Funds and Recent Records Not Stimulating.

The Baltimore American Sunday contained the following:

The future looks dark to Democrats in Maryland, and many and loud are the lamentations of the faithful that their party is so torn and shattered by dissensions that the election of their candidates this year seems well-nigh impossible.

They have at stake the state comptroller, one-half of the state Senate, all the members of the House of Delegates, sheriff, clerks of courts, etc., and one member of the Supreme bench in this city. If the Democrats lose these offices the incumbents will have to hunt other jobs. The defeat of their candidate for state comptroller and their loss of the House of Delegates would mean a majority of Republicans on the Board of Public Works, the state treasurer being elected by the General Assembly. The loss of control of this board would mean the surrender of the state oyster police, the State Insurance Commission and other remunerative offices to the Republicans. With the loss of these offices the Democrats would enter the gubernatorial campaign two years hence greatly handicapped. The party funds and dissensions, the lining up of the counties against the city and personal animosities and jealousies are not alone responsible for the apprehensions of the Democratic leaders and of the rank and file of the party. The fact has become apparant that when Maryland's troops are ordered to training camps and Maryland's sailors are on the high seas the Democrats will be losers by the absence of voters. For this loss the Democratic Senators at the recent General Assembly were responsible because of their failure to fall into line with the House and pass the bill by which provision was made for taking the votes of the absentees. By their action, or rather lack of action, the Democrats succeeded in retaining the Wilson ballot law in the Southern Maryland counties, a law which is fated to walk the plank at the next regular session. The Democratic leaders lost an opportunity of a life time by failing to repeal this law. Prompt action would have made impossible the combinations in the House between Republicans and city and a few other Democrats which had the repeal of the Wilson law in view. That combination will be in working trim when the city annexation bill comes up at the regular session.

Because of the feuds and dissensions Democratic candidates hesitate to make fights. Even after they win at primary they have no assurance of receiving solid party support at the elections. Party ties are loose these times, as was demonstrated last year when David J. Lewis was defeated for United States Senate, while Woodrow Wilson carried the state by over 20,000 majority. The friends of Mr. Lewis in this city are patiently waiting for the day when they can hit back for this defeat. This is another discouragement to Democrats.

Oakland Free Public Library Needs.

To the Editor of The Republican:

The Free Public Library has proven a great benefit to the old as well as to the young of our town and community, but it cannot be further maintained without proper support in a financial way. We need funds right now to cover the operating expenses, so will not our citizens and patrons of the library come to our help?

Are we not sufficiently public spirited to make the effort to place in the hands of our young people, your own children, perhaps, the best books along all lines of literature. While few can afford a large library in their homes, won't you, the parents of our growing boys and girls, make it possible by your contributions to keep our library in existance, so that it may furnish you and your family the best books, magazines and papers? A few dollars or even a dollar from each family in the community will make this possible, so make the donation and feel,that you have a share in this work of keeping open a suite of rooms well stocked with the best books and of which all are proud.

The library is open to the public on Wednesday and Saturday of each week. It is located in the Ravenscroft building with entrance on Second street.

ONE INTERESTED.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. MICHAEL FLYNN.

Mrs. Michael Flynn died at her home in Bloomington at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning following a long illness. Six sons and two daughters survive. They are William Flynn, James Flynn, Chas. Flynn, Dominick Flynn, Frank Flynn, Stephen Flynn, and Mrs. Richard Stein, of Westernport, and Mrs. Joseph Beeman, of Beryl, W. Va. Funeral services were held from St. Peter's Catholic Church at Westernport, at 9:e0 o'clock Wednesday morning.

STATE GUARDSMEN'S CAMP WILL BE IDEAL

Congressman Blackman Says Anniston's Climate is Delightful.

The war department announced that work was being rushed on the Anniston (Ala.) military training camp and that it would be completed and ready to receive the Maryland National Guardsmen, who will be trained there for service in France, by August 10. Major C. L. Dulin, of the Quartermaster's Department, who has charge of construction at Anniston, will be in Washington today for a conference with General Mann, of the Militia Bureau, and they will go over in detail the plans for the camp.

The construction plans call for 135 kitchens, 135 messhouses, 18 bathhouses, warehouses and streets and roads. The men will be housed under tents instead of wooden cantonments like those being constructed at Camp Admiral for the selective draft army.

Representative Fred L. Blackburn, who was born and reared near Anniston and who represents that district in the House, in describing conditions of that community said it is regarded as "the healthiest spot in Alabama."

"At the outset," said Mr. Blackman "I wish you to tell the Maryland National Guardsmen that they are lucky to be assigned to the Anniston camp. Although going to the far South, they will not suffer from sweltering, oppressive heat at night nor from sultry weather in day. Anniston is located on a plateau, 900 feet above sea level, between two mountain ranges. There are not 10 nights during the whole summer which are not cooled by mountain breezes. In fact, the cool nights of Anniston are famed in Alabama. Hundreds of Alabamans go there during the heated months on account of its climate. The Maryland boys will find that the sun does not shine so hot at Anniston during the day. There is no record of a case of sunstroke at Anniston.

"The water is another thing they will enjoy, Anniston gets its water supply from a huge spring in the hills, which is capable of supplying 300,000 persons. The water is pure. It has not yet been decided whether the training camp will get water from Anniston city sources or from four large springs on the camp grounds. Health conditions at Anniston are among the best in the South. The pure mountain water and air are enemies to sickness, and my prediction is that the Maryland boys will thrive during their training period. They will not need many doctors, if any.

"The Anniston camp already has a notable record for its healthful qualities. During and after the Spanish-American War troops from Arkansas, Tennessee, Wisconsin and Alabama were encamped at Anniston. Some of these soldiers had seen service in Cuba and came there in a run-down condition. They showed marked improvement in health and practically every man left Anniston a well man.

The Maryland boys are going to one of the four or five permanent military training camps in the United States. Last spring the War Department bought the site where the guardsmen will be trained as a permanent camp for the Southern troops. The health record, the climate and the water of that section are responsible for its selection.

"The camp site contains 16,500 acres. It is eight miles long. On one side it is flanked by a magnificent state road, as smooth as asphalt streets, which runs from Mobile to Rome, Ga. On the other it is flanked by the mountains. The mountain forms the background for the artillery range, which the army officers have declared to be the best for training gunners in the United States. There also has been established there a range for training machine gunners, and this has been praised as the best of its kind in the country.

"The drill ground is enormous. I have been told by army officers that three divisions, or 90,000 men can use it in maneuvers. This stretch practically is level with only a hill here and there, which does not interfere with troop movements.

"There will be plenty of amusement around Anniston for the Maryland boys when they have a day or night off. At Oxford, 30 minutes ride by trolley, is a lake, which is a noted summer resort of North Alabama. There the guardsmen will find boating, swimming, dancing and all kinds of amusements which go with summer resorts. A large park is located on the lake.

"The Marylanders also will find a charming community at Anniston. It is a new city of about 20,000 people. It was founded during the boom days of the early nineties, and is one of the few Southern boom towns that has continued to thrive. The people are hospitable and will extend the typical Southern welcome to the soldier boys. Anniston has also the reputation of being one of the cleanest cities in Alabama. Whiskey has not been sold there since 1898. The morals of the community are high, and there will be no need of picketing disorderly places.

"The Maryland boys will not find themselves in the home of strangers when they come to Anniston. Two of that city's most substantial and leading citizens, Talbott Ford and John D. Legard, are natives of Baltimore. Mr. Legard's people now live in Baltimore. He is one of our prosperous merchants, bank directors and planters. Both men stand high in the community and they will see that the Maryland boys are taken good care of."

WHAT DRAFT ELIGIBLES MUST DO

Set of Simple and Direct Steps That Must Be Taken.

You Garrett county men who are between the ages of 21 and 31 and who have fulfilled the duty of registering, give heed. Your obligations have not been completed with registration. The work of carrying out the rest of the provisions of the selective draft is not going to be done entirely by the government. You have several things to do in connection therewith and the burden of so doing is on you.

Simplified, here are some of the things you must do, as set forth in a bulletin of information for persons registered that has been published by the office of Provost Marshal General E. H. Crowder:

In Garrett county there is one exemption board having charge of registration cards.

In every federal judicial district are one or more district boards having appellate jurisdiction over local boards and original jurisdiction of claims for exemption on industrial ground, including agriculture. If you intend to make a claim on industrial grounds, learn what district board to apply to.

Cards in the possession of the exemption board are numbered with red ink. Lists showing the names of persons in the district and the red ink number are open to inspection at the board office and also at THE REPUBLICAN office. Inspect the list and inform yourself of your red ink number.

As soon as the "drawing" takes place in Washington find out from your local board the order in which you stand for call, if your number was drawn. Don't wait to be notified by mail.

If your number is drawn present yourself. Don't wait until you receive notice by mail.

Present yourself on the day specified to the local board, no matter whether you think you are physically fit or not. It is important, therefore, that you watch the notice posted in the office of the board for about ten days after the day you were called. As a convenience, merely, you will be notified by mail. If the mailed notice does not reach you, however, that is not an excuse.

If you intend to claim exemption, prepare early, as your claim must be filed with the local board within seven days after you are called.

Whether you file a claim of exemption or not, you must present yourself for physical examination on the day named in the notice.

You are not exempt, remember, no matter who or what you are, until you have been examined and found exempt.

You cannot be exempted or discharged until you have demanded exemption or discharge and it is granted.

The fact that you are married, or that you work in a particular industry, does not automatically exempt you. You must be exempted by the proper authorities.

Important to remember is that it is up to you. Take the initiative. Whatever the government does to notify you directly is a convenience, not a necessity. The burden is up to you.

Unless you see to it that you comply with all the legal requirements set forth, you may suddenly find yourself ordered to a training camp or ordered branded as a slacker, with a heavy penalty to face.

NORTH GLADE

Wade, second son of A. R. Barnard, has undergone a serious but successful operation for appendicitis at the Oakland Sanatarium.

Troy Rhodes was kicked by a horse recently, breaking an ankle.

Our aged friend, Henry Paugh, has been quite sick and Chas. Merrill, our young friend, is also on the sick list.

Gilbert Moon and wife, of Cleveland, Ohio, who have been visiting his parents here for more than a week, have returned to that city.

Harold Moon and wife, of Washington, D. C., also made a brief visit to his parents.

Mrs. Lawton, of Oakland, and Mrs. Winters, of Barton, have been visiting their parents here.

Robert Rhodes has just returned from the West. He had enlisted in the army but failed in the final tests.

We had the best rain here on Sunday we have had for six weeks which also prevented a number from attending camp meeting.

Carl Beckman now sports a fine new auto. It's a Dodge.

C. I. Custer has sold his car, but of course will buy another.

Preaching here Sunday night the 22nd.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Roll Away the Stone.

My second proposition is, that as it was with the wicked in the days of Noah, so shall it be at the end of the world or age.

The rocking earth and fleeing heavens seek a place to hide, but there is no place given them, for all the immensity of space lies open before Him who descends in awful grandeur and terrible majesty. What! see the Babe of Bethlehem, the carpenter, the despised Galilean the man of sorrows? Is he the man that was arrested, condemned, buffetted, crowned with thorns and executed as a criminal on the cross? Yes, but how changed! Pilate, condemn the King of the Jews now, will you! Now ye despisers of his mercy raise the cry, Crucify Him! O ye scoffers and infidels can you dispute his divinity now? Laugh at his threatenings if you can! Ah, how courage fails them and terror surrounds them like armed men.

The Judge has descended, and anxious millions await their doom. See that host going off the right hand. They have spotless robes, crowns and palms of victory. We ask who are these and He answers, "These are they who have washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb. Some of them were once vile, or drunkards, or gamblers, but now they are with the throng in white. These are my jewels and they shall be mine," and then I hear the solemn declaration, "as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the Son of Man." The righteous shall be saved. But who are these who constitute the great host on the Lord's left hand? Shall any of my readers be among that number, I trust not. Alas, it is to be feared there are families in our midst who will be on the left. Will that line be drawn through our community, or churches or families and place some on the left? It is a heart rendering thought, that some of the members of our families may be with that crowd. And what is the character of those who compose it? I look again and there I see the drunkard and hear him calling for rum, but there is no rum in hell. I see the debaucher and hear him call for debauchery that fed the fires of his lust on earth, but the shrieks of the dammed answer, lost, lost. I hear the infidel uttering his blasphemous declarations that Jesus Christ is only a man and a pretender to divinity, and then I hear the whole host exclaim, He is divine, and would have saved us had we only been willing.

I hear the scoffer plying his art, when the lost denounce him as a fool, and bid him hush, as he only adds to their misery. There's the liar and defrauder, the whoremonger and idolater; the profligate and profane swearer, the gambler and the thief and with that class I see a lot of respectable looking persons who passed for good people on earth; who were models in many respects—then there is the moralist too, with that motley crew, and worse than all yonder are some who named the name of Christ here. They dedicated themselves to his service and yet denied Him before men and now He has denied them before his Father and the Holy Angels and they too must take up their abode with the lost. O, how they bewail their doom! Like Dives they cry, take me out of this place of torment. But their cries fall back upon their head, echoing no deliverance now. Send us one drop of water to cool our parched lips—just a drop—but there is no respite now. Too late! Ye knew your Master's will but did it not. You would not believe my word when on earth! Ye despised my offers of mercy and would none of my reproofs, therefore will I laugh at your calamity and mock when your fear cometh.

Ye seekers of pleasure more than of God, you would not believe I would come in person but I did and caught you unprepared.

The old world was reveling in sin, Sodom was steeped in iniquity. So the earth will be full of sin when Jesus comes a second time and ye shall be overtaken with judgments if ye believe not the record God hath given of His Son. Judgments came then and the wicked perished. He will come in power to mete out justice and judgment and all who believe not on the Lord Christ shall perish eternally.

You may not believe it, that does not alter the case. You may flatter yourself that God is very merciful, so He is, but He is just and mercy shall have been withdrawn and justice allowed full sway. "Turn then, o backsliding children, for I am married unto you, and I will heal your backsliding," saith the Lord. "But in that day the wicked shall be turned into hell and all the nations that forget God."

In the next we shall consider how it fared with those who helped build the ark.

JOANNES.

The Secrets of the Hohenzollerns

STARTLING EXPOSURE OF INNER LIFE OF KAISER AND CROWN PRINCE AS TOLD BY COUNT ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX

EDITORIAL NOTE. — William LeQueux, who here chronicles for his friend, Count Ernst von Heltzendorff, the latter's revelations of the inner life of the imperial German court, has long been recognized throughout Europe as the possessor of its innermost secrets.

The English "Who's Who" says of him: "He has intimate knowledge of the secret service of Continental countries and is considered by the government (of Great Britain) an authority on such matters." Another authority says: "Few people have been more closely associated with or know more of the astounding inner machinery of Germany than he."

LeQueux probably has more sources of secret information at his command than any contemporary in civil life, and for the last six years the British Government has made valuable use of his vast store of secret information through a specially organized department with which LeQueux works as a voluntary assistant.

Count von Heltzendorff became an intimate of LeQueux several years prior to the outbreak of the war; he has been living in retirement in France since August, 1914, and it was there that LeQueux received from the crown prince's late personal adjutant permission to make public these revelations of the inner life of the Hohenzollerns—that the democracies of the world might come to know the real, but heretofore hidden, personalities of the two dominant members of the autocracy they are now arrayed against.

Trautmann Affair Cause of Trouble

THE Trautmann affair was one which caused a wild sensation at Potsdam in the autumn of 1912. I became implicated in it in a somewhat curious manner.

I chanced to be lunching at the Esplanade in Berlin, chatting with Laroque of the French embassy. Our hostess was Frau Breitenbach, a wealthy Jewess—a woman who came from Dortmund—and who was spending money like water in order to wriggle into Berlin society. As personal adjutant of the crown prince, I was, of course, one of the principal guests, and I suspected that she was angling for a card of invitation to the next ball at the Marmor palace.

Frau Breitenbach was lunching with sixteen guests at one big, round table, her daughter Elise, a very smartly dressed girl of nineteen, seated opposite to her. It was a merry party, including, as it did, some of the most renowned persons in the empire, among them being the imperial chancellor, Bethmann-Hollweg, and that grand seigneur, who was a favorite at court, the multimillionaire serene highness, Prince Maximilian Egon zu Fuerstenberg. Of the latter it may be said that no man rivaled his influence with the emperor. What he said was law in Germany.

Fuerstenberg was head of the famous "prince's trust," now dissolved, but at that time, with its capital of $500,000,000, it was a great force in the German commercial world. Indeed, such a boon companion was he of the kaiser's that an august but purely decorative and ceremonial place was actually invented for him as colonel marshal of the Prussian court, an excuse to wear a gay uniform and gorgeous decorations, as befitted a man who, possessing a hundred millions, was an important asset to the emperor in his deep-laid scheme for world power.

Young Man Across the Room.

That merry luncheon party was the prologue of a very curious drama. As we chatted I noticed that far across the crowded room, at a table set in a window, there sat alone a dark-haired, sallow, good-looking young civilian, who was eating his lunch in a rather bored manner, yet his eyes were fixed straight upon Elise Breitenbach, as though she exercised over him some strange fascination.

Half a dozen times I glanced across, and on each occasion saw that the young man had no eyes for the notables around the table, his gaze being fixed upon the daughter of the great financier.

Somehow I felt a distinct belief that the young civilian's face was familiar to me. It was not the first time I had seen him, yet I could not recall the circumstances in which we had met.

Two nights later I dined with the Breitenbachs at their fine house in the Alsenstrasse. The only guest besides myself was the Countess von Bassewitz, and after dinner Frau Breitenbach took the countess aside to talk, while I wandered with her daughter into the winter garden, with its high palms and gorgeous exotics, that overlooked the gardens of the Austrian embassy.

When the man had brought us coffee, the pretty Elise commenced to question me about life at the crown prince's court.

"How intensely interesting it must be to be personal adjutant to the crown prince! Mother is dying to get a command to one of the receptions at Potsdam," the girl said. "Only today she was wondering—well, whether you could possibly use your influence in that direction."

In an instant I saw why I had been invited to dinners and luncheons so often.

I reflected a moment. Then I said: "I do not think that will be very difficult. I will see what can be done. But I hope that if I am successful you will accompany your mother."

When I looked in at the court marshal's room in the palace next morning, I scribbled down the name of mother and daughter for cards.

A week later the crown prince and princess gave a grand ball at the Marmor palace at Potsdam, and the emperor himself attended.

Frau Breitenbach, gorgeously attired, made her bow before the all-highest, and her daughter did the same.

I spoke with Elise, and afterward, when I danced with her, I saw how impressed she was by the glitter and glamour of the Potsdam court circle, and by the fact that she was in the presence of the all-highest one. From words she let drop that night as she hung upon my arm, I wondered whether she was really as ingenuous as she pretended. She was, I found, an extremely discreet and clever little person, a fact which further increased my official interest in her.

Questioned by the Emperor.

One night about two months later I had an appointment with Max Reinhardt at the Deutsches theater, in Berlin, to arrange a royal visit there, and after the performance I went back to the palace, prior to retiring to my rooms in the Krausenstrasse. The guards saluted as I crossed the dark courtyard, and having passed through the corridors to the private apartments, I entered with my key the crown prince's locked study.

To my surprise, I found "Willie" seated there with the emperor in earnest discussion.

With apology, I bowed instantly and withdrew, whereupon the kaiser exclaimed:

"Come in, Heltzendorff; I want you."

Then he cast a quick glance at the young man, who had thrown himself in a lazy attitude into a long cane lounge chair. It was as though his majesty was hesitating to speak with me, or asking his son's permission to do so.

"Tell me, Heltzendorff," exclaimed his majesty suddenly, "do you know this person?" and he placed before my gaze a cabinet photograph of the pretty Elise.

"Yes," I answered frankly. "It is Fraulein Breitenbach.

"And what do you know of her?" inquired his majesty. "You introduced her and her mother to court, I believe."

I saw that the emperor had discovered something which annoyed him. What could it be?

At once I was compelled to admit that I had set down their names for invitation, and, further, I explained all that I knew about them.

"You are certain you know nothing more?" asked the emperor. "Understand that no blame attaches to you."

I assured him that I had revealed all that I knew concerning them.

"Hold no further communication with either mother or daughter," his majesty said. "Leave for Paris by the eight o'clock train tomorrow morning, and go to Baron von Steinmetz, the chief of our confidential service in France."

Then, turning to the crown prince, he said: "You have his address."

"Yes," said the younger man. "He is passing as Monsieur Felix Reumont, and is living at 114 bis, Avenue de Neuilly, close to the Pont."

I scribbled the name and address upon the back of an envelope, whereupon his majesty said:

"Carry my verbal orders to Steinmetz, and tell him to act upon the orders I sent him by courier yesterday. And you will assist him. He will explain matters fully when you arrive."

Then, crossing to the crown prince's writing table, his majesty took a large envelope, into which he placed the photograph with several papers, and sealed them with the crown prince's seal.

"Give this to Von Steinmetz from me," his majesty said.

I bowed as I took it from his majesty's hand, my curiosity naturally excited regarding Frau Breitenbach and her daughter. What, I wondered, was in the wind?

"And, Heltzendorff, please report to me," remarked the heir, still lounging lazily in the chair.

Bowing, I took leave of my imperial master, and next morning at eight o'clock, set out upon my mission.

Baron von Steinmetz.

I found the Baron von Steinmetz living in a good-sized house in the Avenue de Neuilly, not far from the bridge. One of the cleverest and most astute officials that Germany possessed, and a man high in the kaiser's favor, he had, in the name of Felix Reumont, purchased, with government funds of course, a cinema theater in the Rue Lafayette, and ostensibly upon the proceeds of that establishment lived comfortably out at Neuilly.

At eleven o'clock in the morning his valet, evidently a German, showed me in.

"I quite understand, my dear Heltzendorff," he said, as he took from the emperor's packet the picture of Fraulein Elise and stood gazing at it. "It is quite plain why you should have been sent by his majesty."

A LETTER FROM THE CROWN PRINCE'S PERSONAL ADJUTANT TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX, POSSESSOR OF THE SECRETS OF EUROPE.

Veneux Nadon,
par Moret-sur-Loing,
Seine-et-Marne,
February 10th, 1917.

My dear LeQueux:

I have just finished reading the proofs of your articles describing my life as an official at the imperial court at Potsdam, and the two or three small errors you made I have duly corrected.

The gross scandals and wily intrigues which I have related to you were many of them known to yourself, for, as the intimate friend of Luisa, the ex-crown princess of Saxony, you were, before the war, closely associated with many of those at court whose names appear in these articles.

The revelations which I have made, and which you have recorded here, are but a tithe of the disclosures which I could make, and if the world desires more, I shall be pleased to furnish you with other and even more startling details, which you may also put into print.

My service as personal adjutant to the German crown prince is, happily, at an end, and now, with the treachery of Germany against civilization glaringly revealed, I feel, in my retirement, no compunction in exposing all I know concerning the secrets of the kaiser and his son.

With most cordial greetings from

Your sincere friend,

(Signed) ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF.

"Why, I don't understand. But his majesty told me that you would explain. The young lady and her mother are friends of mine."

"Exactly. That's just it!" he exclaimed. "You apparently know but little of them—eh?—or you would not call them your friends!"

These words surprised me, but I was the more astounded when he continued:

"You of course know of those disgraceful anonymous letters which have been continually arriving at court—of the emperor's fury concerning them."

I replied in the affirmative, for, as a matter of fact, for the past three months the whole court had been flooded with most abusive and disgraceful correspondence concerning the camarilla that had again sprung up around the kaiser. The emperor, the empress, the crown prince and princess, Prince Eitel, Sophie Caroline, Prince Henry of Prussia and others had received letters, most of them in typewriting, containing the most intimate details of scandals concerning men and women around the emperor.

Fully a dozen of these letters addressed to the crown prince he had handed to me—letters denouncing in some cases perfectly innocent people, destroying the reputations of honest men and women, and abusing the heir to the throne in an outrageous manner.

On at least three occasions "Willie" had shown me letters addressed to the kaiser himself, and intercepted by the kaiserin, who, in consequence of this flood of anonymous epistles that had produced such a terrible sensation at Potsdam, had ordered that all such letters found in the imperial postbag should be handed at once to her.

"The identity of the writer is the point that is engaging my attention," the baron said, as he opened a drawer and drew forth a bundle of quite a hundred letters, adding: "All these that you see here have been addressed either to the emperor or the empress," and he handed me one, which on scanning I saw contained some outrageous statements, allegations which would make the hair of the all-highest bristle with rage.

"Well," I exclaimed, "that certainly is a very interesting specimen of anonymous correspondence."

"Yes, it is!" exclaimed the baron. "In Berlin every inquiry has been made to trace its author. Schunke (head of the detective police) was charged by the emperor to investigate. He did so, and both he and Klewitz failed utterly. Now it has been given into my hands."

A Typical German Investigation.

Presently, when I sat with the baron at his table, he switched on an intense electric light and then spread out some of the letters above a small, square mirror.

"You see they are on various kinds of note paper, bearing all kinds of watermarks, of French, English and German manufacture. Some we have here are upon English paper, because it is heavy and thick. Again, three different makes of typewriter have been used—one a newly invented importation from America. The written letters are, you will see, mostly in a man's hand."

"Yes, I see all that," I said. "But what have you discovered concerning their author? The letter I received bore a French stamp and the postmark of Angers."

He placed before me quite a dozen envelopes addressed to the emperor and empress, all bearing the postmark of that town in the Maine-et-Loire. Others had been posted in Leipzig, Wilhelmshaven, Tours, Antwerp, Berlin, Wilmersdorf and other places.

"The investigation is exceedingly difficult, I can assure you," he said. "I have had the assistance of some of the best scientific brains of our empire in making comparisons and analyses. Indeed, Professor Harbge is with me fom Berlin."

A few minutes later the professor himself, an elderly, spectacled man in gray tweeds, entered the room. I knew him and greeted him.

"Sixteen different varieties of paper have been received at the Neues and Marmor palaces," the baron remarked. "Well, I have worked for two months, night and day, upon the inquiry. I have discovered that eleven of these varieties of paper can be purchased at a certain small stationer's shop, Lancry's, in the Boulevard Haussmann, close to the Printemps. One paper especially is sold nowhere else in Paris. It is this."

He held over a mirror a letter upon a small sheet of note paper bearing the watermark of a bull's head.

"That paper was made at a mill in the south of Devonshire, in England, destroyed by fire five years ago. Paper of that make cannot be obtained anywhere else in France," he declared.

I at once realized how much patience must have been expended upon the inquiry, and said:

"Then you have actually fixed the shop where the writer purchased his paper?"

"Yes," he replied. "And we know that the newly invented typewriter, a specimen one, was sold by the Maison Audebert, in Marseille. The purchaser of the typewriter in Marseille purchases his paper and envelopes at Lancry's, on the Boulevard Haussmann."

"Splendid!" I said, for it was clear that the baron, with the thousand-and-one secret agents at his beck and call, had been able, with the professor's aid, to fix the source of the stationery. "But," I added, "what is wanted from me?" Why, I wondered, had his majesty sent the baron that photograph of Elise Breitenbach?

"I want you to go with me to the central door of the Printemps at four o'clock this afternoon, and we will watch Lancry's shop across the way," the baron replied.

The Writer of the Letters.

This we did, and from four till six o'clock we stood, amid the bustle of foot passengers, watching the small stationer's on the opposite side of the boulevard, yet without result.

Next day and the next I accompanied the prosperous cinema proprietor upon his daily vigil, but in vain, until his reluctance to tell me the reason why I had been sent to Paris annoyed me considerably.

On the fifth afternoon, just before five o'clock, while we were strolling together, the baron's eyes being fixed upon the door of the small single-fronted shop, I saw him start, and then make pretence of indifference.

"Look!" he whispered.

I glanced across and saw a young man just about to enter the shop.

The figure was unfamiliar, but, catching sight of his face, I held my breath. I had seen that sallow, deep-eyed countenance before.

It was the young man who had sat eating his luncheon alone at the Esplanade, apparently fascinated by the beauty of Elise Breitenbach.

"Well," exclaimed the baron. "I see you recognize him—eh? He is probably going to buy more paper for his scurrilous screeds."

"Yes. But who is he?" I asked. "I have seen him before, but have no exact knowledge of him."

The baron did not reply until we were back again in his house at Neuilly. Then he said:

"That young man, the author of the outrageous insults to his majesty, is known as Franz Seeliger, but he is the disgraced, ne'er-do-well son of General von Trautmann, captain general of the palace guard."

"The son of old Von Trautmann!" I gasped. "Does the father know?"

The baron grinned and shrugged his shoulders.

Then, after I had related to him the incident of the Esplanade, he said:

"That is of greatest interest. Will you return to Berlin and report to the emperor what you have seen here? His majesty has given me that instruction."

The baron told me of his long weeks of patient inquiry and careful watching; of how the young fellow had been followed to Angers and other towns in France where the letters were posted, and of his frequent visits to Berlin. He had entered a crack regiment, but had been dismissed the army for forgery and undergone two years' imprisonment. Afterwards he had fallen in with a gang of clever international hotel thieves, and become what is known as a rat d'hotel. Now, because of a personal grievance against the emperor, who had ordered his prosecution, he seemed to have by some secret means ferreted out every bit of scandal at Potsdam, exaggerated it, invented amazing additions, and in secret sown it broadcast.

His hand would have left no trace if he had not been so indiscreet as to buy his paper from that one shop close to the Rue de Provence, where he had rooms.

The Arrest of General von Trautmann.

On the third night following I stood in the emperor's private room at Potsdam and made my report, explaining all that I knew and what I had witnessed in Paris.

"That man knows a very great deal—but how does he know?" snapped the emperor. "See Schunke early tomorrow," he ordered, "and tell him to discover the link between this young blackguard and your friends the Breitenbachs, and report to me."

Next morning I sat with the astute Schunke at the headquarters of the detective police in Berlin, and there discussed the affair fully, explaining the result of my journey to Paris and what I had seen, and giving him the order from the kaiser.

"But, count, if this woman Breitenbach and her daughter are your friends, you will be able to visit them and glean something," he said.

"I have distinct orders from the emperor not to visit them while the inquiry is in progress," I replied.

Later that same morning I returned to the Marmor palace to report to the crown prince, but found that his highness was absent upon an official visit of inspection at Stuttgart.

In the meantime I several times saw the great detective, Schunke, and found that he was in constant communication with Baron Steinmetz in Paris. The pair were evidently leaving no stone unturned to elucidate the mystery of those annoying letters, which were still falling as so many bombs into the center of the kaiser's court.

Suddenly, one Sunday night, all Berlin was electrified at the news that General von Trautmann, captain general of the palace guard—whom, truth to tell, the crown prince had long secretly hated because he had once dared to utter some word of reproach—had been arrested and sent to a fortress at the emperor's order.

An hour after the arrest his majesty's personal adjutant commanded me by telephone to attend at the Berlin Schloss. When we were alone, the kaiser turned to me and said:

"Count von Heltzendorff, you will say nothing of your recent visit to Paris, or of the authorship of those anonymous letters—you understand? You know absolutely nothing."

Then, being summarily dismissed by a wave of the imperial hand, I retired, more mystified than ever. Why should my mouth be thus closed?

When I returned to my rooms that evening Schunke rang me up on the telephone with the news that my friends the Breitenbachs had closed their house and left early that morning for Brussels.

"Where is Seeliger?" I inquired.

"In Brussels. The Breitenbachs have gone there to join him, now that the truth is out, and his father is under arrest."

The emperor's fury knew no bounds. His mind poisoned against the poor old general, he had fixed upon him as the person responsible for that disgraceful correspondence which for so many weeks had kept the court in constant turmoil and anxiety. Though his majesty was aware of the actual writer of the letters, he would not listen to reason, and openly declared that he would make an example of the silver-haired old captain general of the guard, who, after all, was perfectly innocent of the deeds committed by his vagabond son.

A prosecution was ordered, and three weeks later it took place in camera, the baron, Schunke and a number of detectives being ordered to give evidence. So damning, indeed, was their testimony that the judge passed the extreme sentence of twenty years' imprisonment.

And I, who knew and held proofs of the truth, dared not protest.

Elise Breitenbach.

Where was the general's son—the real culprit and author of the letters? I made inquiry of Schunke, of the baron, and of others who had, at the order of the all-highest, conspired to ruin poor Von Trautmann. All, however, declared ignorance, and yet, curiously enough, the fine house of the Breitenbachs in the Alsenstrasse still remained empty.

About six months after the secret trial of the unfortunate general I had accompanied the crown prince on a visit to the Quirinal, and one afternoon while strolling along the Corso, in Rome, suddenly came face to face with Fraulein Elise Breitenbach.

In delight I took her into Ronzi's, the noted confectioner's at the corner of the Piazza Colonna, and there, at one of the little tables, she explained to me how she and her mother, having become acquainted with Franz Seeliger—not knowing him to be the general's son—they suddenly fell under the suspicion of the Berlin secret police, and, though much puzzled, did not again come to court.

Some weeks later mother and daughter chanced to be in Paris, and one day called at Seeliger's rooms in the Rue de Provence, but he was out. They, however, were shown into his room to wait, and there saw upon his table an abusive and scurrilous typewritten letter in German addressed to the emperor. Then it suddenly dawned upon them that the affable young man might be the actual author of those infamous letters, about which all Berlin knew and was talking. It was this visit which, no doubt, revealed to the baron the young man's hiding place. Both mother and daughter, however, kept their own counsel, met Seeliger next day, and watched, subsequently learning, to their surprise, that he was the son of General von Trautmann, and, further, that he had as a friend one of the personal valets of the emperor, from whom, no doubt, he obtained his inside information about persons at court.

"When his father was arrested we knew that the young man was living in Brussels, and at once went there in order to induce him to come forward, make confession, and so save the general from disgrace," said the pretty girl seated before me. "On arrival we saw him alone, and told him what we had discovered in the Rue de Provence, whereupon he admitted to us that he had written all the letters, and announced that he intended to return to Berlin next day and give himself up to the police in order to secure his father's release."

"And why did he not do so?" I asked.

"Because next morning he was found dead in his bed in the hotel."

Fearing the emperor's wrath, the Breitenbachs, like myself, dared not reveal what they knew—the truth, which is here set down for the first time—and, alas! poor General von Trautmann died in prison at Mulheim last year.

BUILT FOR KING'S DAUGHTER

Famous French Road Constructed by Louis XV to Render Travel More Easy.

The high road running along the edge of the plateau of Craonne France, frequently mentioned in the official communiques during the second battle of the Aisne, and which is going down to history under the name of the "Chemin des Dames," (the ladies' way), dates from the time of Louis XV.

This road, beginning at the Paris-Maubeuge road, about ten miles northeast of Soissons, crosses the plateau of Craonne, a distance of about twelve miles, then descends into the valley of the Ailette to cross the Vauclerc woods to the domain of the ancient chateau of Dove, near Bouconville, where the Princess Adelaide, Sophie and Victoire, daughters of Louis XV, visited one of their ladies of honor, Mme. de Narbonne, every summer.

The roads of the region were detestable. Out of consideration for the princesses a new paved road was built along the crest of the plateau and from that fact it derives the name of the "Chemin des Dames."

She Used Her Voice.

The Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York has a maid with a voice. She can yell louder than any Comanche on the warpath. Recently she let loose her voice and bellhops and porters rushed to her from all over the big hostelry. In answer to her cries she pointed to one of the rooms. "There's Leprochauns in there," she cried, "little devil men, with bald heads and whiskers, leaping over the bed in yonder room." "Leprochauns," cried a porter, also from the Emerald isle, and he devoutly crossed himself. "Leprochauns, indeed," whimpered the maid. "There they are in there. I went in, and bless my soul, if these little devils did not go leapin' about lookin' for all the world like Paddy McFadden's two uncles over in Ballyshanon. Sure, I won't go in there again, job or no job." With compressed lips and doughty manners, the little party of men went into the room and then, after a suppressed gasp, they laughed. For gamboling about were two tiny marmosets. "Pets, are they?" repeated the maid. "Well, may be they're all right, but they look like devils just the same, and I'll have none of them."

Sudden Change of Mind.

"Why in the world don't they give up their automobile and try to pay some of their debts?" asked the lady who was always worrying about the troubles other people had.

"Probably," her husband replied, "for the same reason that we don't move into an apartment we can afford, instead of keeping up this place and wondering how long we can avoid going to smash."

"Oh, but I despise a man who is willing to let the world see that he's a failure, instead of being brave enough to keep up appearances, at least."—Judge.

Not Knocking at All.

"I wanted to talk to you yesterday."

"Why didn't you call me on the telephone?"

"It wasn't important enough for me to go to all that trouble."

HONOR THE DRAFTED MAN.

The highest honor that can be conferred upon a citizen is to be chosen to defend his country.

This truth has been obscured by our use of the volunteer system parallel with the compulsory system. A comparison is inevitable between the men who voluntarily have made the great sacrifice and those who have waited to be designated to serve under the new law. This is one of the evil effects of the volunteer system as we employ it. When we have established the system of universal service we shall have no comparisons. All who are called to service will enter on the same terms.

But now we have the volunteer and the drafted man. Let us not do injustice to the latter because of the former. We all honor the volunteer. He is of the flower of our nation. But it does not follow that the drafted man is not of the same breed. There are honorable considerations which have held men back from volunteering. There are duties at home as well as abroad, and the conscientious citizen, knowing that the draft was coming, could honorably wait for its operation.

We honor the volunteer. Let us honor the drafted man, and let the drafted man honor himself. When he receives the summons of the government he is called to the performance of the noblest of all citizen duties. His country has said to him: "I need you. I place my trust in you. I confide to you my honor, my welfare, and the success of a great cause."

The day in which a man is drafted, if it cannot be a day of rejoicing, at least should be a day of pride.

The new army raised by the draft will be a body of which any man may be proud to be a member. It will be made up of picked men. The sentimental opponents of conscription have covered the idea with the dust of fallacies. They have tried to depict the conscript as a reluctant weakling or a pacifist saint dragged brutally to war. The conscript armies of France and Germany give the lie to that. For three years of the civil war the armies of the north were filled by the draft and the armies of the south for a longer period.

The new national army is the creation of a free people giving effect to their free will through free institutions. It is the creation of law, like the jury, and to serve in it is citizenship at its highest level.

The American conscript soldier is going to fight by the side of the heroic conscript of France—republican soldiers both fighting for democracy. Together they will write a shining page in the history of freedom.

RECOGNIZING THE SMALL MAN.

The War Department has instructed recruiting stations to open the ranks of the regular army to men no more than five feet one inch in height and who weigh only 110 pounds. This order was issued upon recommendation of Surgeon-General Gorgas, who held that good men were being kept out of the service by insisting upon all applicants attaining the minimum height of five feet four inches and weighing not less than 120 pounds, the standards fixed in army regulations.

An exhaustive study of the subject has recently been made by the committee on anthropology of the National Research Council, and its report forwarded to the general medical board is probably the basis for the recommendation made by the surgeon-general.

It is a fact that many European nationalities, most of which are well represented in this country, have an average height of two, three or four inches shorter than that of Americans, the small statures signifying normal variation according to racial difference rather than degeneration.

The Russo-Japanese war showed conclusively to every military expert that the small man may be made into a magnificently capable soldier. The average Japanese appears physically insignificant alongside the burly Russian, but his fighting qualities are in no wise inferior. Less marked is the physical difference between the French and the Germans, but the latter are decidedly the larger men. When it comes to individual fighting, however, the Marne, Verdun and other battlefields have proved the superiority of the French over their Teutonic enemies. The English "bantam regiments" and the bantam Canadian battalion, composed of men entirely under regulation height requirements, are also said to have shown unquestionably that size is not essential in a soldier.

The new standards will undoubtedly be applied to the forthcoming national as well as to the regular army, and will prevent exclusion from the line of many thousands of men who will make superior soldiers.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Mrs. James M. Burns, of Cincinnati, O., announces the engagement of her daughter Evalyn Sage, to Mr. Howard Husted Dowlin. Miss Burns is a daughter of the late Lt. Col. James M. Burns, who was at one time Commandant of Cadets of the West Virginia University and for many years a summer resident of Mountain Lake Park. Mr. Dowlin is a member of a prominent family of West Chester, Pa. He is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and for the past ten years has been the teacher of Latin and Greek at the University School of Cincinnati. The marriage will take place very quietly about the middle of August at Mrs. Burn's cottage in Mountain Lake Park.

The camp meeting came to a close Sunday evening with one of the largest crowds in the history of the Park. The rain in the morning kept many away until the afternoon, when the grounds began filling up with automobiles and by evening it was difficult to get through the mass of machines near the auditorium and streets nearby. Rev. L. J. Miller preached in the morning and evening and Rev. D. F. Brooks in the afternoon. At the evening service the crowd was the largest that ever attended a meeting here in the history of the camp while the tabernacle was packed to its utmost capacity at least one thousand were unable to gain entrance to the building. The sermon by Rev. Miller was one of his greatest during the meeting and while he preached one hour and twenty minutes there was the most perfect order, everyone desiring to catch every word of the great preacher. Altogether the meeting has been a great success, and speaks well for the future under the same management.

At the conclusion of the meeting Sunday night an invitation from the Park Association inviting the Camp-meeting Association to hold the camp-meeting at Mountain Lake Park in 1918. The invitation was accepted and arrangements will be made accordingly.

Mr. Philips, on the part of the Camp-meeting Association, expressed the thanks of that body to the Oakland REPUBLICAN for courtesies received from Mr. B. H. Sincell, the editor.

The new board of directors are as follows: Rev. D. F. Brooks, J. A. Hayden, Mrs. George Peterson, Wm. W. Phillips, C. M. Hood, J. L. Bolander, J. A. Enlow, T. E. Timberlake, Cleary, J. J. Parker, Mrs. J. A. Hall. Executive committee: Wm. W. Phillips, Mrs. George Peterson, C. M. Hood.

Four workers have already been engaged for next summer as follows: Revs. Miller, Brooks, Henderson and Dalboe. Others will be added from time to time. The meeting next year will be July 5 to 15.

The hotels and boarding houses are still lacking boarders. There may be some come the last of this week but the season will be a partial failure in this respect.

The election of directors for the Mountain Lake Park Association took place Tuesday. Mr. G. S. Hamill is the only Maryland member.

The community meeting was held Wednesday morning with few in attendance.

Rev. Shaw's meeting commenced Monday and will continue for two or three weeks. The meetings are held at Miss Sarah Harris hotel. Rev. Shaw is a great teacher.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Harmon were in attendance at the camp meeting.

One could not throw a stone on the camp ground Sunday without hitting two or three candidates.

Mr. Charles May was painfully injured last week by falling from a cherry tree.

WHY NOT SPEICHER?

Sentiment Is Growing That He Again Become Candidate.

Ever since the republication in the columns of The Republican of an article appearing in a recent issue of the Baltimore American setting out facts why Senator Speicher should be returned to the Maryland Senate for another term the sentiment amongst Garrett countians demanding his nomination and re election has been growing until it has become almost universal.

Following a letter published in these columns last week from an old soldier at Friendsville, the subjoined communication from a resident of Deer Park has been received and is printed herewith.

Fellow Citizens and Voters of Garrett County:

The question in almost every voter's mind at this time is, "Who shall represent Garrett county as our next Senator."

The question has already been asked by many, "Why not Senator Speicher?"

This is a matter which concers everyone—Democrat and Republican alike—and should be well considered. No man of sound judgment will place personal prejudice above party principal, but will support the man of ability and power for such a responsible position.

Mr. Speicher's record as Senator has proven his ability to do things. He has not flooded the Senate with useless bills which took up valuable time belonging to important matters, but has been alert and always stood ready to pass legislation favorable to the best interests to Garrett county.

Many ridiculously false statements have been circulated concerning "What was done at Annapolis," but those who care to know will find upon investigation that Speicher did not quibble over trifles, but directed his energy to things worth while.

Mr. Speicher has never come before the people with a platform of fake pledges and promises which he never expected to redeem, nor has he posed as a panacea or "cure-all" for political ills.

I have talked to quite a number—Democrats and Republicans—and all acknowledge his ability and the influence he would have if he were returned, on account of his being familiar with the work of the State Senate.

Mr. Speicher will not force himself upon the people. His announcement if he consents to be a candidate will be in accordance with the sentiment of the people at this time, and many who have opposed him in the past will rally to his support.

In conclusion, Republican voters, before making up your mind, for or against investigate and consider the matter well, and be not misled by deceivers and fake, imaginary word pictures of conditions as they are not.

Respectfully,
G. W. WEITZELL,
Deer Park, July 16, 1917.

To the Editor of The Republican,
Oakland, Md.

Dear Sir:—Please allow me space in your columns to give a few reasons why I believe the citizens of Garrett county should insist that Senator Speicher represent Garrett county another term in the State Senate.

First, because he has proven that he is eminently qualified to represent us by the success he has achieved, both as a private citizen and a public official.

Second, he is a man who has always been progressive and has been untiring in his efforts to secure for our county such legislation as would be helpful in the development of its resources and the betterment of the condition of its citizens.

Third, he has always supported any measure that was in the interest of public schools and good roads.

Fourth, he is a man who is held in high esteem by his colleagues as evidenced by his having been made minority floor leader in the recent extra session of the legislature, and his ability is recognized by all our state officials.

Therefore, I believe, that owing to his wide experience and his recognized business ability and his untiring energy that Senator Speicher, if returned to the Senate, will be in position to secure more for Garrett county at this time than possibly any other citizen.

OAKLAND POSTMASTER OBTAINING RECRUITS

Congratulated By Army Officers For His Acumen.

Postmaster Charles A. Deffinbaugh, of Oakland, Maryland, appreciates his duties to his country and realizes that the government has placed at his disposal an unusual means whereby he can assist the United States to win this war. Since June 1, Postmaster Deffinbaugh has obtained ten recruits for enlistment in the regular army of the United States.

According to law, all second, third and fourth class postmasters are recruiting officers for the regular army. They are paid $5.00 for each recruit which they obtain through their own efforts and who is actually enlisted in the regular army. The work which entails upon postmasters is practically nothing. They simply represent the United States government in their local city or town and keep the public informed through the press or any other means as to the needs of the regular army of the United States. They acquaint themselves with the requirements for enlistment according to the literature which has been sent them by the recruiting office at 16 St. Paul street, Baltimore, Md., which is the headquarters for the recruiting for the regular army in Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia.

When an applicant applies for enlistment they furnish him the transportation to the nearest local recruiting office. If the applicant is accepted and enlisted they obtain $5.00 according to law. Their efforts to obtain the $5.00 in addition to securing the recruit simply extends to their signing a voucher for $5.00 when the voucher is sent to them from the recruiting office in Baltimore.

What is more simple, yet how few postmasters avail themselves of the privilege of assisting the government by acting as a recruiting agent when they have already been made a recruiting agent by law.

Postmaster Deffinbaugh, of Oakland, Maryland, is congratulated by army officers on his acumen in appreciating his duties and privileges and in the efficient manner in which he has made use of his opportunities.

Removing Wrecked Truck.

The five-ton Pierce-Arrow truck of Frank Marine, contractor, which met with an accident recently on the National Pike two miles east of Grantsville, was taken to Cumberlahd Tuesday on its way to Baltimore by Frank L. Wight, R. Smith and L. R. Hart of the Pierce-Arrow car service station Baltimore. A two-ton Pierce-Arrow truck was used in pulling the wrecked car on its rear wheels.

The accident to the truck happened when the driver lost control of the machine and went over a large rock. The front wheels were mashed, the cab torn off, the transmission bent and the engine jarred loose. The driver was thrown out with the cab and a large quantity of stone chips to be used in improving the road, dumped upon him. He escaped injury. The truck will not reach Baltimore until this evening, according to Wight.

THE DEATH RECORD.

ROBERT HENRY MILES.

The remains of the late Robert Henry Miles, an announcement of whose untimely death appeared in last week's issue of The Republican, were brought to the home of his father-in-law on last Thursday afternoon. On Friday afternoon after a brief service at the home the cortege went to St. Mark's Lutheran church where services were conducted by the pastor, the Rev. S. E. Wicker, assisted by Rev. Dr. Moore and Rev. Mr. Shultz. Interment followed in the Oakland cemetery. He leaves to mourn his loss his widow, Emily Mae Miller Miles and two sons, Kenneth and Robert jr. The following out of town people were here for the funeral. Funeral director and Mrs. J. M. Logsdon, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Turley, Mrs. J. E. Deck, Mrs. Harry Helms, Mrs. Frank Densmon Jr., Mr. Frank Ellis, Mr. Martin Lambert, and Mrs. Buck Smith all of Newburg; Mr. John Gildbaugh, and Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Biggs, of Grafton, Mr. Daniel Miller, of Washington, D. C.

Christian Endeavor Social Hour.

The Rev. G. S. Hanleiter and family the former pastor of the Oakland circuit United Brethren church, entertained in their social hour the Christian Endeavor Societies of Underwood, Pleasant Valley, Lyndale, Hutton, Loch Lynn with a delegation from the Crellin Epworth League at the manse in Loch Lynn Heights last Thursday evening. The manse was very tastefully decorated in the national colors, and potted plants, the floral piece in the dining room was a minature fountain and lake, three feet by two, which was banked with red and white roses, lilies surrounding the spray of water.

The evening was spent informally in songs, conversation and recitations. The younger set participated in games. Refreshments were served at 10 o'clock to the two hundred guests. Mr. Hanleiter was congratulated upon the splendid success of the occasion.

Mr. Hanleiter wishes to know if there is a Christian Endeavor Society besides the above in Garrett county. If you know of one write him at Mt. Lake Park.

RIDERS DUMPED.

Motorcycle Accident in Oakland Might Have Been Serious.

Last Saturday evening a motorcycle ridden by a man and a woman, th former pretty well gone as the resul of too much bad whiskey, was wrecked at the corner of Second and Alder street when the machine came in contact with the curb at the corner, the man being thrown from the cycle which toppled over, pinning the woman beneath it. The latter was picked up and taken to a local hotel where she had registered that day and given attention by one of the Oakland physicians who stated that her injuries were of a minor character.

The man, who gave his name as Spiker and his home just west of Keyser Ridge on the National Pike, was arrested and taken before Justice West, who imposed a fine of $25.00 and costs for operating the machine while under the influence of liquor. Spiker paid the fine and costs and was released, leaving Oakland the following morning.

The woman, who accompanied him to Oakland, claimed that she had gone out to the Pike in company with a party from Mountain Lake Park, that the machine in which they were riding broke down and that she had hired Spiker to bring her to Oakland where she expected to meet her intended husband and be married upon the arrival of train No. 12 from the West.

The groom-to-be arrived on the train as scheduled. After investigating the affair he decided the wedding should be solemnized, and the couple left for the west on train No. 1 the same evening.

Enlisted as Artillerymen.

Messrs. Carl J. Brown and Cletus Griffith, of Oakland, who have been at Akron, Ohio, for the past year where they have been engaged at work, arrived home Tuesday morning to spend a few days with their parents and friends before reporting for service as members of Co. B. 1st Ohio Field Artillery, both having enlisted at Akron prior to coming home. For the present the company to which they have been assigned is stationed at Silver Lake, Ohio, for which point the two young men expect to leave Friday or Saturday.

Mr. W. G. Hinebaugh, accompanied by his two sons, Morgan Hinebaugh and P. E. Tingue, went to Cumberland this morning to spend the day.

Rev. Thomas J. Stanton, of Catonsville, Baltimore county, arrived in Oakland yesterday afternoon to visit his brother, Mr. J. M. Stanton, and family for a few days.

Mrs. J. R. Shultz and little daughter, who have been here for some weeks on a visit to Rev. and Mrs. W. M. Shultz, went to Webster Springs, West Va., this morning to be guests of relatives.

Rev. F. McCamic, pastor of the Deer Park, M. E. circuit, will preach Sunday morning at Kirk chapel and on Sunday afternoon at North Glade. Services will be held Sunday evening at Swanton.

Rev. R. J. Wolf, of Harrisburg, Pa., stopped off in Oakland Sunday morning on his way home from Fairmont, West Va., and spent a portion of the day here with the Rev. S. E. Wicker, pastor of St. Mark's church.

There will be preaching services at the Deer Park Lutheran church on Sunday, July 29, at 11 a. m. A congregational meeting is called to be held immediately after the service and every member is expected to be present.

Mr. Jas. D. Lewis, chief of the surveying corps of the Dodson interests now engaged at work in District No. 8, has been confined to his bed at the Commercial Hotel in Oakland for several days, suffering with an attack of quinsy.

Letters received in Oakland by members of their respective families indicate the removal of several of the Oakland recruits from Columbus, Ohio, to Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Among those to go to the latter point are Gordon McRobie and Percy Frantz.

Dr. B. F. Selby, local representative of the Buick Automobile Company, will receive one of the 1918 model seven passenger cars in a few days, probably on Monday. The new model has been on the market for less than three weeks and the Oakland agency is amongst the first to receive a demonstration machine.

Mr. Josiah G. Friend, of Swanton, while in Oakland yesterday called at this office and authorized the publication of a letter withdrawing his candidacy for County Commissioner. Mr. Friend's letter appears in another column as also does the letter of Dr. Copeland, of Kitzmiller, withdrawing from the contest for the House of Delegates.

And Dick Hamilton blames the rise in the price of milk on the cow. Here's an outburst in the Hagerstown Mail: "A cow must be a bold and imperious bovine. Here is grass a springing up and food a plenty for her and yet this morning she jumped milk one cent, so announces to us a bunch of men who sell the lacteal fluid in wagons, cans and bottles. What a fiendish beast she must be. How we must pity the poor men who travel about in such bestial company. It would not be so bad if pasturage was short and there was nothing for the cow to eat but liberty bonds and gold-edge mortgage coupons, but with all kinds of wild stuff at her very front door, this is too much. Why can't she go out and eat along the pikes? We never did like a cow very much, but now that she has unfolded her truly diabolic and contradictory nature we have even less respect for her than ever. Has she no pity? Is she only a merciless machine to squeeze white water from? Has she no mercy? It would seem not. A man told us he never saw a purple cow or a gold field. Now we know he lied."

Home Demonstration Work.

During the past week Canning and Home Economies clubs have been organized in Bloomington and Crellin.

Canning and food demonstrations have recently been given by the county Home Demonstration Agent in Friendsville with an attendance of twenty-one; Accident, twenty-two; Grantsville, forty.

Meetings scheduled to take place are: Dodson, July 18, 12:45; Oakland, July 18, 9:30; Red House, July 19, 2:00; Hutton, July 20, 2:00; Bloomington, July 23, 2:00; Bittinger, 24, 2:00; Friendsville, July 25, 2:30; Accident, July 26, 2.30; Grantsville, July 27, 2:30.

In each community meetings are held in the school house. In Oakland the Domestic room in the High School is used.

Married.

MACGEARY—HESEN—At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kildow, Fred B. MacGeary, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Mrs. Pearl Kildow Hesen were united in marriage by the Rev. W. M. Shultz at 8 p. m. on Saturday, July 14, 1917. The ceremony was very quiet and witnessed only by immediate relatives. There were no attendants. The bride is the widow of the late C. A. Hesen and formerly resided in Pittsburgh but of late has been living with her parents in Oakland. The groom is Pittsburgh District Inspector for The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway system with headquarters in Pittsburgh. There will be no wedding trip owing to the fact that Mr. MacGeary will be called shortly for examination and training in the Engineer Officers Reserve Corps of the U. S. Army.

GRANT—WILLIAMS—Miss Patience Bruce Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Williams, 17 Virginia avenue, Cumberland, and Dr. William Wallace Grant, of Oakland, were united in marriage Monday at noon, at the home of the bride's parents, the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Appleton, pastor of the Episcopal church at Oakland, in the presence of the immedate families of the bride and groom, and a few out of town invited guests. With H. Paul Mann at the piano, Mrs. Mann prior to the ceremony sang "Beloved, It Is Morn." The bridal party entered the parlor to the strains of the "Bridal Chorus from a Midsummer's Night Dream," and during the marrage ceremony Mr. Mann played "Oh, Promise Me." The bride was dressed in white crepe de chine and wore a white lace hat.

Lieutenant and Mrs. W. F. Williams, brother and sister-in-law of the bride, were best man and matron of honor respectively. The parlor and dining room were tastefully decorated with palms and daisies, and following the marriage a wedding luncheon was served. Dr. and Mrs. Grant left in their automobile for a tour of eastern cities, with Washington, D. C., as the first stop. They will reside in Oakland, where the groom has a beautiful new home now nearing completion.

Those present from out of the city were Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Grant, of Oakland; Mrs. J. B. Johnston, Keyser, W. Va.; Mrs. William Berisford and Mrs. Daniel Cowan, Piedmont, W. Va., and Rev. Appleton.

WILT—TASKER—On Sunday last, Rev. Frank McCamic officiating, Miss Ellen Tasker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tasker, became the bride of Mr. Porter McKinley Wilt. A few friends witnessed the ceremony.

BOWSER—HACKMAN—Henry Oscar Bowser, of Selbysport, and Miss Vernie Hackman, of Accident, were quietly united in marriage at the Lutheran parsonage last Friday morning by the Rev. S. E. Wicker.

THOSE AWFUL CRAMPS

Suggestions that may save Much Suffering

Marysville, Pa.—"For twelve years I suffered with terrible cramps. I would have to stay in bed several days every month. I tried all kinds of remedies and was treated by doctors, but my trouble continued until one day I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for others. I tried it and now I am never troubled with cramps and feel like a different woman. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly and I am recommending it to my friends who suffer as I did." —Mrs. GEORGE R. NAYLOR, Box 72, Marysville, Pa.

Young women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this root and herb remedy.

BREAD AS ECONOMICAL FOOD

Would Be Used More Extensively If Home-Baked Variety Was Always Good, Say Government Experts.

If home-baked bread were uniformly well made, it would be used more extensively than at present in place of more expensive foods, say specialists in the United States department of agriculture, and this would be a distinct economy. From the standpoint of nutrition it makes very little difference whether breadstuffs are served in the form of bread or in the form of breakfast cereals, side dishes with meat, or desserts.

A man engaged in moderate muscular work can profitably consume about three-fourths of a pound a day of breastuffs in any one of these forms. This quantity is the equivalent of one pound of baked bread. As a matter of fact, however, it is not probable that in the average family this quantity is consumed and the deficiency is made up by the use of more expensive substances. Of course bread alone is not sufficient for the maintenance of health, but from both an economical and a hygienic point of view should be used more extensively than it usually is, declare the experts.

The Reichsrath a Babel.

That parliament of Babel, the reichsrath, now engaged in playing an obscure part in the Austro-Hungarian peace hunt, is permitted to express its emotions in eight official languages—symbolic of the war of tongues raging in the empire itself. In the great vocal chorus the Slovanian may be said to have struck the strident top note, for the very word he has coined for himself expresses the belief that no man is a talker except himself. "Slowan," in Old Slavonian, meant "to speak," and as the Slav understood no other speech, the others were naturally the dumb dogs.—London Daily Chronicle.

Still One More Task to Face.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR JULY 22

SENNACHERIB IN DAYS OF JUDAH.

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 19:20-22, 28-37.

GOLDEN TEXT—God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.—Psa. 46:1.

Last week's lesson was a great picture of the reform of the nation. Today we have another picture which needs to be carefully put before the children. It is a national picture of a ruler and the invasion of his country. In reality it reveals the principles which are the same today, and which affect the lives of boys and girls as well as men; the dangers, temptations, the need of prayer, the need of a life of faith in God, the care of a heavenly father, deliverance and victory. It is a great thing for any nation or any individual to have such a marvelous experience of God's salvation. It occurred probably B. C. 701, the latter part of Hezekiah's reign. Assyria on the north was enlarging its borders and seeking to overcome Judea. Read parallel accounts in II Kings 18; II Chron. 32 and Isa. 36:37. We have on the Taylor cylinder an account by Sennacherib of the victory over Hezekiah, found in Nineveh in 1830 and now in the British museum.

I. The Situation. When the great Sargon died at Nineveh, the Syrian governments sought to assert their independence. It was a good time for Hezekiah also to assert his independence. Accordingly they refused to pay the customary tribute to Assyria. For a time Sennacherib was too busy attending to other portions of the empire to pay much attention to the city of Jerusalem. Later, however, he subdued the cities on the coast and threatened Egypt itself.

II. The Supplication (vv. 20-22). God does things because we pray. There was more power in Hezekiah's prayer than there was in his army. Through his prayers he laid 185,000 of his enemies in the grave. Hezekiah's God saved his people out of the hand of Sennacherib (v. 19), God did it. One great reason why he heard Hezekiah's prayer was because it was for God's own glory that Hezekiah asked (v. 19). One great reason why so many of our prayers are not answered is because they are selfish—seeking our own gratification and not God's honor (James 4:3 R. V.). Rending his clothes and putting on sackcloth, Hezekiah went to the house of God while his messengers sought out the prophet Isaiah. From II Chron. 32:20 we find that Isaiah joined with Hezekiah in his earnest prayer (Matt. 18:19, 20), thus the king and prophet worked as well as prayed. They showed their faith by their work (James 2:17, 18). At the same time they waited upon God for an answer, not because God was unwilling to bestow good things, or must be importuned, but that his gifts may bring the greater benefit. He sometimes delays his answer, thereby fitting us to receive them because of the intensity of our desire and to appreciate the things he has to bestow. God is as ready to say to us as to Hezekiah, "Thy prayer is heard," if we will not meet the conditions of prevailing prayer (I John 3:22; I John 5:14; Rom. 8:26,27).

III. God's Glorious Deliverance (vv. 23-37). God permitted the Assyrians to attack and they thus imagined they were having their own will and could do as they pleased, but when his "rod" had done its work, they found the difference. The God against whom they raved guided them as with a "bridle" and turned them back to Assyria. Sennacherib considered himself more than a match for God (Ch. 18:23-25) but had to return like a conquered beast of burden with God's "hook" in his nose and bridle on his lips. God allows the enemies of his people to go a certain length in order that his people may be humbled and seek him. Then he puts forth his hand and says, "This far and no further." Jehovah gives us the same promise he gave Hezekiah, "I will defend this city." Is not the city of Jerusalem that God defends more safe than a city defended by an army? (Psa. 46:5, 6; 27:1). God had promised David that his kingdom should not perish, for in it lay the hope of the world and his plans for the redemption of mankind. Not because of the people did God defend the city, but because of his oath. This is a most dramatic picture, the mysterious destruction of the Assyrian army (vv. 35, 36). The Lord sent his angel, literally his "messenger," who applied his own plan for the accomplishment of his purpose.

There is a sort of a grim irony in the ending of Sennacherib's career. He who had so defiantly asked, "Who are they among all the gods of the country that have delivered their country out of mine hand," is led back to the house of his own god whom he imagines to be so potent to worship and in that very presence is slain by the hands of one of his own sons. The importance of this event is shown by the fact that it is referred to in three books of the Bible and probably referred to another, occupying seven or eight chapters, besides being recorded on the great cylinder to which reference is made.

Is Your Work Hard?

Work which brings any unusual strain on the back and kidneys tends to cause kidney ailments, such as backache, lameness, headache, dizziness and distressing urinary troubles. Kidney complaints make any kind of work doubly hard and if neglected there is danger of gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease. If your work is hard on the back, keep your kidneys in good condition with Doan's Kidney Pills. Thousands rely on them.

A Virginia Case

Alex. Umberger, Spiller St., Wytheville, Va., says: "I had a steady, dull ache across the small of my back. Hard work and heavy lifting brought on the trouble. The kidney secretions were irregular and painful in passage and at times, the backache was so severe, I could hardly straighten. It was hard for me to get out of bed mornings. Doan's Kidney Pills strengthened my back and regulated my kidneys and the benefit has been permanent."

She Understood.

Certain members of the house party were describing the accidents that had happened to them during their respective careers. Adventures by flood, fire and field had all been well received, and Mr. Brown, eager for fame, thought it was his turn.

"D'you know," he said, "I had a very painful experience once. I ran a confounded splinter quite half an inch long right under my finger-nail, don't you know!"

"Really, Mr. Brown," said a maiden of the party; "how did you do it?"

"Well," he said, "it happened like this."

As he spoke he unconsciously raised his hand and scratched his forehead.

"Oh, I see," she interrupted, sweetly; "how very careless of you!"

Fulton Was a Great Man.

The class in history was studying the life of Robert Fulton. In connection with it they, of course, brought in the topic of the steamboat, which you know, made Fulton famous.

"What are many of the great uses of the steamboat?" asked the teacher. "What things might not have happened if the steamboat had not been invented?" she hinted.

"Well," answered little Johnny, who had been called on," well, um-m-a, Columbus might not have discovered America."

NEW METALS BEING SOUGHT

Manufacturers Looking for Substitutes for Those Now Used Because of Advance in Prices.

The recent advance in price of many of the more commonly used metals has led manufacturers to adopt or consider the adoption of various substitute metals or alloys for certain purposes. The advice of the bureau of standards has frequently been sought in this connection. An interesting field of investigation is opened up by such inquiries.

It appears that the metals traditionally and currently used for various articles are in many cases no better adapted for the purpose than others, and a slight difference in price would warrant a substitution. It is not usually possible, however, to suggest substitutes offhand, as there are many factors involving manufacturing peculiarities, durability and other physical and chemical properties that first have to be determined. "There is," says the bureau, "a very wide field of research here, which would undoubtedly repay manyfold the efforts put upon it."—Scientific American.

INJURY BY CORN-EAR WORMS

Kansas Agricultural College Finds It Possible to Control Little Pest by Spraying.

Nearly all roasting ears on the market in recent years have been injured by the corn-ear worm, and those known to be free from the injury can be sold at from 5 to 10 cents more per dozen.

For six years the department of entomology of the Kansas State Agricultural college and experiment station has been studying the worm and has found that a large proportion of the eggs deposited in the summer are placed on the fresh corn silks. From these eggs the worms that injure the ears originate. The young larvae begin feeding on the silks and eat their way down into the ear. It is, therefore, possible to control much of the injury by keeping the silks sprayed during the silking period.

Powdered arsenate of lead has been found to be the most efficient poison. A 75 per cent mixture of arsenate of lead, with air-slaked lime or land plaster is practically as good as the poison alone. The dust is shaken upon the silks from an ordinary cheesecloth bag or flour sack. Under average weather conditions four or five applications at intervals of three or four days are sufficient.

MAKING MONEY OUT OF COWS

Seven Fundamental Principles of Successful Dairying—Weed Out All Poor Animals.

There are ten rules for making money out of cows and they all begin with "milk good cows."

To put the case in a nutshell, or rather to skim the cream from the whole matter, let us admit that there are, say, seven fundamental principles of successful dairying, about as follows:

1. Weed out the poor cows by means of the scales and the Babcock test.
2. Feed the good cows plenty of clean, choice stuff as close to a balanced ration as possible.
3. Eliminate competition by producing a better product than the other fellow and demanding a good price for it.
4. Head the herd with a high-class, pure-bred sire.
5. Raise the promising calves from the best cows only.
6. Develop a market for your surplus bull calves and other stock.
7. Feed the mind of the man behind the cow.

CUTTING BLADES ON MOWERS

Finger Bar Arranged in Which Alternate Cutters Rotate in Different Directions.

In illustrating and describing a finger bar for mowers, invented by C. A. Johnson, 3010 Upper Stockton road, Sacramento, Cal., the Scientific American says:

"This invention provides an arrangement of cutting members which correctly strike the grass or vegetable matter to be cut and without in any way interfering with the remaining parts of the device. It provides a finger bar in which the alternate cutters rotate in a different direction, the position of rotation of these cutters being such that one cutter will overlay the other cutter during the cycle of rotation though never coming in contact."

PLAN TO DESTROY CUTWORMS

Paris Green Mixed With Bran Is Recommended by North Dakota Station—Spread in Evening.

(North Dakota Agricultural College Bulletin.)

Cutworms eat off the young plants at the surface of the ground, and they do this in the night. In the daytime they can usually be found buried an inch deep and only a short distance from the last plant eaten. Plants that are transplanted can be protected by wrapping paper around the stem, covering it half an inch above and below the surface of the soil. The cutworms can be poisoned with the following: One-half pound paris green mixed dry with 25 pounds bran, then add one gallon water and one quart molasses and mix thoroughly. The set time to spread this is in the evening, or late afternoon.

GUARD ALL ALFALFA LEAVES

Two-Thirds of Feeding Value of Plant Is in Leaves—Rake Into Windrows Before Dry.

Two-thirds of the feeding value of the alfalfa plant is in the leaves. If the leaves are lost in curing only one-third of the feeding value remains. This fact is regarded as important by farmers who advocate that alfalfa hay be cured so as to save the leaves. This means that the alfalfa must be raked into windrows before the leaves dry and fall off. Raking can be done two hours after cutting, thus saving the leaves and preserving the green color and desirable flavor.

A Sporting Event.

At a recent sports meeting in a country town an old countryman picked up a disused program of events and was studying it earnestly when a swell approached him.

"Hello, old chap, what's the next event on the program?"

War Spirit Contagious.

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree was more than once placed in a perplexing position by the loss of members of his cast during his tour throughout Canada and the United States. No less than ten members enlisted, including two ladies for service in war hospitals. One humorous incident occurred after the engagement of a "deputy" in the United States. She was not very much interested in the war prior to her appointment, but the talk behind the scenes among the company bore so frequently on the loss of relatives at the front that she felt one night impelled to volunteer as a nurse, was eventually accepted, and her place had to be filled.

Twenty-Five Years' Experience With Kidney Remedy

Between twenty-five and thirty years ago I commenced selling Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and during all that time I have never heard a single complaint from my customers; they are more inclined to praise it; and judging from their favorable remarks and the repeated sales I enjoy I am confident that Swamp-Root is a valuable medicine for the troubles for which it is intended.

Very truly yours,

Rubber Consumption Growing.

Consumption of rubber per capita is more than twice what it was 25 years ago. One company expects to manufacture uppers of shoes from rubber as well as soles. This company will operate its own merchant marine to bring crude rubber from Sumatra and carry manufactured articles to all parts of the world. The company now employs 28,621 men, and manufactures 218,930 pairs of rubber shoes a day. More than a million trees on Sumatra plantations are being tapped.

Choosing His Words.

Wife—"Why are you speaking so sharply?" Hubby—"Because I want to get a word in edgeways."

Save the Babies

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. There can be no danger in the use of Castoria if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher as it contains no opiates or narcotics of any kind.

Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

MARYLAND TO FURNISH 7096

Draft Quotas Announced—Guard to Go to Alabama.

The toll of manhood that each state must furnish to America's citizen army was announced by the War Department Friday. The figures are based upon a total initial draft of 687,000 men.

In assigning the quota that each state must yield the War Department used the Federal census population estimates.

New York leads all others, with 69,241.

Maryland's quota is put at 7,096.

Maryland guardsmen have been assigned to Anniston, Alabama, the War Department announced.

Anniston is a town of 15,000 and is near Birmingham.

All preparation for the toansportation of the men to the camps have been completed. They were worked ont in co-operation with the War Department by the committee of the council of national defense of which Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, is chairman.

The camps themselves have tor the most part been completed. Sewerage has to be put in and sites for the tents marked off in addition to the erection of storage buildings, mess halls, recreation rooms.

The men will camp under canvas which they will bring with them.

The War Department today announced a gain of 86,081 recruits in the National Guard during the month of June. Of the enlistments 62,262 were in regiments in state service and 18,849 in regiments already called into the federal service. West Virginia supplied 552 of this number, Ohio 7580, Pennsylvania 3936 and Maryland 985.

SELBYSPORT

A very pretty wedding took place in the parlor of the officiating minister, Rev. L. K. Young, at Friendsville on Monday morning when Mr. William Wiley Hawkins, of Fairmont, W. Va., and Miss Dealvers Jane Liston, formerly of Selbysport, were united in bonds of matrimony. The happy couple left Monday for an extended visit through different parts of West Virginia. They will reside at Fairmont, W. Va. The wedding was a great surprise to the people of our community.

Thorns In Our Side.

In the swelling symphony of the awakening America there is still one harsh, discordant note. It comes from the attitude which is still maintained by the so-called Industrial Workers of the World, brethren in rebellion against law and order everywhere. Attempts at interference with the workings of the conscription act, efforts to destroy crops, and open hostility to soldiers guarding plants in which government work is under way—these and other acts which are as treasonable as deliverance of our country to the enemy would be are only some of the counts in the indictment against these pests. Deportation or long penal sentences for the whole kit and caboodle of them would be treating them with kindness.

Dr. C. J. Maust, veterinary physician and surgeon, has opened an office over Bonig's store, Grantsville, Md., and will be at the service of the public in the future.—Advertisement.

Navy For the Air . . .

By Frederick J. Haskin.

Not long ago there was an extended debate in the English House of Commons over some phase of the aircraft situation. Finally arose a member, who is closely connected with the aircraft industry and the air service, and remarked: "Gentlemen, if you will provide for the selection of our best aviator and our best aeroplane, and the sending of that man and that machine to the United States, you will do more toward winning the war than has been done by all the debates that have been held in this House since August, 1914."

This man, who knows the problems of building an immense fleet of aeroplanes and sending them to the front in a hurry, spoke from a realization of what are to be our two principal tasks in preparing our aerial navy. The task has two main parts—getting the machines and getting the men. The speaker in the House of Commons indicated in a somewhat epigrammatic way that by sending her best battle-planes to America to serve for models and some of her best men to serve as instructors, England would be paving the way for the return of such aeroplanes and such aviators in the ratio of a thousand to one.

The United States will have the benefit of the best English and French experience in building battle-planes. A commission of 125 American experts is already in England studying methods and designs. A number of French aviators taken direct from the battle front have been in this country for some time acting in an advisory capacity. There is no reason to doubt that we will build as good machines as any that are built in Europe. In certain types, notably the small, very fast and somewhat unsafe machines used for attack and pursuit, we have never built anything that quite equals the Allies' machines. This is due partly to the fact that our manufacturers deliberately keep the factor of safety high, at a sacrifice of some speed and quickness of response.

Under the circumstances this is the soundest policy. An aviator can learn his trade in a machine making 110 miles an hour sufficiently well to give battle effectively in one that makes 130 miles. In the slower machine he is only about half as likely to be accidently killed, and each aviator represents a national asset worth some thousands of dollars, taking six or eight months of expert training to replace.

On the other hand, in the manufacture of certain types of machines we already equal, if we do not excel, any nation on earth. Our heavy bombing planes, our seaplanes and our training planes are recognized as equal to the best. There is no reason to doubt that we shall produce the machines for our air navy in sufficient quantity of the best types. The Aircraft Production Board, which planned first to construct only 3,500 aeroplanes the first year, now feels confident that we can produce many times that number. In the important matter of engines indications are not lacking that we shall develop a better type than either the English or the French. At the Bureau of Standards they are working on the perfection of an aeroplane engine to be known as the "All America," which will be standardized for large scale production. Naturally no details are to be given out concerning the performance of the model on which the standard is said to be based.

If the truth be told our chief rival in the construction of efficient engines and the best types of aeroplanes will probably be eventually neither England nor France, but Germany. It is the opinion of many American observers that from the beginning of the war Germany has had a slight but undeniable superiority in the type of her aircraft.

This superiority has been more than overcome by the equally undeniable superiority of the Allied personnel. If the Germans have had the machines the Allies have had the men, and that good men win even under a handicap is shown by the fact that it is the Allies who hold the upper hand in the air today. And this mention of personnel suggests the other half of our great task—selecting and training the men for our air fleet.

Some of the more enthusiastic supporters of the aeroplane program speak of 100,000 aeroplanes flying over Germany. Eventually we could come to that, but it is a long way off. It would mean at least 300,000 aeroplanes all in all, and our pending bill only calls for 42,000 engines. Moreover 100,000 machines are probably more than we need. Ten thousand aviators can turn the scale, according to many of the experts.

In this nation of 100,000,000 there are surely 10,000 men to be found for the work as good as any on earth. They will need some 40,000 machines, and the entire strength of the aerial branch of the military service will need not far from 100,000 men if we are to have an actual flying service of 10,000 strong. This is about two-thirds of the war strength of the Navy.

Officers are confident that the men needed will come forward eagerly. The flying game is one that appeals to the American temperament as it appeals to the English. It gives a man a chance to fight as a unit, to use his own nerve, judgment and daring, and very largely to direct his own campaign. It also holds out far more chance for individual distinction than any other branch of the service.

In fact, it is the policy of the British War Office to give out only the barest details of air fights without the names of those concerned, including the airmen themselves, that it is unfair to the other services, to the infantry and the artillery, that the aviators should reap all the personal glory while their comrades on the ground are exposed to equal if not greater risks. The airmen, however are very frequently decorated with the various medals and crosses given for distinguished service.

The United States is making excellent progress toward building up the personnel of its air service. It is probable that some 1,400 men will be graduated into active service by the beginning of September. After that time, of course, the output of aviators should increase from month to month. Some time ago it was decided to open technical training courses for aviation cadets in six of the leading American technical colleges. The Universities of California, Michigan, Illinois and Ohio, the Massachusetts Institute of Technolgy and Cornell University sent representatives to Canada's great aviation training camp, Camp Borden. American methods are modelled on the experience of Canada. These cadet courses are confined to theoretical and "ground" work. After two months those who qualify will be sent to aviation training grounds for training in the air. We shall probably have 24 such training grounds, erected at a cost of $1,000,000 each, in addition to four aviation grounds already existing, belonging to the Army and Navy, a duplicate American training ground in France.

GRANTSVILLE.

A Teachers Training Class has been organized in the Lutheran church and will meet each Monday evening at 7:15 o'clock. Rev. E. E. Oney, of Elk Lick, will have charge of the class. Any persons wishing to take up the study will be welcome at these meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Bender entertained on Thursday evening with a reception for the directors of the First State Bank, of which he is vice president, all of whom, together with their wives, enjoyed the occasion immensely. The guests included Dr. and Mrs. G. C. Keller, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Getty, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bender, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Bill, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Younkin, Mr. and Mrs. Simon S. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Engle, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Beachy. The only director absent was C. E. Ellithorp, ill health preventing him and his wife being present. Mrs. Bender's mother, Mrs. Conrad Gantt, and brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gantt, of Frostburg, were also present. Music helped make the evening pass pleasantly and a most delicious collation was served during the evening.

On Tuesday last a crowd of workmen gathered at the Lutheran church and proceeded to tear out the vestibule floor which was weak in places and put a cement floor in its stead. The work is very smooth and satisfactory and reflects much credit upon the volunteer workmen.

Little Mildred Bonig was made happy on July 6th by being given a party in honor of her eighth birthday. All sorts of good things to eat were in evidence and some very beautiful gifts. The small guests included Mary Miller, Esther Zehner, Viola Swauger, Leona Grady, Jane and Ella Bowen, Marjorie Bonig, Luther Miller, Clyde Bender and John Blocher.

The Frostburg mail is now in the capable hands of Walter Gantt, of Frostburg, who arrives here at about ten in the morning, leaving for Frostburg at 3:45 in the afternoon, instead of 2, as per the former schedule. The Salisbury mail is in charge of Simon Miller who leaves here by auto at 11 o'clock, returning at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Mail is also brought from Jennings to Grantsville directly now, instead of being sent around by the Jennings railroad as formerly.

A small crowd of ladies met for Red Cross work on the Victoria hotel porch Saturday afternoon, several garments being made.

Mr. C. S. Zeller has returned from a three weeks' visit at her home in Grove City, Pa.

Miss Bess Engle is home from a Kendall, N. Y., school.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Harbaugh and their mother from Pennsville, Pa., Mrs. J. S. Elliard from Connellsville, and John Price and children from Pittsburgh were motor guests to Grantsville, Sunday, spending the day with Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Diefenbach.

Mrs. A. C. Maust and friend from Salisbury spent Wednesday with Mrs. Fred Livengood.

Rev. and Mrs. Paul D. Yoder and Mr. Flanagan of Union Bridge, Md., were motor guests at the Broadwater farm, Thursday.

Misses Hazel Younkin and Maud Bevans, Mesdames C. B. Getty and Irene Hayes attended the Red Cross meeting at Salisbury on Thursday night.

Jacob Becket from the Cove was a guest of his daughter, Mrs. George Younkin, on Tuesday.

Miss Nelle Lee, of Mt. Lake Park, returned home after a few weeks' visit with the Misses Engle of "Englewood."

Mrs. Truman Frankhouser and son James, from Keyser, W. Va., are guests of Miss Gertrude Hone.

Miss Ruth Keller and her friend and schoolmate, Miss Mary Porter of Oakland, are attending the summer course of training at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

Mrs. Robert Himler and children, of Trafford, Pa., are guests of the former's sister, Mrs. Richard Younkin.

TO STANDARDIZE WAR X-RAYS

Problem a Complex One But Worked Out by Son of Rev. E. Manges.

The many friends of Rev. and Mrs. E. Manges, formerly of Oakland where the former served for twelve years as pastor of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church, will read with interest the following concerning their son, Dr. Willis F. Manges, of Philadelphia, Pa., which was clipped from a recent issue of the Philadelphia Press:

When Colonel T. H. Goodwin, the head of the Royal Army Medical Corps of Great Britain, was in this country with the Balfour Mission he was extravagant in his praise of the manner in which the X-ray outfits of the various base hospital units that had been organized up to that time were standardized and freed of unnecessary and superfluous equipment.

The British medical leader was told that the praise should go to a Philadelphian Dr. Willis F. Manges, of Fifteenth and Locust Streets, one of the greatest authorities of this subject in America.

The Government medical authorities evidently agreed with Colonel Goodwin for Professor Manges has received a lieutenant's commission in the medical corps and will go to France to give his great skill to the United States medical service in the war zone.

When this country entered the war, and the order was passed out to big hospitals to organize base hospital units for early service in France, the problem was presented of standardizing equipment so that one kind alone need be taken abroad and that everything would be interchangeable.

The War Department in Washington called upon the surgeon general's office in Washington for the name of the man best fitted to handle the rather difficult problem of passing upon the X-ray apparatus and determining what should constitue the outfit to be taken to France.

Surgeon General Gorgas sent back word that Dr. Manges, whose long years of experience and valuable research work had gained him country-wide fame was the man for the task. The Philadelphian was asked to assume the duty, and he did it quietly and without ostentation.

Unknown to even many of his closest friends he set about his task and within a remarkably short space of time had turned over to the Government the standardized list which has since been passed out to all the hospital units of the country.

Dr. Manges is not the man to talk about his own work, but many of his associates do. Dr. Ross V. Patterson, dean of the Jefferson Medical College, where Dr. Manges is the attending Roentgenologis, says of him: "He is at the head of his profession, and the Government's choice was but natural. He gave the country a remarkably fine outfit and he will undoubtedly advance high in the service.

Dr. Manges has been in the medical limelight on numerous occasions for discoveries he has made in the field of X-ray work and even in the field of radium activities. He has been considered as an expert on the subject of cancer treatment.

SHEEP KILLERS

Dogs Have Caused An Estimated Loss of $1000 This Year.

The past week has seen more destruction of sheep. Saturday morning a dog got into a flock of sheep owned by Joseph T. Glotfelty, and did more than a hundred dollars worth of damage. Several sheep were killed outright, and several more were so badly torn up that it was necessary for Mr. Glotfelty to shoot them, while the remainder of the flock was scattered through the woods. This terrible destruction took place on land owned by Mr. Glotfelty, and upon which he has repeatedly said he could quite easily pasture five hundred or more sheep, if it were not for dogs. Is it not time that the persons not raising sheep take more interest in the dog question and help make this great economical waste smaller?

Mr. Glotfelty is only one of the many losers in Garrett county this summer. The total loss so far this year is estimated at more than $1,000.

Wool is now seventy-five cents a pound; the dog is largely responsible for this price; if people continue to harbor sheep killing dogs, wool will go still higher. The United States department of Agriculture says:

"Sheep-killing dogs are not only recognized as the worst enemy of eastern flock masters at the present time, but are known to be the principal cause of so marked a decrease in the numbers of sheep kept on farms. The moral effect upon all persons who have seen sheep killed, injured or frightened by dogs is far more destructive to the industry than the actual damage sustained."

The unrestricted dog is the cause of the decrease in supplies of meat for food and wool for clothing, and a cause for the increase in the cost of living. The unrestricted dog is therefore a direct tax on every citizen, and is a destructive economic parasite.

Sheep are an asset to the community, adding to its wealth, and thus increasing its volume of trade.

The unrestricted dog has absolutely no value, but is in fact a liability and a menace, to be classed with hog cholera, tuberculosis, cut worm, boll weevil and blight.

Whoever allows his dog to run at large, especially at night, fails in his duty to his neighbor and the commuuntiy.

A. G. MIDDLETON, County Agent.

Estate Left to Methodists.

Methodists will be interested to learn that appraisement of the estate of Mrs. Virginia Haymond, widow of Sidney Haymond, of Quiet Dell, Harrison county, which was filed for record at Clarksburg, places its total valuation at $79,888. About half of it is in cash notes and bank stock. Mrs. Haymond left the entire estate to the West Virginia fund for disabled ministers, the board of foreign missions and the board of home missions of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Do You Believe In God? Then Outwardly Manifest It by Going to Church.

IT is not enough for one to say that he lives a righteous life and that he believes in a Supreme Being. He must give OUTWARD MANIFESTATION of that belief.

There is only one way that a man can give OUTWARD MANIFESTATION of his belief in and love of God, and that is by GOING TO CHURCH. The church is the home of God. He reigns there. On great feast days like Easter, Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's the churches are filled to overflowing. People GO TO CHURCH to honor God and thank him for his blessings. Don't wait for these feast days to GO TO CHURCH and then stay away from church for the remainder of the year. EVERY SUNDAY is a feast day of the church.

AS A RESULT OF THE COUNTRY WIDE GO TO CHURCH MOVEMENT THERE HAS BEEN A SPLENDID INCREASED ATTENDANCE IN THE CHURCHES. BUT THERE ARE MANY WHO HAVE BEEN DEAF TO THE CALL. IF YOU ARE ONE OF THESE, MAKE UP YOUR MIND TO GO TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY. TELL YOUR WIFE OF YOUR RESOLUTION, AND NOTE THE PLEASED LOOK ON HER FACE. TELL YOUR CHILDREN, AND IT WILL MAKE AN IMPRESSION ON THEM FOR LIFE. A PARENT CAN ILL AFFORD TO ASK HIS CHILDREN TO GO TO CHURCH AND REMAIN AWAY FROM DIVINE SERVICE HIMSELF.

Going to church DOESN'T REQUIRE ANY GREAT SACRIFICE. The services are at a seasonable hour. They are not long. You surely MEET THE RIGHT KIND OF PEOPLE there. The sermons invariably are INSTRUCTIVE AND UPLIFTING. Try going to church next Sunday. See if you don't feel better for it. It will help you to overcome the temptations of the world. You'll hesitate before you do a wrong act. Sin brings its punishment; righteousness its reward. If you want to earn the reward of righteousness and avoid the punishment of sin, be a regular church attendant.

START NEXT SUNDAY TO BE A CONSISTENT CHURCH-GOER.

KITZMILLER

July 12-13 and 14 were the three days that the Chautauqua was in our town. The first day the people were entertained by Cap's Orchestra. This was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Coppel and four talented young men. By changing instruments they gave a program as varied as interesting. Dr. D. W. Daniel spoke both afternoon and night. He brought to the platform a big message for humanity.

Second day came the Elaine Duncan Co. This consisted of three young ladies, whose program consisted of readings, impersonations, solos, duets, pianologues and duologues. These young ladies were followed by an address by Dr. Alfred W. Hutchins. His lectures were drawn from the rich varied experience of one who has touched life at all points, and who has the ability and power to make others feel and see what he has felt and seen.

On the third day the Gypsy Marionetts and Mr. Lloyd H. Taylor appeared. A very enjoyable evening was provided. Their costumes, personality, charms and artistic ability all contributed to make their performance a wonderful success.

We have had the Chautauqua now for several years and have found it an ideal form of entertainment. It comes but once a year and lasts only three days, but they are three days that are never forgotten.

Mrs. Hugh Campbell, of Hubbard, spent several days last week with Mrs. Charles Brown.

Miss Katherine Walker was a Piedmont visitor Wednesday.

Mr. Hardy, of Keyser, spent the week end with Mr. B. V. Inskeep.

Mr. Marsh Dean, accompanied by Mr. Walter Arnold, of Elk Garden, W. Va., spent Saturday in town visiting friends and attending Chautauqua.

Mrs. I. T. Murphy spent last Wednesday in Cumberland shopping.

Rev. Beard, the evangelist, will conduct services in the tent each evening this week. Meetings begin at seven-thirty o'clock.

Mr. Loyal Shircliff, of Bayard, W. Va., spent Saturday and Sunday visiting friends.

Sergeant Cooper, who is in charge of the recruiting office in Cumberland, spent three days in Kitzmiller last week. Five young men added their names as recruits for the Marine Corps. They are as follows, Frank Decker, K. Paugh, Eugene Walters, Charles Spiker, Henry LaRue. These young men left Monday morning going to Cumberland to join Sergeant Cooper.

Died—On Sunday afternoon, July 8, Edward, son of Walter and Flossie Keller, age 6 months.

Died—On Sunday, July 15, Orvis Borelli, son of Christian Borrelli, age 7 months.

BITTINGER.

You have heard of Molly Coddle, and perchance of Polly Hicks; and you'll soon see Johnny Waddle down the slopes of politics.

The first installment of political candidates, in the persons of Truman Casteel candidate for County Commissioner, George White, candidate for Sheriff, and George Giessman, candidate for County Treasurer, all of Oakland, were in this village last Saturday afternoon in the interests of their several ambitions.

Miss Frances E. Gerber, who is working to interest and aid the ladies of the county in various features of home life and home improvement, held a meeting in this village on Monday afternoon of last week, which was well attended considering the short notice given of her coming.

The funeral of the late James Bowser occurred on Wednesday afternoon of last week at his home, with appropriate services conducted by Prof. J. C. Beam, of Sailsbury Pa. Mr. Bowser was a life long resident of this section, and was well known in various parts of the county. The deceased is survived by a widow and four daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Stark left last Friday for Akron, Ohio, where they will spend several weeks with their daughter, Mrs. Henry M. Bittinger, of that city.

Work is progressing on the improvement of our main country road, under the skillful direction of Mr. Joseph Ash.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Naylor, of Oakland, made a business visit to this village last week.

Farmer's Basket Picnic.

A Farmer's Basket Picnic will be held at Shady Dell Grange Hall, on the farm of Mr. G. L. Ridder, one mile southwest of Mason school house, next Saturday, July 21st.

This gathering is being held under the auspices of County Agent, A. G. Middleton and Prof. Thos. B. Symons, director of Extension Service of the Maryland Agriculture College, and Mr. James Anthony, of Chestertown, Md., will be present and make addresses. A potato spraying demonstration will also be conducted by the county agent.

It is hoped that the farmers of that and other localities will take an interest in this meeting, which has for its purpose the advancement and furtherance of agricultural projects, and attend the picnic in force.

Birthday Party.

On last Monday evening, July 16, 1917, a delightful surprise party was given at the home of Mr and Mrs. Mahlon Schooley in honor of their daughter Nellie's birthday. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Paugh, and family, Mrs. C. L. Paugh and family, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Paugh, John Fitzwater, Harrison Wiley, George Trimble, Everett Casteel, R. B. Browning, J. R. Browning, Lee Roy Browning, Charles, Guy and Maude Browning, Jack Browning, Catherine Fredlock, Willie Dodge, Arthur Detrick, Harland Browning, Lucy and Bertie Speicher, Ernest, Charles and Robert Paugh, Mack Harvey, Mary and Elizabeth Felsinger, Porter Jordan, Harry Beckman, Mabel Cuppett, Revry and Ethel Beckman. Games were played until a late hour after which refreshments were served. All paying due respect to their kind host and hostess everyone returned to their respective homes to dream of the pleasant evening they had spent.

TWO GUESTS.

GORTNER

Mr. Emory Fike filled the appointment in the Union church Sunday morning. He preached an excellent sermon from Isa. 5: 2, his subject was, "God expecting but disappointed."

Mrs. Harry Bowman and children have returned to their home in Keyser, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Yoder, of Grantsville, spent several days recently at this place.

Quite a number from this place attended the camp meeting at Mt. Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Gortner and family spent Monday the guests of Obed Hamstead's near Eglon, W. Va.

Misses Cora Burkholder, Minnie Beachy, Elizabeth Slabaugh and Noah Yoder went fishing Friday, they marched home in the evening single file looking as tho there were still some fish in the pond that had not been caught.

Mr. Ed. Miller and son Clark, Mrs. Will Haming and son Sam, and Mr. Joel Slabaugh, of Springs, Pa., spent Sunday night with Mrs. Catherine Slabaugh.

A number from this place attended the funeral services of Mrs. Elizabeth Gnegy Monday.

Messrs. Dan, Ross and Roy Lichty, Miss Mary Lichty and Mrs. John Stutzman motored to Grantsville Sunday.

Miss Ruth Irwin has returned to her home in Pittsburgh, Pa., after a weeks visit here with her grandmother.

ALFALFA.

What makes the landscape look so fair;
What blossoms bright perfume the air;
What plant repays the farmer's toil,
And will enrich the wornout soil?
Alfalfa!

What is the crop that always pays,
Which may be cut each forty days,
Resisting drought, the frost and heat;
Whose roots reach down full twenty feet?
Alfalfa!

What grows in loam and clay and sand;
What lifts the mortgage off the land;
What crop is cut three times a year,
And of never a failure do you hear?
Alfalfa!

What makes the swine so healthy feel,
And never raise a hungry squeal;
The wholesome food that never fails
To put three curls into their tails?
Alfalfa!

What makes all other stock look nice,
And brings the highest market price;
What fills the milk pails, feeds the calf,
And makes the old cow almost laugh?
Alfalfa!

VOLUME 42. OAKLAND, MARYLAND THURSDAY, JULY 26, 1917. NUMBER 22

WORK DODGERS TO ENROLL AUG. 20

Those Living Easy on Incomes Must Register for Duty.

Governor Harrington Friday took the first step in actually putting the screws upon those who neither work nor fight.

He issued a proclamation requiring unemployed able-bodied men between the ages of 18 years and 50 years, with certain exceptions, to register on or after August 20, name, address, age and other needed information. The registration will be with the clerks of circuit courts in the counties and with the Clerk of the Superior Court in Baltimore city.

On and after August 20 the sheriffs will begin rounding up the dodgers. The Governor is determined that those who do not fight shall work. The loafers eat, and the Governor intends to do everything in his power to make them earn what they eat and not to be a burden upon the balace of the community. There will be a fine up to $50 for each idler who does not register, and if the fine is not pain he will go to jail and be registered for work afterward.

Any person who disobeys the Governor's assignment to work after the registration shall have been completed will be subject to a fine up to $500 or to imprisonment up to six months, with assignment to the work afterward.

A great deal of work is to be done before August 20 in preparing the machinery for the registration. The State Law Department has undertaken to handle much of the details, as well as the legal work, and Attorney-General Ritchie has assigned Philip B. Perlman, one of his assistants, to take charge. Mr. Perlman will prepare the registration cards, containing the information to be supplied by those who register, and will prepare the instructions to be sent to the State's Attorneys, justices of peace, clerks of courts, sheriffs and others charged with the enforcement of the law. Rules and regulations will be adopted governing the assignment of persons to work, and the labor field will be surveyed to determine the occupations to which assignments should be made.

The Compulsory Work law, under the authority of which the Governor is acting, provides that idlers may be put to work in occupations carried on by the State, Baltimore city or any of the counties, or any of their agencies; or in occupations carried on by private persons, firms or corporations, whether such occupations be agricultural, industrial or otherwise, provided that such occupations are essential to the welfare and protection of the people of the State and nation during the war.

The proclamation is, in part, as follows:

"Persons able to support themselves by reason of the ownership of property or income and those supported by others are included among those required to register.

"Persons falling within the following descriptions will not be required to register:

"1. Students and persons fitting themselves to engage in trade or industrial pursuits.

"2. Persons temporarily unemployed by reasons of differences with their employers.

"3. Persons engaged or employedin any seasonal business, trade or occupation carried on in Baltimore city or Allegany county.

"Rules and regulations will be prepared and published governing the assignment of persons of the description aforesaid to work, which will assure that all persons similarly circumstanced shall, as far as it is possible to do so, be treated alike.

"In due time, and from time to time, I will proclaim the occupations which I find to be essential for the protection and welfare of the people of this State and the United States, and which I find cannot be carried on as the protection and welfare of the people of this State and the United States require withott resort to said act."

FAIR DIRECTORS MEET

An Important Session Was Held Last Friday to Plan for Fair.

The directors of the Oakland Fair Association held a very enthusiastic meeting here last Friday, members of the board being present from all parts of the county.

Plans were drafted which have since taken definite shape to make Garrett county's big show this year the very greatest and best ever attempted. Prizes of over $600 00 will be offered for live stock of different kinds, and this should be an incentive for our stockmen to take an interest and prepare their animals for the exhibit.

A number of attractive amusements are contemplated, full information regarding which will be published later.

The grounds and buildings have been ordered repaired and a force of workmen are already busy with the work. The directors will hold another meeting on Aug. 11, at which time further plans now under way will be announced. Watch the county papers for live notes regarding the fair each week.

Red Cross Reciepts.

Mrs. Julius C. Renninger, treasurer of the local Red Cross Society, reports the receipt of the following sums since her report published in these columns last Thursday:

Mr. E. H. Ingle	$5.00
Mr. Clark DeBerry	2.00
Total	$7.00
Amount reported last week	75.82
Grand Total	$82.82

These contributions and those previously reported to go to the National Red Cross Fund.

THE DEATH RECORD.

JAMES BOWERS.

James Bowser, of Bittinger, died at his home on Monday, July 9th, after great suffering due to cancer of the stomach. He was a wealthy and highly esteemed farmer and is survived by his wife and four daughters—Misses Minnie, Della, Ruth and Oma Bowser. He also leaves one brother, Perry Bowser, living on the adjoining farm. He was 66 years, 8 months and 21 days of age. Funeral service was held at the home of the deceased, Rev. J. C. Beahm, of Elk Lick, officiating; interment was made in the family cemetery lot on the farm.

Presbyterians Hold Missionary Meeting.

The missionary conference of the Presbyterian church of West Virginia opened at Terra Alta with Mrs. H. G. Stoetzer, of Fairmont, presiding. The address of welcome was by the Rev. John A. Oldland. The conference will conclude Friday afternoon. Miss Nettie Herndon is the director of the chorus. Mrs. C. E. Trembly, Terra Alta, is chairman of the local committee and Mrs. J. C. Ely, Oakland, Md., the committee on arrangements.

Children's Day Services.

There will be a children's day service held in the grove near Steiding School House August 12th, beginning at 1:30 p. m. There will also be a program rendered in the evening at 8 p. m. Everybody will find a hearty welcome. 22-3t

DRAFTED, ENLISTS

Mark S. White Left Last Night For Columbus, Ohio.

When Mr. Mark S. White, who has occupied a responsible position in the Garrett National Bank for some years past, was made acquainted with the fact that he had been drafted into the army and that he would have to answer the call, made arrangements at once to enlist and accordingly went to Baltimore Monday night and applied for admission into one of the officers training camps which are to be opened for a second set of officers-in-the-making on August 27th. After submitting to a physical examination which was passed by him he was assigned to the medical corps and directed to report at Columbus, Ohio, where he will be stationed for the present, but hopes to be sent to the same point in the south where two other of Oakland's young men are located, they being Messrs. Tracy Curry and Harold M. Dawson.

Mr. White returned from Baltimore yesterday morning and left for Columbus last night.

Public Library Entertainment.

The musical entertainment to be given in the Maryland Theatre on next Friday evening, August 3rd, promises to be one of the very best ever given in Oakland and will be participated in by a large number of the young people and children of the town. The program will include many excellent features in addition to the musical numbers and as the proceeds are to be devoted to a most worthy cause, it is hoped the public will be liberal in its patronage.

The debut of Miss Littlebilt will be given in panorama by the children selected to take part. A spectacular presentation of "Dawn," in the dance of the fireflies will be one of the leading features, to be followed by an operetta entitled, "The Flower Nymphs' Surprise," presented by the young ladies and gentlemen, will be an attraction of merit.

The music will be especially fine and will consist of both instrumental and vocal selections.

A complete program for the entertainment will be printed in these columns next week.

RED CROSS BENEFIT

Will Be Given At The Empire Theatre Tonight.

There will be an attractive entertainment given at the Empire Theatre in Oakland on Thursday evening, July 26th, at eight o'clock for the benefit of the Oakland Red Cross Auxiliary, when one of the latest and best photoplays will be shown.

In addition an interesting program will be rendered and candy will be sold by pretty Red Cross nurses. Tickets for this entertainment on sale at Gonder's Pharmacy.

The patronage of the public generally is solicited for this worthy cause.

Canning Club Demonstrations.

Canning club demonstrations will be held at the following places upon the dates named:

Loch Lynn, July 26, 10:00; Accident, July 26, 2:30; Grantsville, July 27, 2:30; Bloomington, July 30, 2:00; Crellin, July 31, 2:30; Dodson, August 1, 1:00; Oakland, August 2, 9:30; Red House, August 2, 9:30; Hutton, August 3, 2:30.

GOVERNOR CALLS 145 GARRETT MEN

Clerk Tower Takes Issue With Governor In Effort To Keep Boys At Home.

On July 18th Governor Emerson C Harrington issued a proclamation directed to the Local Board of Exemption calling for one hundred and forty-five men from Garrett county to answer the call to the colors. The proclamation is printed herewith.

Mr. Tower, clerk of the Exemption board, has taken issue with the Governor relative to the number of men Garrett county is to furnish and has communicated with the Executive of the State. Mr. Tower has made a study of the rules and regulations as well as the law governing the draft and feels that his conclusions are well grounded and will make every effort to keep as many Garrett county boys at home as possible.

Mr. Tower bases his opinion upon the law as enacted and contends that this county has been called upon to furnish more men than the law contemplates; that instead of sending 145 men she should at the highest calculation be called upon for but 108. With an allowance and due credit for the boys who have entered the regular army not more than sixty men should be called.

The Governor's proclamation follows as well as the letter directed to him by Mr. Tower:

STATE OF MARYLAND
Annapolis, July 18, 1917.

To the Local Board for Garrett County.

By virtue of the authority vested in me by regulations prescribed by the President pursuant to an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to authorize the President to increase temporarily the Military Establishment of the United States," approved May 18, 1917, I, Emerson C. Harrington Governor of the State of Maryland acting for and by the direction of the President, do hereby, in accordance with said Act and regulations, notify the Local Board for Garrett County that the net quota to be furnished by said Local Board under a draft for the aggregate number of 7096 men, ordered by the President on July 12, 1917, by virtue of the authority vested in him by said Act of Congress is one hundred and forty five men.

Said Local Board will furnish the net quota so specified, as required by said Act of Congress and rules and regulations prescribed pursuant thereto.

EMERSON C. HARRINGTON.

Oakland, Md., July 24th, 1917.

To Emerson C. Harrington,
Governor of Maryland,
Annapolis, Maryland.

Local Board for the County of Garrett, State of Maryland, has received notice that Garrett County's quota is 145 men. This is too high and should be corrected. If her quota is apportioned according to the entire population of the State it should only be 108, and if apportioned according to the number of men between the ages of 21 years and 31 years, then it should only be 101.

Garrett county should also receive credit for the number of men she had in the Military Service of the United States as members of the National Guard on April first, 1917 as well as those who have since that date entered the Military Service either as members of the Regular Army or the National Guard.

E. Z. TOWER.

Epworth League Institute.

This body of representative men and women from the Baltimore Conference of the M. E. church, is now in session at Mountain Lake Park and will close on the 29th inst.

Homer J. Rodeheaver, Billy Sunday's choir leader, who was scheduled to be present and conduct the music, was unable to come at the last minute.

Dr. Rollin H. Walker, of Ohio Wesleyan Institute, is present and is conducting a complete course in Bible study. He is a wonderful man and does wonderful work along this line.

Rev. Lynn Harold Hough, D. D., of Garrett Bible Institute, formerly pastor of Mt. Vernon Place Church, Baltimore and beloved and revered by the Baltimore Conference and Methodism everywhere, will deliver the addresses on the two closing days of the Institute and conduct the Life Work Service.

The Secrets of the Hohenzollerns

STARTLING EXPOSURE OF INNER LIFE OF KAISER AND CROWN PRINCE AS TOLD BY COUNT ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX

EDITORIAL NOTE. — William LeQueux, who here chronicles for his friend, Count Ernst von Heltzendorff, the latter's revelations of the inner life of the imperial German court, has long been recognized throughout Europe as the possessor of its innermost secrets.

The English "Who's Who" says of him: "He has intimate knowledge of the secret service of Continental countries and is considered by the government (of Great Britain) an authority on such matters." Another authority says: "Few people have been more closely associated with or know more of the astounding inner machinery of Germany than he."

LeQueux probably has more sources of secret information at his command than any contemporary in civil life, and for the last six years the British Government has made valuable use of his vast store of secret information through a specially organized department with which LeQueux works as a voluntary assistant.

Count von Heltzendorff became an intimate of LeQueux several years prior to the outbreak of the war; he has been living in retirement in France since August, 1914, and it was there that LeQueux received from the crown prince's late personal adjutant permission to make public these revelations of the inner life of the Hohenzollerns—that the democracies of the world might come to know the real, but heretofore hidden, personalities of the two dominant members of the autocracy they are now arrayed against.

British Girl Balks The Kaiser's Plans

"HOW completely we have put to sleep these very dear cousins of ours, the British!" His imperial highness, the crown prince made this remark to me as he sat in the corner of a first-class compartment of an express that had ten minutes before left Paddington station for the West of England.

The crown prince, though not generally known, frequently visited England and Scotland incognito, and we were upon one of those flying visits on that bright summer's morning as the express tore through the delightful English scenery of the Thames valley, with the first stopping place at Plymouth, our destination.

The real reason for the visit of my young hot-headed imperial master was concealed from me.

Four days before he had dashed into my room at the Marmor palace at Potsdam. He had been with the emperor in Berlin all the morning, and had motored back with all speed. Something had occurred, but what it was I failed to discern. He carried some papers in the packet of his military tunic. From their color I saw that they were secret reports—those documents prepared solely for the eyes of the kaiser and those of his oldest son.

He took a big linen-lined envelope and, placing the papers in it, carefully sealed it in wax.

"We are going to London, Heltzendorff. Put that in your dispatch box. I may want it when we are in England."

"To London—when?" I asked, surprised at the suddenness of our journey, because I knew that we were due at Weimar in two days' time.

"We leave at six o'clock this evening," was the crown prince's reply. "Koehler has ordered the salon to be attached to the Hook of Holland train. Hardt has already left Berlin to engage rooms for us at the Ritz, in London."

"And the suite?" I asked, for it was one of my duties to arrange who traveled with his imperial highness.

"Oh! We'll leave Eckhardt at home," he said, for he always hated the surveillance of the commissioner of secret police. "We shall only want Schuler, my valet, and Knof."

We never traveled anywhere without Knof, the chauffeur, who was an impudent, arrogant young man, intensely disliked by everyone.

So it was that the four of us duly landed at Harwich and traveled to London, our identity unknown to the jostling crowd of tourists returning from their annual holiday on the continent.

At the Ritz, too, "Willie" was not recognized, because all photographs of him show him in an elegant uniform. In a tweed suit, or in evening clothes, he presents an unhealthy, weedy, and somewhat insignificant figure.

His imperial highness had been on the previous day to Charlton House terrace to a luncheon given by the ambassador's wife, but to which nobody was invited but the embassy staff.

That same evening an imperial courier arrived from Berlin and called at the Ritz, where, on being shown into the crown prince's sitting room, he handed his highness a sealed letter from his wife.

"Willie," on reading it, became very grave. Then, striking a match, he lit it, and held it until it was consumed. There was a second letter—which I saw from the emperor. This he also read, and then gave vent to an expression of impatience. For a few minutes he reflected, and it was then he announced that we must go to Plymouth next day.

On arrival there we went to the Royal hotel, where the crown prince registered as Mr. Richter, engaging a private suite of rooms for himself and his secretary, myself. For three days we remained there, taking motor runs to Dartmoor, and also down into Cornwall, until on the morning of the fourth day the crown prince said:

"I shall probably have a visitor this morning about eleven o'clock—a young lady named King. Tell them at the bureau to send her up to my sitting room."

At the time appointed the lady came. I received her in the lobby of the self-contained flat, and found her to be about twenty-four, well-dressed, fair-haired and extremely good-looking.

Miss King, I learned, was an English girl who some years previously had gone to America with her people, and by the heavy traveling coat and close-fitting hat she wore I concluded that she had just come off one of the incoming liners.

One thing which struck me as I looked at her was the brooch she wore. It was a natural butterfly of a rare tropical variety, with bright golden wings, the delicate sheen of which was protected by small plates of crystal—one of the most charming ornaments I had ever seen.

As I ushered her in she greeted the crown prince as "Mr. Richter," being apparently entirely unaware of his real identity. I concluded that she was somebody whom his highness had met in Germany, and to whom he had been introduced under his assumed name.

"Ah! Miss King!" he exclaimed pleasantly in his excellent English, shaking hands with her. "Your boat should have been in yesterday. I fear you encountered bad weather—eh?"

"Yes, rather," replied the girl. "But it did not trouble me much. We had almost constant gales ever since we left New York," she laughed brightly. She appeared to be quite a charming little person.

"Heltzendorff, would you please bring me that sealed packet from your dispatch box?" he asked suddenly, turning to me.

The sealed packet! I had forgotten, all about it ever since he had handed it to me at the door of the Marmor palace. I knew that it contained some secret reports prepared for the eye of the emperor. The latter had no doubt seen them, for the crown prince had brought them with him from Berlin.

As ordered, I took the packet into the room where his highness sat with his fair visitor, and then I retired and closed the door.

"I Can't; It Would Be Dishonest!"

Hotel doors are never very heavy, as a rule, therefore, I was able to hear conversation, but unfortunately few words were distinct. The interview had lasted nearly half an hour. Finding that I could hear nothing, I contented myself in reading the paper and holding myself in readiness should "Mr. Richter" want me.

Of a sudden I heard his highness' voice raised in anger, that shrill, high-pitched note which is peculiar both to the emperor and to his son when they are unusually annoyed.

"But I tell you, Miss King, there is no other way," I heard him shout. "It can be done quite easily, and nobody can possibly know."

"Never!" cried the girl. "What would people think of me?"

"You wish to save your brother," he said. "Very well, I have shown you how you can effect this. And I will help you if you agree to the terms—if you will find out what I want to know."

"I can't!" cried the girl in evident distress. "I really can't! It would be dishonest—criminal!"

"Bah! my dear girl, you are looking at the affair from far too high a standpoint," replied the man she knew as Richter. "It is a mere matter of business. You ask me to assist you to save your brother, and I have simply stated my terms. Surely you would not think that I would travel from Berlin here to Plymouth in order to meet you if I were not ready and eager to help you?"

"I must ask my father. I can speak to him in confidence."

"Your father!" cried Mr. Richter. "By no means. Why, you must not breathe a single word to him. This affair is a strict secret between us. Please understand that." Then, after a pause: "Your brother is, I quite admit, in direst peril, and you alone can save him. Now, what is your decision?"

The girl's reply was in a tone too low for me to overhear. Its tenor, however, was quickly apparent from the crown prince's words:

"You refuse! Very well, then, I cannot assist you. I regret, Miss King, that you have your journey to England for nothing."

"But won't you help me, Mr. Richter?" cried the girl appealingly.

"No," was his answer. "I will, however, give you opportunity to reconsider your decision. You are, no doubt, going to London. So am I. You will meet me in the hall of the Carlton hotel at seven o'clock on Thursday evening, and we will dine together."

"But I can't—I really can't do as you wish. You surely will not compel me to—to commit a crime!"

The Crown Prince's Threat.

"Hush!" he cried. "I have shown you these papers, and you know my instructions. Remember that your father must know nothing. Nobody must suspect, or you will find yourself in equal peril with your brother."

"You—you are cruel!" sobbed the girl.

"No, no," he said cheerfully. "Don't cry, please. Think it all over, Miss King, and meet me in London on Thursday night."

After listening to the appointment, I discreetly withdrew into the corridor on pretense of summoning a waiter, and when I returned the pretty English girl was taking leave of "Mr. Richter."

Her blue eyes betrayed traces of emotion, and she was, I saw, very pale, her bearing quite unlike her attitude when she had entered there.

"Well, good-by, Miss King," said his highness, grasping her hand. "It was really awfully good of you to call. We shall meet again very soon—eh? Good-by."

Then, turning to me, he asked me to conduct her out.

On returning to the crown prince, I found him in a decidedly savage mood. He was pacing the floor impatiently, muttering angrily to himself, for it was apparent that some plan of his was being thwarted by the girl's refusal to conform to his wishes and obtain certain information he was seeking.

The crown prince, when in a foreign country, was never idle. His energy was such that he was ever on the move, with eyes and ears always open to learn whatever he could. Hence it was at two o'clock that afternoon Knof brought round a big gray open car, and in it I sat beside the emperor's son while we were driven around the defenses of Plymouth, just as on previous occasions we had inspected those of Portsmouth and of Dover.

On the following Thursday evening we had returned to London, and the crown prince, without telling me where he was going, left the Ritz hotel, merely explaining that he might not be back till midnight. It was on that occasion, my dear LeQueux, you will remember, that I dined with you at the Devonshire club, and we afterward spent a pleasant evening together at the Empire.

I merely told you that his highness was out at dinner with a friend. You were, naturally, inquisitive, but I did not satisfy your curiosity. Secrecy was then my duty.

A Sample of German Preparedness.

On returning to the hotel I found the crown prince arranging with Knof a motor run along the Surrey hills on the following day. He had a large map spread before him—a German military map, the curious marks upon which would have no doubt astonished any war office official. The map indicated certain spots which had been secretly prepared by Germany in view of the projected invasion.

To those spots we motored on the following day. His imperial highness, at the instigation of the emperor, actually made a tour of inspection of those cunningly concealed points of vantage which the imperial general staff had, with their marvelous forethought and bold enterprise, already prepared right beneath the very nose of the sleeping British lion.

From the crown prince's jaunty manner and good spirits I felt assured that by the subtle persuasive powers he possessed towards women he had brought the mysterious Miss King into line with his own plans—whatever they might be.

We lunched at the Burford Bridge hotel, that pretty, old-fashioned house beneath Box hill, not far from Dorking.

After our meal in the long public room, we strolled into the grounds for a smoke.

"Well, Heltzendorff," he said presently, "we will return to the continent tomorrow. Our visit has not been altogether abortive. We will remain a few days in Ostend, before we return to Potsdam."

Next afternoon we had taken up our quarters at a small but very select hotel on the Digue at Ostend, a place called the "Beau Sejour." It was patronized by old-fashioned folk, and "Herr Richter" was well known there. There may have been some who suspected that Richter was not the visitor's real name, but they were few, and it always surprised me how well the crown prince succeeded in preserving his incognito—though, of course, the authorities knew of the imperial visit.

The English Girl Again.

The following day, about three o'clock, while the crown prince was carelessly going through some letters brought by couriers from Potsdam, a waiter came to me with a message that a Miss King desired to see Mr. Richter.

In surprise I received her, welcoming her to Ostend. From the neat dress of the pretty English girl I concluded that she had just crossed from Dover, and she seemed most anxious to see his highness. I noted that she still wore the beautiful golden butterfly.

When I entered his room to announce her the crown prince's brow knit, and his thin lips compressed.

"H'm! More trouble for us, Heltzendorff, I suppose! Very well, show her in."

The fair visitor was in the room for a long time—indeed, for over an hour. Their voices were raised, and now and then, curiously enough, I received the impression that, whatever might have been the argument, the pretty girl had gained her own point, for when she came out she smiled at me in triumph, and walked straight forth and down the stairs.

The crown prince threw himself into a big armchair in undisguised dissatisfaction. Towards me he never wore a mask, though, like his father, he invariably did so in the presence of strangers.

"Those accursed women!" he cried. "Ah, Heltzendorff, when a woman is in love she will defy even satan himself! And yet they are fools, these women, for they are in ignorance of the irresistible power of our imperial house. The enemies of the Hohenzollerns are as a cloud of gnats on a summer's night. The dew comes, and they are no more. It is a pity. Has not one of our greatest German philosophers written: 'It is no use breathing against the wind?'"

"True," I said. "But, surely, it is a nuisance to be followed and worried by that little English girl!"

"Worried! Yes. You are quite right, my dear Heltzendorff. But I do not mind worry, if it is in the interests of Prussia, and of our house of Hohenzollern. I admit the girl, though distinctly pretty, is a most irresponsible person. She does not appeal to me, but I am compelled to humor her, because I have a certain object in view."

I could not go further, or I might have betrayed the knowledge I had gained by eavesdropping.

"I was surprised that she should turn up here, in Ostend," I said.

"I had written to her. I expected her."

"She does not know your real rank or station?"

"No. To her I am merely Herr Emil Richter, whom she first met away in the country. She was a tourist, and I was Captain Emil Richter of the Prussian Guards. We met while you were away on a holiday at Vienna."

I was anxious to learn something about Miss King's brother, but "Willie" was generally discreet, and at that moment unusually so. One fact was plain, however, that some secret report presented to the emperor had been shown to her. Why? I wondered if his highness had been successful in coercing her into acting as he desired.

Certainly the girl's attitude as she had left the hotel went to show that, in the contest, she had won by her woman's keen wit and foresight.

A fortnight afterwards we were back again at Potsdam.

A Surprise Package for "Willie."

About three months passed. The crown prince had accompanied the emperor to shoot on the Glatzer Gebirge, that wild mountainous district beyond Breslau. For a week we had been staying at a great, high-up prisonlike schloss, the ancestral home of Prince Ludwig Lichtenau, in the Wolfelsgrund.

The emperor and his suite had left, and our host had been suddenly called to Berlin by telegram, his daughter having been ill. Therefore, the crown prince and we of the suite had remained for some further sport.

On the day after the emperor's departure I had spent the afternoon in a small paneled room which overlooked a deep mountain gorge, and which had been given up to me for work. I was busy with correspondence when the courier from Potsdam entered and gave me the battered leather pouch containing the crown prince's letters. Having unlocked it with my key, I found among the correspondence a small square packet addressed to his imperial highness, and marked "private."

"Now, fearing bombs or attempts by other means upon his son's life, the emperor had commanded me always to open packets addressed to him. This one, however, being marked "private," and, moreover, the inscription being in a feminine hand, I decided to await his highness' return.

When at last he came in, wet and muddy after a long day's sport, I showed him the packet. With a careless air he said: "Oh, open it, Heltzendorff. Open all packets, whether marked private or not."

"I obeyed, and to my surprise found within the paper a small leather-covered jewel case, in which, reposing upon a bed of dark blue velvet, was the beautiful ornament which I had admired at the throat of the fair-haired British girl—the golden butterfly.

I handed it to his highness just as he was taking a cigarette from the box on a side table.

The sight of it electrified him. He held his breath, standing for a few seconds staring at it as though he were gazing upon some specter. His countenance was as white as paper.

"When did that arrive?" he managed to ask, in a hoarse voice, which showed how completely sight of it had upset him.

"This afternoon. It was in the courier's pouch from Potsdam."

"If the Truth Came Out."

He seemed highly nervous, and at the same time extremely puzzled. Receipt of that unique and beautiful brooch was, I saw, some sign, but of its real significance I remained in entire ignorance.

That it had a serious meaning I quickly realized, for within half an hour the crown prince and myself were in the train on our 200-mile journey back to Berlin.

On arrival his imperial highness drove straight to the Berlin Schloss, and there had a long interview with the emperor. At last I was called into the familiar pale-green room, the kaiser's private cabinet, and at once saw that something untoward had occurred.

The emperor's face was dark and thoughtful. The crown prince, in his badly creased uniform betraying a long journey—so unlike his usual spick-and-span appearance, stood nervously by as the kaiser threw himself into his writing chair with a deep grunt and distinctly evil grace.

"I suppose it must be done," he growled to his son. "Did I not foresee that the girl would constitute a serious menace? When she was in Germany she might easily have been arrested upon some charge and her mouth closed. Bah! our political police service grows worse and worse. We will have it entirely reorganized. The director, Laubach, is far too sentimental, far too chicken-hearted."

As he spoke he took up his pen and commenced to write rapidly, drawing a deep breath as his quill scratched upon the paper.

"You realize," he exclaimed angrily to his son, taking no notice of my presence there, because I was part and parcel of the great machinery of the court, "you realize what this order means? It is a blow struck against our cause—struck by a mere slip of a girl. Think, if the truth came out! Why, all our propaganda in the United States and Britain would be nullified in a single day, and the 'good relations' we are now extending on every hand throughout the world in order to mislead our enemies would be exposed in all their true meaning. We cannot afford that. It would be far cheaper to pay twenty million marks—the annual cost of the whole propaganda in America—than to allow the truth to be known."

Suddenly the crown prince's face brightened, as though he had had some inspiration.

"The truth will not be known, I promise you," he said, with a strange grin. I knew that expression. It meant that he had devised some fresh plan. "The girl is defiant today, but she will not remain so long. I will take your order, but I may not have occasion to put it in force."

"Ah! You have perhaps devised something—eh? I hope so," said the emperor. "You are usually ingenious in a crisis. Good! Here is the order; act just as you think fit."

"I was summoned, your majesty," I said, in order to remind him of my presence there.

"Ah! Yes. You know this Miss King, do you not?"

"I received her in Plymouth," was my reply.

"Ah! then you will recognize her. Probably your services may be very urgently required within the next few hours. You may go," and his majesty curtly dismissed me.

I waited in the corridor until his imperial highness came forth. When he did so he looked flushed and seemed agitated. There had, I knew, occurred a violent scene between father and son, for to me it seemed as though "Willie" had again fallen beneath the influence of a pretty face.

He drove me in a big Mercedes over to Potsdam where I had a quantity of military documents awaiting attention, and after a change of clothes, I tackled them.

Yet my mind kept constantly reverting to the mystery surrounding the golden butterfly.

A Note From Miss King.

After dinner that night I returned to my workroom, when, upon my blotting-pad, I found a note addressed to me in the crown prince's sprawling hand.

Opening it, I found that he had scribbled this message:

"I have left. Tell Eckhardt not to trouble. Come alone, and meet me tomorrow night at the Palast hotel, in Hamburg. I shall call at seven o'clock and ask for Herr Richter. I shall also use that name. Tell nobody of my journey, not even the crown princess—Wilhelm, Kronprinz."

I read the note through a second time, and then burned it.

Next day I arrived at the Palast hotel, facing the Binnenalster, in Hamburg, giving my name as Herr Richter.

At seven o'clock I awaited his highness. Eight o'clock came—nine—ten—even eleven—midnight, but, though I sat in the private room I had engaged, no visitor arrived.

Just after twelve, however, a waiter brought up a note addressed to Herr Richter.

Believing it to be meant for me, I opened it. To my great surprise, I found that it was from the mysterious Miss King, and evidently intended for the crown prince. It read:

"My brother was released from the Altona prison this evening—I presume, owing to your intervention—and we are now both safely on our way across to Harwich. You have evidently discovered at last that I am not the helpless girl you believed me to be. When your German police arrested my brother Walter in Bremen as a spy of Britain I think you will admit that they acted very injudiciously, in face of all that my brother and myself know today. At Plymouth you demanded, as the price of Walter's liberty, that I should become attached to your secret service in America and betray the man who adopted me and brought me up as his own daughter. But you never dreamed the extent of my knowledge of your country's intrigues; you did not know that, through my brother and the man who adopted me as his daughter, I know the full extent of your subtle propaganda. You were, I admit, extremely clever, Herr Richter, and I confess that I was quite charmed when you sent me, as souvenir, that golden butterfly which I returned to you as a mark of my refusal and defiance of the conditions you imposed upon me for the release of my brother from the sentence of fifteen years in a fortress. This time, Herr Richter, a woman wins. Further, I warn you that if you attempt any reprisal my brother will at once expose Germany's machinations abroad. He has, I assure you, many good friends, both in Britain and America. Therefore if you desire silence you will make no effort to trace me further. Adieu!"

Twelve hours later I handed that letter to the crown prince in Potsdam. Where he had been in the meantime I did not know. He read it through; then he crushed it in his hands and tossed it into the fire.

A LETTER FROM THE CROWN PRINCE'S PERSONAL ADJUTANT TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX, POSSESSOR OF THE SECRETS OF EUROPE.

Veneux Nadon,
par Moret-sur-Loing,
Seine-et-Marne,
February 10th, 1917.

My dear LeQueux:

I have just finished reading the proofs of your articles describing my life as an official at the imperial court at Potsdam, and the two or three small errors you made I have duly corrected.

The gross scandals and wily intrigues which I have related to you were many of them known to yourself, for, as the intimate friend of Luisa, the ex-crown princess of Saxony, you were, before the war, closely associated with many of those at court whose names appear in these articles.

The revelations which I have made, and which you have recorded here, are but a tithe of the disclosures which I could make, and if the world desires more, I shall be pleased to furnish you with other and even more startling details, which you may also put into print.

My service as personal adjutant to the German crown prince is, happily, at an end, and now, with the treachery of Germany against civilization glaringly revealed, I feel, in my retirement, no compunction in exposing all I know concerning the secrets of the kaiser and his son.

With most cordial greetings from

Your sincere friend,

(Signed) ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF.

Navy Older Than Government.

The United States navy has the distinction of being somewhat older than the government itself, for nine months before the actual Declaration of Independence congress authorized the construction of two "national" cruisers and appointed a committee to purchase vessels to form the nucleus of a fleet. Within three months of its appointment this committee got together 14 armed vessels and appointed a personnel of officers, among whom was the famous old sea dog, Paul Jones. During the war of the revolution the infant navy captured as many as 800 prizes, but suffered so heavily that by the time peace was declared it had almost ceased to exist. A new start on a more ambitious scale was made in 1794.

THE DRAFT.

With the calmness with which sanity confronts the inevitable, the country has gone through the ordeal of the draft, and today nearly 10,000,000 American young men know whether they have been selected by chance to take an active part in the war for peace and democracy, or thev are exempted for a time from the impending duty.

For those whose numbers were drawn comes now another trial. Some of them will not be taken for the army, because they are physically unfit for service, or because the country needs them in some other sphere—in important labor, or as supporters and protectors of the dependent.

In justice to those who have not claimed exemption and who are physically fit, and therefore are sure to be sworn into the service of the United States, in justice also to those who really ought to be exempted, it should be seen to that no one who ought to serve is released from his duty because of friendship or pull. Someone must take the place of such a shirker; it may be someone who really ought not to be taken. There are few real Americans who would let other men go in their places—unless the spirit of the republic has suffered a shameful change.

Now that the draft has been held, the war comes home to us more vividly than ever. We know some of those whose numbers have been called. They are our friends and neighbors, mayhap our own sons or near relatives. No matter how light-heartedly they appear to take the summons, no matter how kiddingly we congratulate them, we know that behind the laughter and the light words sits a spirit that looks bodingly into the future, and would, if it could, leap ahead to the end of all this trouble and know the worst at once. For the most serious part of out task is now face to face with us; and though we feel that it is necessary, and on that account we would not avoid it, we cannot help wishing that it were over and done, crowned with success. Only the greatest of issues is worth the effort and the sacrifice that the people of America have been called on to make, and we can be glad that we fight for what America has always stood for while she has been a nation—justice to all peoples, and peace founded thereon.

This Lady Has Right Conception.

Under the heading, "Good Solid Sense," the Mifflinburg Telegraph prints the following letter, which voices the sentiments of many women of the country, including this immediate section:

"Editor Telegraph:

"As a housewife and mother, who believes not only in the conservation of our food supply, but in the conservation of our boys and girls, our homes and citizenship, I feel like protesting against being asked by any representative of our government to register for the saving of food, when this same Government sanctions the waste of one hundred million bushels of grain used in making alcoholic liquors.

"Can anything be more illogical, more foolish, more absurd, more shocking, not only to the moral, but to the economic sense, than for our government to employ its bureau of experts and spend millions of dollars to insure good wholesome food for its citizens and to conserve the surplus of food, then permit the use of this vast quantity of grain for that which the Supreme Court of our nation declares to be the most prolific source of misery, pauperism and crime?

"We want to be patriotic, and mean to be economical, but might not the moral effect be better if women en-masse would protest against such gross inconsistency.

"I'll sign to save by the spoonful, as American women should do.

But, Uncle, you waste by the bushel, so I will sign, after you.

Teaching Cripples . . .
By Frederick J. Haskin.

The first American institution for training crippled soldiers has just been established in New York City. A private philanthropist of New York, Jeremiah Milbank, started it with a check for $50,000, and the War Council of the Red Cross is to carry it on. Already all sorts of working equipment has been installed, from typewriters and sewing machines to carpenters' tools and broom straw, so that when our first detachment of crippled soldiers and sailors is released from the base hospitals a new future will be awaiting them. In the meantime the school will be used for industrial cripples, of whom there is a startling number.

This is the first war in which the state or society has recognized its full duty toward the derelicts of battle. Before the state felt that it had discharged all responsibility when it paid a man a small pension for his disability, but today that does not suffice. A pension of $25 a month does not compensate a man for the loss of a remunerative occupation or even an unremunerative one, if it happened to be congenial.

There was a British soldier sent home shortly after the beginning of the war with his right arm gone. During the entire period of his convalescence in the hospital this man had, as Huckleberry Finn would say, a well developed case of the "fantods." The nurses racked their brains for material to cheer him up, but he remained consistently gloomy. Finally one of them, succeeded in gaining his confidence. "It ain't that I mind bein' wounded," he told her, "but I ain't no more good for clock-makin.' It kinda sounds silly to say it, but I did love to make those little clocks."

The French were the first to undertake the business of re-educating their crippled soldiers to fill up the gaps in industry. The French are always thinking up new schemes to take care of their indigent and poor. Moreover, some say it was the French who first introduced technical and commercial education, although the Germans quickly grabbed the idea as well as the credit of it. The first institution for war cripples was opened in Lyons, France, in 1914. The buildings were contributed by the town and the funds raised by popular subscription, while the Minister of War agreed to pay about 70 cents a day for each soldier.

This was 32 cents less than the government paid to men who stayed in their own homes, the deduction being made on the grounds that the school was in the nature of a hospital. The men did not see the government line of reasoning, however, and there was considerable grumbling, which the mayor of Lyons dispelled by allowing each man 30 cents from the funds of the institution as long as it was possible to spare it. Besides this, the men enjoyed the profits from the sale of the goods they manufactured.

France tried several plans before it finally adopted the technical boarding school as the most satisfactory one. First, the government paid the crippled soldier a certain allowance while he lived in his own home and learned a trade by becoming an apprentice in some workshop in his neighborhood. This did not turn out well at all. He had the constant example of men working without a handicap before him, and he soon became discouraged. The second plan provided that the man should also live in his own home, but should attend a vocational school, which would teach him a trade and also serve him a substantial meal in the middle of the day, so that he would not have to waste time in going home.

This plan was better than the first, but not so efficient as the third, where the man lived entirely in the institution and was under the constant supervision of his instructors. The instructors have not only to inculcate a trade but a new psychology in the cripple.

Now there are nearly 20 such schools in France, and almost as many in Great Britain. A man must be cured of disease and his wounds healed in a hospital before he is accepted as a candidate for one of them, and he must also be unfit for further military duty. Furthermore, a man must be physically strong enough to take his place in the industrial army.

After a thorough physical examination, the soldier cripple is conducted over the establishment and permitted to make his choice of occupation. The school courses, with a few exceptions, include bookkeeping, shorthand and typewriting, book-binding, paper-stitching, woodwork and drawing, shoe-making, broom-making, gardening, crude forms of machinery, wood-carving, tailoring and toy-making. The last has been an occupation much encouraged in France recently, since before the war 90 per cent of French toys were supplied by the Germans and the people are determined not to return to German toys when the war is over.

When a soldier has mastered a new vocation—and it is astonishing how soon they learn to get along without the usual number of legs, arms and hands—the school undertakes to place him in the industrial world. Thus hundreds of efficient workers have been returned to industry. Then the schools encountered a new problem. What was to be done about employers' liability? Would the private corporations insure against accident men who were already handicapped by a disability? The employers insisted that they did not have to, but finally agreed, and so everything has been going along smoothly.

No greater reconstructive work has been accomplished in Europe than this re-education of disabled soldiers. The pity of it is that such a practice has not long been in vogue in peace times. Every year hundreds of men are crippled and maimed in the industrial army, often to become dependents upon their relatives or the state, or to become beggars. Legless and armless mendicants may be found in great numbers on the streets of every large city. In Canada now there are more industrial cripples than war cripples, yet the state recognizes no responsibility towards them whatsoever.

In this country it is the same. Occasionally a city or a state or an individual establishes an institution for crippled children or adults, but that is all. Perhaps Iowa offers the most progressive example in the state care of cripples. Connected with the University Hospital of Iowa is a special section devoted to the treatment and care of crippled and diseased children.

It is to be hoped that the re-education of soldier cripples will lead to the re-education of industrial cripples when the war is over. Already this seems to be the idea in the establishment of the new Red Cross institution in New York. Every effort will be made to make the school permanent. An investigation is now being made to determine the various advantages and difficulties of returning disabled men to industry. In a few years the New York school will doubtless be only one of many such institutions.

Maryland Council of Defense.

The undersigned, at the request of General Carl R. Gray, Chairman of the Maryland Council of Defense, have consented to serve as a Committee to advise and co-operate generally with the canners of Maryland in their efforts to secure the labor needed to conserve this season's crop of easily perishable vegetables.

The Maryland Council of Defense and the members of this Committee recognize, and desire that the general public also recognize, that this effort is in behalf of the country and the State. Conditions are as follows:

1. The farmer has loyally met the urgent appeal of the Government to increase his acreage and grow greater crops.

2. The excess crop this year, particularly of tomatoes, of which Maryland normally supplies about half of the country's total demand, is very heavy. To handle it, the canners have increased their equipment and supplies of cans and cases necessary.

3. The connecting link between the farmers and canners is labor. If the labor is not found, the farmers wil suffer great economic loss, owing to a glutted market; the canners will be able to pack only a relatively small proportion of the crops, and the rest go to waste. A condition will result seriously affecting, not only the national food supply, but the prosperity of farmers, merchants and bankers of the State.

4. The canners' ordinary supply of labor will not begin to meet their expected requirements.

This Committee, having fully satisfied itself of the conditions as cited above, strongly endorses the appeal being made by the canners for assistance from any and every organization that can help in this specific work. Some 15,000 additional men, women and children above the age of 16, are called for. Labor is now being recruited particularly through the following organizations:

Boys Working Reserve—F. W. Holden in charge, 1604 Munsey Building.

Women's Section, Maryland Council of Defense, and The National League for Women's Service, 522 Park Avenue.

The response to the call for volunteers through these agencies, while apparently generous, is as yet almost negligible compared with the thousands of helpers needed.

This Committee believes that such service is of intensely patriotic and practical value to the country, and it not only advises but urges all citizens of this Commonwealth, particularly the women and youths who are not already employed, to make the necessary sacrifice, and serve country and state by volunteering as helpers in this canning factory work.

Painfully Hurt.

Mr. Harvey Gortner, an employee of the Evans Garage in Oakland, was painfully hurt Tuesday afternoon as he was riding a motorcycle and collided with a "4d" standing along the curb in front of the Shaffer & Bush store on Second street. Mr. Gortner suffered a number of lacerations about his head, the "4d" escaped any serious punishment, but the motorcycle was badly bent and had to be hauled in for repairs.

Resolutions Of Respect.

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst by death Brother Reuben Gnegy of Oak Lodge No. 8, I. O. O. F.

WHEREAS, Notwithstanding our loss, we bow in humble submission to the all wise Father; we also deem it fit and proper that we manifest our fraternal sympathy to the bereaved ones in this their hour of sorrow; therefore be it

Resolved, By the brethren of Oak Lodge, No. 8, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, that we extend to our bereaved brother's loved ones, our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of affliction and grief and commend them to him who said, "Come unto me all ye who are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest," and be it further

Resolved, That in the death of Brother Reuben Gnegy, we have sustained a loss of a brother, whose fellowship it was a pleasure to know; that we bear willing testimony to his many virtues and pray that our Heavenly Father may bring speedy relief to the burdened hearts of the sorrowing family, and inspire them with consolation that all things work together for the good of them that love the Lord.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to each of the county papers for publication, spread on the minutes of our lodge, and a copy sent to his parents.

Respectfully submitted in F. L. & T.,

County Treasurer J. W. Kimmell, of Oakland, paid this district his regular annual visit last week.

A number of persons from this village attended the special jubilee service at the Lutheran church of Jennings last Sunday evening.

Oscar Wiley returned from Lonaconing last Saturday evening, after spending several days in that city as the guest of Miss Lillian Cutter.

Some farmers have begun hay harvesting, but the weather is very unfavorable for that work.

Messrs. C. H. Wiley and Columbus Oester spent last Sunday in the Meadow Mountain settlement, treating the ladies of that section to the pleasures of motoring by moonlight.

Mrs. T. B. Wiley spent part of last week visiting her mother and old home at Grantsville.

Tait to Issue Call.

It was stated yesterday morning that Chairman Galen L. Tait of the Republican State Central Committee will issue a call before the end of the week for a meeting of that body to be held probably about August 1. It will authorize Mr. Tait to agree with the chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee upon a date for holding the state primaries and also authorize him to fix a date for holding the state conventions after the primaries.

While a first-class fight between the Goldsborough-Stone and the Weller-France factions seems to be impending, it is hardly probable that serious difference will crop out at the meeting of the State Central Committee, though the fur may begin to fly at any moment. The reason it is not expected to begin to fly at the State Central Committee meeting is that both sides are still playing for William P. Jackson and hostilities are not apt to begin until he has definitely lined up with one side or the other. Incidentally, it looks now as if Weller has him.

Obituary.

John A. Cooper, was born June 1st, 1888, and departed this life July 2nd, 1917. His sad taking away was a shock to all who knew him. He will be greatly missed in his home as well as by his friends. We often wonder why God takes those away we love so well. He was a kind brother.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The Epworth League Institute open-ek their session of ten days on the 20th with about 250 delegates from Washington and Baltimore. There will be preaching Sunday morning and evening by prominent preachers.

The Summer School of Missions will be the next meeting, continueing until August 6th.

Miss Constance Marie Flowers who has been visiting her mother here for two weeks will return to her home in Baltimore Sunday.

Mrs. Annan and daughter, who are occupying a cottage here for the summer, returned Tuesday from a visit to friends in Virginia.

The reports from Mrs. John Stephenson, who was taken to the Methodist General Hospital, Desmoines, Iowa, are to the effect that she is improving rapidly.

Mr. E. W. Winchell, who has the contract for the erection of the concrete bridge on the state road here, started to work this week with a good force of men.

Mr. W. H. Mallette is repairing the Felty store building, which he purchased and will have a fine place of business in a few days.

Mr. John Butler, an old soldier, is critically ill, with slight hopes of his recovery.

Mr. Herbert Leighton spent part of last week in Washington.

Mountain Lake Park has good air, good water and a small supply of natural gas left. We hope to be able to keep the good air and water.

Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock a Red Cross lecture will be given in the old auditorium by one of the Red Cross officials from Washington, D. C. It will be one of the greatest meetings of the season.

Sunday morning 11 o'clock the preacher will be one of the most renowned preachers of this country—a man whose fame is known from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Do not miss the service of next Sabbath. Tell your neighbors about it. It will be the treat of a life time.

By an amendment to the election law made at the 1916 Session of the Legislature those who arrive at the age of twenty-one years prior to the primary election will be given an opportunity to have their names entered upon the registration books when the officials for that purpose will be in session at the places for holding the election one day prior thereto.

The Republican office has been glad to serve those of the young men who were drafted into the army with information relative to their numbers and the position they occupy in the draft list. Saturday more than two hundred telephone calls were answered and at least that many personal calls were made at the office by those affected. Monday the work lightened up to some extent, but we were kept busy giving out information and answering enquiries.

The lack of gas with which to drive the motors in The Republican office during the past two weeks or more has seriously handicaped the work of the mechanical department and has made it almost impossible to turn out work promised for delivery within a reasonable time. Unless it is possible to get the newspaper forms on press by 11 o'clock in the morning the delay in completing the presswork is serious as the gas usually goes off at one o'clock with about half the edition unprinted which must then wait until 5 o'clock or after.

On pages two and seven of The Republican today is printed the list of those who are subject to draft in the order in which their numbers were drawn in the big lottery held in the Capitol building in Washington on last Friday and until nearly daylight Saturday. The list of names as well as the numbers attached thereto are as correct as it is possible for them to be made when it is considered that the official or master list of the draft numbers have as yet not been furnished the local board or the newspapers. If errors have been made in compiling the list in the order in which they were drawn they are comparatively few. Work in composing these more than a thousand and half names and numbers was begun in The Republican office Saturday afternoon. No work was done on the Sabbath and at noon on Tuesday sheets with all the names printed were posted at the office of publication, the Garrett National and First National banks and at the Oakland postoffice. In addition copies were mailed to each postmaster in the county. The task in the absence of machines to do the composing, was Herculean but was accomplished in a comparatively short time.

Appointed Health Officer.

Dr. John D. Darby was appointed and commissioned health officer for Garrett county on last Friday vice Dr. N. I. Broadwater, resigned.

Some Rats.

Some soldiers home on leave from the front were discussing the different things they had seen while in France, and among them were the number and size of the rats they had been troubled with. Said one boy: "Talk about rats! Why, I've seen some as big as sucking-pigs."

"That's nowt," spoke up another. "One night in my billet I woke up, and there was one of them trying my coat on."—London Tit-Bits.

Considerate.

"Have you a calendar for 1914?" asked the gentleman.

"I don't know, sir," replied the salesperson. "We might have such a thing among the odds and ends in the basement. But if you wish to make a gift to someone, surely a calendar for 1917—"

"This is for a lady, who is—er—a bit sensitive about her age, you see. And I thought—well, it would be more delicate, in a manner of speaking."—Judge.

A Test Required.

"Johnny, it was very wrong for you and the boy next door to fight."

"We couldn't help it, father."

"Could you not have settled your differences by a peaceful discussion of the matter, calling in the assistance of unprejudiced opinion, if need be?"

"No, father. He was sure he could whip me, and I was sure I could whip him, and there was only one way to find out."

"There's a Reason"

TO DESTROY PESTS

Common Pocket Gophers Cause Great Loss to Crops.

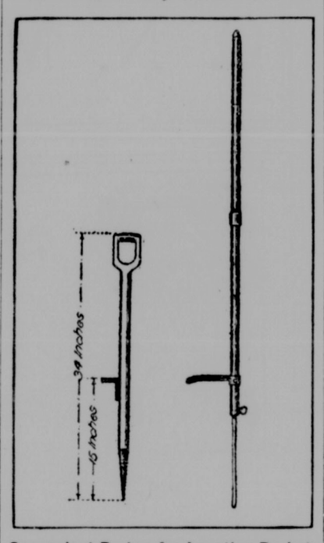
WORK INJURY IN MANY WAYS

Rodents Eat Growing Grain, Cause Loss of Hay in Digging Burrows, Ruin Gardens and Damage Trees in Orchards.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Pouched rats, commonly called pocket gophers, are among the most serious of rodent pests in most of the states west of the Mississippi river. They occur also in parts of Georgia, Alabama and Florida, in the greater part of Illinois, and in southern Wisconsin.

Pocket gophers do harm in many ways. They eat growing grain and cover much of it with soil. They cause loss of hay in digging burrows, by throwing up mounds which prevent close mowing. These mounds also injure much machinery. Their burrows admit surface water and aid it to wash out deep gullies on sloping lands. By piercing dams and embankments the tunnels cause costly breaks. The animals ruin gardens and injure field crops. Besides all this they kill trees in orchards and forest plantings by gnawing off the roots.



Convenient Probes for Locating Pocket-Gopher Runs.

Two practical methods of killing pocket gophers are always possible—trapping and poisoning. The first method is slow, but very effective on small areas or where but few pocket gophers are present; the other is the better plan on large fields and for cooperative work on adjacent farms.

While the ordinary steel trap may be used successfully for pocket gophers, much better results can be obtained with the special traps for these animals commonly on the market. In irrigated districts, where water is available, flooding the land will drive out the animals, and they may be killed by men and dogs. Fumigation of the burrows with carbon bisulphide or with sulphur smoke, while often recommended as a means of destroying pocket gophers, has been found extremely uncertain and costly.

Poison for Pocket Gophers.

To poison pocket gophers, cut sweet potatoes or parsnips into pieces whose largest diameter is less than an inch. Wash and drain four quarters of cut baits. Place in a metal pan, and from a pepperbox slowly sift over the dampened baits one-eighth ounce of powdered strychnine (alkaloid) and one-tenth as much saccharine (well shaken together or ground together in a mortar), stirring is to distribute the poison evenly.

Tunnels of pocket gophers, which are usually from three to eight inches below the surface of the ground, may be readily located by means of a probe. Any blacksmith can make one by affixing a metal point to a shovel or spade handle and attaching an iron foot rest about 15 or 16 inches above the point. By forcing this instrument into the soil near the pocket-gopher workings or a foot or two back of fresh mounds, one can feed the open tunnel as the point breaks into it. The hole may be enlarged and its sides made firm by pressing the soil laterally with the probe. A bait or two should be dropped into the tunnel and the probe hole covered. Care should be taken to place the baits in the main tunnels rather than in the short laterals leading to mounds. Different forms of probes have been used successfully by the biological survey in its demonstration work. Two of the better kinds are illustrated.

BEST PRACTICE OF MILKING

Where Cows Are Not Stripped Loss of One-Half Pound or More May Occur at Each Time.

Milk each cow dry at every milking. If the cows are not milked dry it not only dries them up, but it is found that a loss of milk from such a practice may amount to one-half a pound or more at each milking. By stripping a herd of ten cows after the regular milkers, the owner may often obtain five pounds of milk at a single milking.

TEST SEED FOR GERMINATION

Proper Rate of Seeding Can Be Determined by Use of Wet Paper and Two Dinner Plates.

Most of the commoner seeds, including the cereals, clover and alfalfa, may be tested for germination easily and quickly on the farm. Take a fair sample of the seed to be planted and count 100 seeds. Fold a newspaper so there will be a dozen thicknesses, six by twelve inches; soak it in water, squeeze out so it will not drip and lay on a dinner plate. Place the seeds on the paper so they will not touch each other and fold the wet paper over the top to cover them. Turn another dinner plate over this and keep at room temperature for four or five days. Examine the seeds and count out those which have germinated, and if there are still seeds which have neither germinated nor decayed, wet the paper again if necessary and set away for two or three days more, and again count those which have germinated. This shows the proportion of live seed and the proper rate of seeding is determined accordingly.

FEED COWS BEFORE CALVING

This Preparation Has Much to Do With Amount of Milk and Butterfat Cow Produces.

The proper time to begin feeding a dairy cow is six or eight weeks before calving, and practical dairymen agree that this preparation has more to do with the amount of milk and butterfat which a cow produces during the lactation period than does the feeding during any other period.

For cows calving during the summer or early fall most dairymen like to have a small pasture away from the herd, but with an abundance of grass, and, in addition, they like to feed a suitable grain mixture. Corn silage, with clover or alfalfa hay and a limited grain ration of three parts ground oats, two parts of bran and one part of oil meal is especially good for cows calving during winter or early spring. After calving the cows should be brought slowly up to full feed and thereby steadily to a higher production.

KILL GREEN CABBAGE WORMS

Excellent Plan to Let Children Catch White Butterflies—Also Spray With Paris Green.

Give children a few cents to make nets of mosquito bar and catch the white butterflies flitting over your cabbage and cauliflower fields, since the female moths deposit the eggs from which the cabbage work comes. Children might well be paid, also, for picking off the green worms before they have done much injury.

Spraying with paris green is quite commonly practiced, and cabbage will stand a strong application. A market gardener of our acquaintance uses a spray as strong as five pounds of paris green in a 50-gallon barrel of water. Cabbage may be sprayed up to within a week or so of being gathered, when necessary, without any damage whatever, or any danger.

FARMER SHOULD KEEP LAMBS

Urgent Message From Department of Agriculture to Save Every Breeding Animal Possible.

Save every ewe lamb possible for breeding, is the urgent message the department of agriculture is sending to sheep owners. Market for slaughter only those being absolutely worthless for breeding stock. There is a strong demand among farmers for breeding stock, and owners of ewe lambs should have no trouble finding a breeding market for them through county agents or the state agricultural colleges. Sheep specialists of the department believe that, although prices for breeding stock now are high, those who start production of wool and mutton on a moderate scale will have no regret purchasing breeding stock at present figures.

CONTROL APPLE LEAF-SEWER

Insects, If Not Checked, May Seriously Affect Foliage—Use Arsenate of Lead Spray.

The apple leaf-sewer, sometimes termed the apple leaf-folder, is readily controlled by the use of a spray of two pounds arsenate of lead to 50 gallons of water. In older orchards spraying with arsenicals for the codling moth will also protect the trees from the leaf-sewer.

These insects, if not controlled, may seriously affect the foliage, as the larva after folding one leaf and exhausting its food supply passes on to other leaves. One larva may damage several leaves in a season.

PLAN FOR PRESERVING EGGS

Water Glass Is Recommended as Best Means—Carefully Remove All Impurities From Water.

One of the most successful methods yet devised for preserving eggs is by the use of water glass (soluble sodium silicate). When eggs are to be kept for a period of eight or nine months, the formula recommended is one part water glass to nine parts of water. If eggs are be kept only a short time, a one-to-fifteen solution will prove satisfactory. The water used should be boiled or distilled to remove all impurities, and cooled before making up the mixture.

Progressive Boston.

Boston has tried successfully the experiment of having open-air moving pictures which is in itself an advance in conserving public health. But Boston went still further, and put on exhibition in public parks films which were lessons in health and hygiene, by showing the evils of insanitary surroundings and the contrasts which suggested remedies.

He was seized, carried into exile, and after returning to Rome was imprisoned and died from ill treatment.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. SELLERS, Acting Director of the Sunday School Course in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR JULY 29

GOD'S GRACIOUS INVITATION.

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 55:1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near.—Isa. 55:6.

The Bible is throughout a forward looking book. No matter how dark the light, it looks forward to the dawn of a new and better day. Whenever written, the prophet looks forward toward the end of the Babylonian exile. Isaiah died about 142 years before that event. That scene is laid in Babylonia. Isaiah prophesied in Jerusalem.

I. The Invitation, (vv. 1-8) In order to understand the fullness and blessedness of this invitation, we should read in its connection chapters 53 and 54. In chapter 53 we have a prophecy and vision of the Messiah, making his atonement for sins, "wounded for our transgressions." Again we have in this connection a picture of the Messiah as our leader and Savior. In chapter 55 we have the invitation and joyous welcome to the beautiful city which he is establishing for us.

(1) Who Is Invited? The word "Ho" is perhaps an abbreviation of the word "Hold," used to excite attention. This invitation is extended to every one: (a) the "thirsty," to those who are needy; (b) the poor and the rich; those "without money," and the supply is abundant, even as the water. Every one is invited without limitation or distinction. The greatness of a man's spirit is measured by the numbers of his desires and thirsts, by their qualities and by his capacities or the intensity of his thirst. Those invited were to have "wine," a luxury, and "milk," a staple necessity, without money and without price. The currency of the kingdom of Heaven is grace (v. 1).

(2) Who Will Come? (v. 3). Only those who are listening and who are attentive. Many fail of eternal life because they do not pay attention to the claims of religion. "Come unto me," (Matt. 11:28). We go to God for salvation and help, and we find life. Life is more than mere existence. It is the natural, harmonious, joyous activity of every part of our being. The result of coming is, "your soul shall live," and the surety of it is, "an everlasting covenant." Literally, an agreement with promises which can never be broken, namely, "the sure mercies of David." (See II Sam. 12:29; I Cor. 17:7-27; Ps. 89:1-4; also Luke 20:41, 44). We are bought but we did not pay the price. The mercies of David are the antitype of our Savior; the mercy of grace. True satisfaction is in its right order. (See vv. 2, 3). Christ is a faithful witness, the exalted one, (v. 5) to this covenant.

(3) When to Come (v. 6). While he may be found, and while he is near, implying a time when he may not be found and a time when he will not be near. All of God's promises are conditional.

(4) The Way to Come (v. 7). Forsake open sin, turn from unrighteous thought, turn to the Lord and receive his "multiplied pardon." Man is everywhere depicted in the Scriptures as wandering away from the true God and there is no salvation if we insist on continuing in sin.

II. The Transformation (vv. 8-13). God's promises have back of them all the power of the universe and are as certain as the process of the seasons. In working out his transformation in the character of man, we are to think his thoughts after him. We see and know only very little of this spirit, but God sees, knows and controls the universe, which is at his command. (I Cor. 10:13; Phil. 4:19). We are to enter into his ways, and his ways are as the heavens, higher than those of the earth. Having entered into his ways we are to bring his fruits (see John 15). If the Divine seed (v. 11) is implanted within us, then we may expect to see the fruits of the kingdom of God, which are born of the spirit. (Gal. 5:22-26). This transformation involves service, for we are to have a mission, "go out to all the earth," being led by the Messiah and thus receive "joy and peace." As sure as "the rain cometh down and the snow from heaven and returneth not but watereth the earth," so is the seed of the Word in the hands of the sower, to become bread to the eater. As we go forth we have his promise (v. 11) that, "it shall not return void but shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."

As a result the "thorns" (evil) shall be displaced by "fig trees" (good). God's word bears fruit in implanted lives. (John 6:33; James 1:18; I Peter 1:23). God calls this word, which is spoken of by the prophet, "My word." What the prophet says, God says. What an inspired man says, God inspires him to say. God's promise will be consummated in redeeming society, as well as redeeming creation (vv. 12,13; Ch. 35:10; 49:9,10; 51:11; Jer. 31:12-14; Isa. 35:1,2). The language about the mountains and hills breaking forth into singing, is interpreted in Psalms 65:11,13.

DOG FANCIERS FACING RUIN

Dealers in England See Disaster in High Taxes Placed on Animals to Conserve Food Supply.

Dog fanciers in England, especially the women, say that the new dog taxes are going to kill the business they have been carefully building up for years. They do not object to the suggested increase on old licenses, but they fear the big tax on new dogs is going to frighten away all their customers.

There are many British women with small incomes living in the country who have invested most of their money in dogs as a business. They were willing to mark time till the end of the war, looking forward to a revival in their business afterward. Trade is of course slack just now, but with no money coming in at all they will be unable to retain their kennels.

One fancier spoke bitterly of the sensational stories told in certain quarters about pampered dogs and the impossible amount of food they were accused of eating.

Live and Learn.

In Precinct 3, Muncie, the registrar asked of a youth: "Do you claim exemption and, if so, on what grounds?"

"I have a wife and child, and see no way in which I could support them in the army," was the reply, which was noted, and the youth left.

A few minutes later the young man came rushing back, all out of breath, waving his card: "Hey, change this card!" he shouted. "I've just been home, and find I now have two children instead of one."—Indianapolis News.

If all of our prayers were answered there would not be much left for the other fellow.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Take Away The Stone.

As it was in the days of Noah with those who helped build the ark, so shall it be in the end of the world with those who are in sympathy with Christianity, yet are neither possessors nor professors of it. They shall be lost. Those who helped build the ark labored faithfully and well but they were lost. There are many thus engaged today who will meet the same fate. Many are faithful and regular supporters of the gospel yet have none of its joys in their hearts. They are giving up their means and the Lord is using it to advance His Kingdom. If you were to erect a building it would be necessary to put up scaffolding for that purpose, but when the building is completed the scaffolding is torn away and lost sight of, while the structure remains complete and beautiful. We think not of the scaffolding, we admire only the building. So the Kingdom of Christ is built up and composed of his true children. They are parts of one great whole and remain a perfect and beautiful structure in Christ, the admiration of angels and to the glory of God, while those who were only nominal Christians; and those who were merely moral and strictly so; and those who simply gave up their means are used by the Lord as the scaffolding in erecting the beautiful structure of his own Kingdom but when the building is complete they are lost. Is it the Lord's fault that they are? Surely not for Jesus says to all such, as he did to Jerusalem when he wept over it, "How often would I, but ye would not."

"Woe unto them who are at ease in Zion.
Delay not, delay not the hour is at hand,
The earth shall dissolve and the heavens shall fade;
The dead small and great in the judgment shall stand;
What power then, o sinner shall lend thee its aid?"

Here is a message for thee, unconverted one, hasten to look on the face of Jesus. Only trust Him. Fly to Him for succor and as doves to their windows.

Why remain as an adversary to God. You are not for God, you have not given yourself to His service, then you are against Him. The Lord has many arrows in His quiver any of which is effectual in making war on his enemies. Yet He withholds wrath and deals in mercy. Do not reject Him but believe and receive Him and be saved.

If however you continue in carnal security, if you, professor of religion, are at ease in Zion, then sudden destruction may overtake you suddenly. Then when the hour of death comes you are unprepared to step out into the darkness and gloom of a Christless eternity, feeling as a dying man said to the great Dr. Henry "the day when I should have worked is gone; now darkness settles upon me and I am lost, lost, lost.

Perhaps some of my readers are almost Christians. That is not enough. Almost a son is a bastard. Almost hot is lukewarm and God speweth such out of his mouth. Almost a Chrisian is like Micah of old, who thought he was religious enough because he had a priest in his house. Or it is like those Ephramites who could not say Shibboleth, but Sibboleth. Ananias bought part and left part of the proceeds of selling his possessions, yet he was almost a Christian. Almost a Christian is like the barren fig tree which Christ cursed because of its deception pretensions. It is like the Virgins who carried lamps without oil, or the son who when told to go work in the vineyard answered I go, but went not.

Almost persuaded harvest is past,
Almost persuaded, doom comes at last!
Almost can not avail,
Almost is but to fail!
Sad, Sad, that bitter wail;
Almost, but lost!

May the Christian keep in mind that it is the part of wisdom to watch and be on our guard. Let us be careful to distinguish ourselves in our daily walk and conversation from unbelievers, that this may not urge our inconsistencies as an excuse for neglect of duty. Be ye faithful and you shall obtain the crown of life.

Noah had his ark of refuge from the flood. Lot his Zoar to which to flee from the fire that destroyed the cities of the plain. The believers at Jerusalem had their refuge across the Jordan, so you, when the final conflagation shall come, will have a heaven of rest, eternal in the heavens.

"Ne'er think the victory won,
Nor lay thine armor down;
Thine arduous work will not be done,
Till thou obtain the crown."

Let us be sure we are in the ark—even in Christ and we are safe against all the floods of the universe.

ALFALFA GROWING PROVES A SUCCESS

County Agents Urge a Well Prepared Seed Bed.

LIMING IS NECESSARY

The Soil Should Be Inoculated And Well Fertilized For the Best Results.

College Park, July 12.—In view of the many successful demonstrations in growing alfalfa conducted by Maryland farmers in co-operation with their county demonstration agents, there will be a considerable increase in the acreage seeded this year. That it is most important to give careful attention to details in seeding alfalfa has been repeatedly proven and in a circular issued by the Maryland Agricultural Extension Service, W. B. Kemp, specialist in farm crops, brings the attention of alfalfa growers to a number of important facts. Mr. Kemp says:

"Alfalfa requires much more complete drainage than do other farm crops. Land inclined to be wet and springy in winter and early spring, although dry enough during the growing season to produce good crops of corn, wheat, oats and grass, is not drained well enough for alfalfa. On such land alfalfa is sure to be killed-out sooner or later by heaving due to the frequent freezing and thawing so common some seasons.

"Liming for alfalfa is absolutely necessary on practically all Maryland soils; even in the natural lime stone sections. It makes little or no difference what kind of lime is used if the proper amount of each is applied. It is a question of cost and ease of handling rather than the effect upon the alfalfa.

"The amount of lime to use under average conditions is one ton per acre of caustic lime; i. e., burnt stone or lump lime, ground lime or burnt oyster shells. Hydrated lime should be used at the rate of 2600 to 2700 pounds and ground lime stone or ground oyster shells should be applied at the rate of 3600 pounds to 2 tons per acre.

"The best time to apply lime is the season before sowing the alfalfa. If, however, this is not convenient or is impracticable, it may be applied just before, or even after seeding, with the assurance of good results and no injury."

TRANSFERRING BEES.

College Park, July 12.—Valuable suggestions are offered to Maryland beekeepers in a circular by G. C. Cale, of the Extension Service. Mr. Cale says in part:

"Transferring may be accomplished in several ways, but the following is suggested as the easiest:

A frame hive provided with one or two frames of worker comb or foundation is placed on the stand of the colony to be transferred, and the latter colony set to one side and turned upside down. A box large enough to invert over this colony is then secured and the bees are drummed up into it by constantly beating on the sides of the hive with sticks. When most of the bees have gathered in the box they may be shaken on a cloth placed in front of the new hive and started running in by gently smoking them. The queen must be with the bees if the colony is to establish itself.

"Now the combs of worker brood (not the drone brood), in the old box may be cut out, fitted and tied with raffia or string into empty frames and given to the bees in the new hive. Any remaining space should be filled with frames of drawn worker comb or full sheets of foundation. The remaining wax in the old hive may be melted up and the hive itself disposed of.

RURAL MINISTERS' CONFERENCE.

College Park, July 12.—The bulletin of the Maryland State College of Agriculture, announcing the Rural Ministers' Country Life Conference and School, July 30th to August 10th, prepared by Louis Ortmayer, Secretary, has just been issued. Mr. Ortmayer says: "The opportunity of the rural church is here. Never in the past has the country needed the steadying influence of a true Gospel as at the present time. Never before in the rural communities has the need of a moral dynamic, such as the virile religion alone can give, been so necessary. We are facing a tremendous task. Are we, the churches, thoroughly prepared for such a time? When Dwight L. Moody faced an extremely difficult task for the day he took extra time in the morning for mental and spiritual preparation. Is it not fitting and proper that we, the men of the country churches, take a few days this fall for a more thorough preparation in meeting the responsibilities that are ours?

"The Country Life School and Conference at Maryland State College offers such an opportunity. The dates for the School are July 30th to August 7th, inclusive. The dates for the Conference are August 8th, 9th and 10th. Ministers of all denominations are invited to attend one or both of these gatherings. The leadership will be the best the nation affords. The expense is nominal. For further particulars address, The Secretary, Country Life Conference, Maryland State College of Agriculture, College Park.

VOLUME 42. OAKLAND, MARYLAND THURSDAY, AUGUST 2, 1917. NUMBER 23

SUNDAY MISHAPS ON STATE ROAD

Occupants of Two Cars Have Miraculous Escape.

Both cars were completely demolished although the occupants escaped injury when a car owned and driven by Foster Friend, of Friendsville, crashed into the car of J. E. Bishop, of Cumberland, Sunday night about one mile east of Accident. Mr. Bishop and his family were returning to Cumberland from Davis, W. Va., when the accident happened. They remained at the hotel at Accident Sunday night and continued their journey home in another car Monday morning.

Mr. Bishop had encountered some tire trouble shortly after leaving Accident Sunday night. He left his car standing along the road with the lights burning, it is said, and ten passengers in the car while he returned to the garage at Accident for repairs. Shortly after he left the car driven by Friend rounded the curve and dashed headlong into Mr. Bishop's car.

The force of the impact tore both front wheels from Mr. Friend's car and it turned crossways of the road. The brake on the car of Mr. Bishop was released by the collision and it started backward down the mountain side. By presence of mind Mrs. Bishop, who was seated in the front seat of the car, applied the brake stopping the car just in time to prevent it from going over a high embankment.

Mr. Charles Speicher, of Accident, while driving a Ford car on the macadamized road between Oakland and Accident had a head-on collision with Mr. Schraum, of Piedmont, who was driving a Maxwell. The occupants were thrown out but were not hurt seriously, Mrs. Schraum sustaining a scratch here and there.

Near Hoyes a Maxwell side-swiped a Chevrolet breaking the front wheels of both cars. No one was seriously injured.

A Practice That Should Be Stopped.

The practice of throwing stones should be stopped. If there is a city ordinance respecting this habit it should be rigidly enforced. Some time ago the funeral car of D. E. Bolden was coming down Liberty street, on a return trip, when a group of youngsters threw stones at the machine. One of the missiles entered the side door and went flying back through the body of the hearse. If the stone had struck the glass windows or the windshield, the extent of the disaster can not be imagined. This same experience happened to one of our prominent citizens just a few days ago.

While driving along the State highway on Monday night with a party of friends, Rev. W. M. Shultz, pastor of the local Methodist, church was struck by a flying missile, presumably thrown by some boy, because of its position when found in the car it could not have been picked up by the wheels of the car. Outside of being severly stunned and a little scared Mr. Shultz suffered little from his experience. But when we think of what might have been we feel as though we ought to give vent to our feelings of righteous indignation and punish the evil doer.

Not only is stone throwing a menace to the safety of pedestrians and motorists, but ball playing on the streets as well. We understand there is an ordinance prohibiting ball playing on the streets and why should it not be enforced? Perhaps after some child or even grown person is seriously hurt or some valuable property destroyed it will be. But who will pay for the loss and suffering? Let us practice safety first as well as preach it.

Drowned Near Cumberland.

The body of John A. Bopp, a prominent farmer and floriculturalist of near Cumberland, was found in a pool of water on his farm yesterday by his son. The conclusion reached by the authorities in Cumberland was that Mr. Bopp had suffered a heart attack and falling face downward in the water, which was about two feet deep, was drowned. He was a brother of Mrs. Henry Weber of Oakland.

WHY NOT SPEICHER?

Mr. Charles A. Moon, of No. 8, Presents His Views.

To the Editor of The Republican:

I wish to ask the space for a few lines in your columns.

Having noticed a few articles in the past issues regarding the prospective next Senatorial candidate Hon. H. J. Speicher, permit me to say that the man in question has merited all that has been given him in these articles and more.

Just at this time I think the voters of Garrett county could do nothing better or wiser than to heartily insist upon him serving us again at Annapolis. His past record and services have eminently qualified him for giving us even better legislation for the future.

These are days of hard testing for a public official and we might feel ourselves highly complimented in obtaining him as our representative. Mr. Speicher wishes to retire but I think that he will sacrifice his own will and preference in this matter to gratify his friends once again.

Mr. Speicher's trustworthiness gives one no disposition to be ill at ease regarding any of the fundamentals bearing upon the citizens of Garrett county. He has proven himself a master in logic and argumentation; so much so that few dare raise opposition on the floor to his requests. His influence in the Senate will mean much in several ways.

First, we will have a man of unequaled experience; second a man capable of doing things of account and a man in whom his colleagues repose utmost confidence. He is a man that summonses the support of all by his personality and shows people he has the ability to finish a worthy fight as well as to start it.

Now is the time for action. This is no child's play. This is no time for guess work or experimentation in the life of our commonwealth. It would be hazardous for us not to select him in this grave crisis, as our representative, for he is in touch with the affairs of both county and state, and will not use his strength in a useless way; thereby making himself a jest and his work a fit of confusion for the entire Senate chamber.

We can feel confident that he will give his energy to things worth while and, that his accomplishments will swell our hearts with pride because of the achievements wrought by our elector. How can the citizens of Garrett county in the face of the past record and his intention to secure the best measures conducive to the best health of the commonwealth in general refuse him support? Nay verily, it is unthinkable to Garrett county's sons.

CHAS. A. MOON.

Ryans Glade, July 26th, 1917.

Marriage No Test of War Liability

Marriage will in itself be no test of a man's availability for military service, the office of the provost marshal general announced today.

The only test of the married man's availability will be whether or not his call for service will throw dependents on the state. It is even possible that this may be eliminated. Congress has been asked to cast a bill caring for soldiers' wives as is done in England.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS

Canning and Home Economic Clubs in Garrett County.

For the past month a County Home Demonstration Agent has been at work in Garrett county organizing women's and girls' clubs. Up to date twelve clubs have been organized, with a membership of 400.

Home Economics and Canning Clubs will bring to the country woman and girl that information to which she is justly entitled. The time has come when women must broaden her outlook, as the house has been smaller and more confining than the farm, it has followed that woman's outlook has been smaller than man's. Men are constantly endeavoring to produce better corn, better wheat, so women must be interested in the use of that material. A balance in progress is not being maintained if men are educated so as to obtain the best products while women remain in ignorance of the principles underlying their use. As the boy attends an agricultural college to obtain scientific training in agriculture, so should every girl have the privilege of special training in home making. If it is essential that the men be trained in better farming methods, it is equally essential that the woman and girl be trained in better household methods.

A brief plan of the work as it is mapped out will give some idea of what is being done in Garrett county along the line of Home Economics Clubs. A series of lessons on food and nutrition will be given in which a discussion of the food value of each dish and its relation to the diet as a whole will be considered. A series of lessons on Cereals and Breads also on dried fruits and vegetables will occur in the course. Have you ever used a fireless cooker? Yes, is the answer for many of you. But how many know how to construct one in your home for only a few dollars? Many of you live quite remote from an ice plant, are you aware that you can build a most satisfactory iceless refrigerator for a small sum? The explanation of the use of these together with full directions for making are only a few of the many labor saving devices which will find their places on the program of the Home Economics Clubs of Garrett county. Perhaps every jar of fruit and vegetables which you canned last year did not keep or again your jelly may not have jelled. Come find out the reason for all of this. In the near future demonstrations in tin canning will be given.

Drying is another phase of the club work. Even though the drying of fruits and vegetables as practiced some years ago has become practically a "lost art" the present food situation doubtless will cause a marked stimulation of drying as a means of conserving the food supply.

Later in the fall the canning clubs will change to sewing, and study clubs. The various clubs will compete for prizes which will be offered by the County Fair Association as well as by local communities. Sometime in August or early in September, it is hoped to be able to hold a large county picnic at which funds may be raised to devote to the prize contest also. All women and girls of Garrett county are most earnestly invited to communicate with Miss Frances E. Gerber, the County Home Demonstration Agent, Oakland, Maryland.

FROM A SOLDIER BOY

Leo Lyon, Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., Writes His Pastor in Oakland.

Leo Lyon, who enlisted recently and was detailed as a member of the Hospital Corps and stationed at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., wrote the following letter to his pastor, the Rev. W. M. Shultz, in Oakland, which The Republican is privileged to publish:

DEAR REV:—Your letter received at last, and a letter is one thing a soldier sure does appreciate. We are all together, Curry, Dawson and Helbig and so it is not near so lonesome as if we were among strangers and make things as bright as we can, but Rev. we sure do look back those 900 miles to dear old home sometimes, and still have several thousand miles to go yet. But we hope to be safe whatever may happen, for war prospects get worse every day. We always remember our Sunday school hour and go to church every Sunday in camp.

I will earnestly try to follow your good advice, hope that our good master will hasten the time when peace will rule again. Give my regards to my S. S. class and all, and hope to hear from you again. Do you ever go out to see mother?

Will close as it is dinner time.

Very sincerely,

NUMBER OF MEN REMAINS AT 145

Adjutant General Insists That This County's Quota Is Correct

Adjutant General Warfield, replying to Clerk Tower's letter which was published in these columns last week and in which Mr. Tower showed conclusively that the quota of 145 men for army service from Garrett county was too high, stated that the local man was right in a certain point but that he had not taken into consideration calculations based upon the total number for the entire state and referred the local board to the President's proclamation.

After giving Garrett county credit for thirty-one men who had enlisted previously the Adjutant General requires that the county furnish 145 men additional, making this county's quota 176.

Upon this basis, unless otherwise ordered, the local board will mail notices tomorrow to 290 men, those whose names appeared in the list published in last week's Republican being taken in rotation. Ninety-six must be present on Wednesday next, a like number on Thursday and on Friday 98 will report for examination.

Four More Enlistments.

NEW MOTOR LAW.

Commission Issues Instructions On How To Comply.

Clear Lens—If the motorist does not wish to go to the expense of purchasing a non-glaring lens, he can readily comply with the law by having his headlight brackets tilted forward from ¼ to ½ inch, as may be necessary, so that the reflected beams of light will not rise more than 42 inches from the level surface on which the automobile is standing at a distance of 75 feet in front of the car.

A clear glass lens may be used when this is done and will conform with the law.

Non-Glaring Lens—If, on the other hand, the motorist does not care to bend his lamp brackets he must proceed as follows, in order to comply with the law:

1st. Brackets—See that the headlight lamp brackets are not bent, so that the axis of the front of the headlamp, when mounted on the brackets and measured up and down and from side to side, will be perpendicular and horizontal respectively to the level surface upon which the car stands.

2nd. Bulbs—See that the electric bulbs in the head lamps are both of the same candle power, and preferably of the same manufacture.

3rd. Focus—See that the electric bulbs in the head-lamps are properly focused.

To do this turn the current into your headlamps, cover one of them up, take off the door of the remaining headlamp and by means of the focusing device move the bulb either backward or foward until the reflected beam of light ahead of the car is paralled with the road. Then remove the door of the other headlamp and follow the same instructions. Then while the doors are still removed see whether the reflected beams from both lamps are parallel with each other and parallel to the level surface upon which the car stands.

If so, both lamps are properly focused.

Next put on the doors of the lamps containing the non-glaring lens you have decided to use, and your equipment then should comply with the law.

Up to the present time non-glaring lenses such as More-Lite, Warner, Osgood, Lancaster, Corning (clear glass,) Corning (novial glass) Legalite, etc., have been inspected by the State Board of Headlight Inspection and duly approved.

The maximum candle-power that may be used with a Warner and More-Lite is eighteen.

A Ford car whose headlight equipment is operated by a magneto connected with the fly wheel, and contains a Warner or More-Lite lens, will not comply with the law.

Dash Lamps or dimmers containing reflectors must not be used with bulbs over four candlepower.

The Rear Lamp must be so mounted that the light will shine on the rear license tag making all of the numerals discernible not less than twenty-five feet in the direction from which the vehicle is proceeding.

If the lamps inspected meet the requirements of the law the officers will place a seal on the right head lamp, which will hold the user of that vehicle immune from arrest so long as his equipment has not been changed or altered.

There will be no charge for this service.

Note—It is not compulsory to have the seal in order to comply with the law.

By order of
STATE BOARD OF MOTOR VEHICLE
HEADLIGHT INSPECTION.

A Successful Conference.

The Missionary Convention, held at Terra Alta last week, under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Society, came to a close last Friday night. It was managed by Mrs. J. C. Ely, of Oakland. It was considered a success.

Study classes were conducted daily by Mrs. Tracy, of N. Y., Miss Schultz, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Ely, of Oakland. The Bible study hour was conducted by Rev. E. B. Turner, of Clarksburg.

On Thursday evening Dr. Ely gave an illustrated lecture on Korea, and afterwards conducted the Bible study hour.

Dr. C. E. Bisop, of the University of W. Va., conducted the hour on Friday night. A movement was inaugurated to widen the scope so as to include the entire synod.

Arrangements will probably be made for this during the meeting of the synod this fall.

FOURTH YEAR OF WAR

Victory Over German Arms Yet In Future.

KITCHNER has been vindicated by the calendar. His judgment was the war would last at least three years. Yesterday the great conflict enters the thirty-seventh month. Whether the 1914 idol of Britian shall go down in history as a military seer or merely a good guesser does not matter. On one point his fame is assured. KITCHNER fashioned the plan upon which the great British citizen army was created. Unpromising as was the material, great as was the disparity between the English forces and the German two years ago, today the legions of King GEORGE are superior to those of Emperor WILLIAM. If the war could be decided in Northern France and Belgium there is no doubt as to the final outcome. The Allies would win eventually. But at the opening of the fourth year of conflict there is no more chance of a military decision, as the European armies line up, than there was at the opening of the second or the third. The point of this is made clear by MODEST ALTSCHULER, conductor of the Russian Symphony Orchestra, who told a reporter at Chautauqua the other day, "the so-called rout and annihilation of the Russian army is but an episode of the war. What we are reading about is the war on only 50 miles of a front of 1,000 miles. Suppose part of the army is wiped out. What does it mean? Perhaps 500,000 men, but there are 12,000,000 on that front."

Keep that in mind when you are inclined to be pessimistic about the war decision; keep it in mind also when the spirit of optimism rises high. It is a fact that cannot be disregarded. It emphasizes as nothing else can the magnitude of the conflict which our country entered near the end of the third year of hostilities. The historical or traditional millions of XERXES, ALEXANDER and DARIUS fade into insignificance when one contemplates the hosts engaged in the World War. The greatest decisive battles of the past are duplicated and outdone almost every day in this struggle, and the end of our war is not brought appreciably nearer. Military victory consists in overcoming the enemy, annihilating, dispersing or capturing the opposing army. The most spectacular, as it was the most complete overcoming of an enemy in the third year of the war was Germany's rout of the Rumanians, in which she took possession of practically half their country. But that did not end the war; it did not put the Rumanians out of it permanently. They have returned to battle. The Rumanian campaign was but an episode of the war, just as the Teutonic sweep through Serbia and Montenegro in the second year was merely an incident. Nothing permanent was accomplished. The Serbian army is still in the field, not of much use perhaps to the Allies, but still in arms and capable of putting up a gook fight. There are so many other fronts and of such enormous length that the most terrific smash in one sector can hardly affect the course of the war. The brillian victories of HAIG, NIVELLE and PETAIN, in which HINDENBURG was forced back 25 miles or more and a thousand square miles of French terrain was recovered from the Germans, determined Allied superiority on the fronts considered. But they did not put the Germans out of the war even there. As to bringing about a decision, they cannot be regarded as of greater consequence than the initial victories of VON KLUCK in 1914, except the longer the war continues the more certain it is that the side with the greater resources will win in the field.

Herein lies the significance of our entry into the war. We bring to the Entente side practically unlimited resources of men and materials. Had we been prepared for the conflict our weight thrown into the balance might be worth years of struggle. The Central Powers will be sworn down faster than their adversaries, but until they have been so reduced they cannot make effective resistance on any front the victories, now to one side, now to the other, will be but episodes of small importance in themselves. Cumulatively only will they count. That is, provided there is no decided change of tactics. Great hopes are reposed by the Allies in the air fleet which America is preparing to send against the enemy. If it yields advantages as expected on the Western Front we may be engaged in reconstruction on Angust 1, 1918. We hope so. But the lesson of war to date, and especially of the third year of the conflict, is that military victory is not near for either side. Hope of German defeat rests in America alone. The one big gain for humanity was the overthrow of the Russian autocracy and the renunciation by the Provisional Government of the Romanoff schemes of empire that had been fruitful of war. Here is a beacon light for the rest of the world. If the leaders of the opposing camps have the courage to face the facts at the beginning of the fourth year of war they conceivably could get together and make a peace securing as much of justice and concord in the future as is to be gained by continuing the strife to a "knockout."

In this is no suggestion of the abatement of any just aims of the Allies. That is not to be thought of. There can be no German peace. Germany must be punished for her crimes; she must restore the lands she has ravaged and make reparation for the injuries inflicted upon the innocent. And her power to "repeat" must be destroyed. The German people could get better terms now by forcing their government to an unconditional surrender than they can hope for in defeat, and they would save more than they would have at the conclusion of a drawn war. A comprehensive statement for their benefit rather than further defiances of the Prussian Government capable of various interpretations might accomplish much.

American Cans . . . .

By Frederick J. Haskin.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 27.—This is the day of the can. The people of America are turning the country into one great cannery. From San Francisco to New York and back again, by any route you choose to take, you will find the womanhood of the nation and a considerable portion of its manhood as well, working overtime to store the succulent summer vegetable against next winter's need. This is one part of America's response to the food-saving appeal, and it is encouragingly enthusiastic and whole-hearted.

We have never had anything like it before. The home canning of tomatoes has long been common, the preserving of certain fruits is an institution hallowed by tradition in most American homes, but now we are canning all sorts of things that we never canned at home before, such as beets and corn and beans and peas. It is certain that a vast quantity of food that would otherwise go to waste is being preserved in this manner. It is certain that hundreds of thousands are learning an art that will be worth many dollars to them annually, and many tens of millions of dollars to the nation, war or no war. And the way we are taking hold of this canning campaign is an encouraging sign for those who say that America is still too little awake to the needs of war. The nation is not going ahead to meet its trials and its tasks; it is taking them as they come.

The average citizen cannot exterminate submarines or build cantonments or prepare an aeroplane program. About the only chance he has had so far actually to do anything is in connection with the food conservation campaign. The word went forth to plant gardens, and a million more gardens were planted. Now the word goes forth to can vegetables and every family with a garden turns to canning, besides hundreds of thousands of others who are buying cheap vegetables in the markets to preserve against the winter shortage.

The Department of Agriculture is at the head of the moyement and at times the movement threatens to run away with the department. A booklet describing the new cold-pack canning process was issued by the government specialists a few weeks ago. Ever since the report got out that such a book was in existence, the department itself and every other agency that looked promising, has been buried from view beneath a flood of requests for the canning book. The Government Printing Office, which already had its troubles what with the fifty or sixty million pieces of printed called for to operate the selective draft, got an additional order for a million copies of these illustrated canning volumes, and with all its unrivalled facilities, it has been about two jumps behind the demand ever since. The States Relations Service, which conducts the field campaign and the demonstration work through thousands of agents, wanted canning book—hundreds of thousands of them. Congressmen wanted them; Senators wanted them; the great American public wanted them. The printing office for weeks was running a race against time, for the canning season doesn't last forever.

However, practically everybody who has anything to can has now gotten directions for canning it. The rush of requests is chiefly significant as a very faithful mirror of the nation-wide interest in canning and those who had a chance to look them over have no doubt as to the serious purpose of the writers. They were people who had vegetables and who were determined to get them canned and from the tone of their letters there is not much doubt that they have done it.

The States Relations Service through its county agents, started the home canning demonstrator into new fields. Ordinarily, his work,—or her work—is confined to the rural districts. Now the cities are probably canning more than the country. Mr. H. H. Benson, head of the work in the northern and eastern states, gave a demonstration on Broadway, and "drew" better than a European star or a musical comedy. New York is enthusiastic over the campaign, and so is practically every other big city in the county.

In the rural districts the thing is less of a novelty, but more of a success. The canning club idea has proved very popular, especially that of the so called Mother-Daughter clubs, where families can in competion for quantity and quality. The champion Mother-Daughter club of Kansas, at Leavenworth, last year canned 9838 quarts of vegetables. The average cost was 14 cents a quart. The experts of the Department of Agriculture fixed a market value for the product, which left a theoretical profit of $2420. The club included 29 "mother-daughter" teams, each consisting of a mother and daughter either genuine or adopted for the occasion. In some cases the daughter was a son. Of course, the performance of this club is record rather than typical, for it is the prize organization of a farming state, where the women are experienced in canning and preserving, but none the less it shows that club canning can be carried on very profitably and has its attractions even without the stimulus of patriotic duty.

For the rural district, the canning club has a high value as a social factor, in addition to its practical side. It is the successor to the old-time "quiltin' bee" in spirit, although the members buy their quilts by mail and come to the canning club centre in automobiles. The good cheer and sociability of the quilting bee survive in the canning club. Not long ago a Kansas man went to buy a farm that was advertised for sale, and found that the owner had changed his mind. "We didn't think much of the neighborhood at first and we wanted to move," he said. "But now they've started a canning club, and we've decided to stay."

The canning club idea has been worked out in considerable detail, and shown itself capable of numerous happy applications. Various forms of the community club are thriving; buying of raw materials in bulk has been found a great economy; the exchange of vegetables between different clubs has disposed of some of the problems of surplus and lack, from the point of view of the bill of fare.

Meanwhile the agents of the States Relations Service continue to demonstrate, and the canning movement continues to grow. It is too early yet to judge exactly what results the campaign has yielded. There has been so much canning by amateurs and beginners that only time can tell the percentage of success. But we know that immense quantities of food have been canned, and priceless experience gained for the hard winters that may well lie ahead.

All Day Singing at Crellin.

There will be an All Day Singing and Fellowship Meeting at Crellin, Asbby's Grove, Sunday, August 19th. The churches at Crellin, Underwood and Hutton will unite in this great Rally. All churches in the county are cordially invited to attend and take part. Bishop W. M. Weekly, D. D., of the U. B. church will speak at 10:30 a. m. Each choir and Sunday school in the county are earnestly requested to be present and take part in the singing. It is our desire to have a song from each school or choir that attends. Bring a basket and get your neighbor to come, let the little people, the big people, all the people come. Bring your smile and hearty hand shake and help make it a great Fellowship Day.

The Secrets of the Hohenzollerns

STARTLING EXPOSURE OF INNER LIFE OF KAISER AND CROWN PRINCE AS TOLD BY COUNT ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX

EDITORIAL NOTE. — William LeQueux, who here chronicles for his friend, Count Ernst von Heltzendorff, the latter's revelations of the inner life of the imperial German court, has long been recognized throughout Europe as the possessor of its innermost secrets.

The English "Who's Who" says of him: "He has intimate knowledge of the secret service of Continental countries and is considered by the government (of Great Britain) an authority on such matters." Another authority says: "Few people have been more closely associated with or know more of the astounding inner machinery of Germany than he."

LeQueux probably has more sources of secret information at his command than any contemporary in civil life, and for the last six years the British Government has made valuable use of his vast store of secret information through a specially organized department with which LeQueux works as a voluntary assistant.

Count von Heltzendorff became an intimate of LeQueux several years prior to the outbreak of the war; he has been living in retirement in France since August, 1914, and it was there that LeQueux received from the crown prince's late personal adjutant permission to make public these revelations of the inner life of the Hohenzollerns—that the democracies of the world might come to know the real, but heretofore hidden, personalities of the two dominant members of the autocracy they are now arrayed against.

The Crown Prince's Amazing Adventure

I SUPPOSE that none of you have ever heard the name of Thyra Adelheid von Kienitz?

She was a funny little deformed person, aged, perhaps, seventy, widow of the great General von Kienitz, who had served in the Franco-German campaign, and who, before his death, had been acknowledged to be as great a strategist as Lord Roberts.

Countess von Kienitz was the daughter of a certain Countess von Borcke, and after living for many years in retirement in her picturesque old schloss, perched on a rock not far from the famous wine district of Berncastel, on the Mosel river, became suddenly seized with an idea to re-enter Berlin society.

With this view she rented a fine house not far from the Leichtenstein bridge and early in 1911 commenced a series of wildly extravagant entertainments with a view, as it seemed to me, to attract the more modern and go-ahead section of Berlin society.

One afternoon, seated by the crown prince as he drove recklessly his great Mercedes car along the Bismarckallee in the direction of Potsdam, we passed an overdressed old woman, very artificial, with yellow hair and short stature.

"Look, Heltzendorff! Is she not like Von Kienitz?"

"Yes, her figure is very similar," I admitted.

"Ah! The old woman was introduced to me the other night at Bismarck-Bohlen's house. Himmel! What a freak! Have you seen her wig?"

I replied that I had visited once or twice at the Stulerstrasse and that the company I had met there were certainly amusing. I mentioned some of their names, among them that of young Von Ratibor, Major Gersdorff of the Death's Head Hussars, Van Heynitz of the Konigsjager, a well-known man about town, his friend Winterfeld, together with a number of ladies of the very ultra go-ahead set. At this his highness seemed highly interested.

"She certainly seems a very curious old person," he laughed. "Fancies that she's but twenty-five, and actually had the audacity to dance at Bismarck-Bohlen's."

New Arrival at Court.

Judge my great surprise when, about six weeks later, Frau von Alvensleben, the pretty grand maitresse of the court of the crown princess, stopped me in one of the corridors of the Marmor palace and, drawing me aside, whispered:

"I have news for you, my dear count. We have a new arrival at court—Frau Yellow-Wig."

She saw that I did not follow her.

"Countess von Kienitz—a friend of yours, I believe."

"Friend of mine!" I echoed. "I've only been in her house three or four times, just in a crowd, and out of curiosity."

"Oh, la la! Well, she has told the crown princess that you are her friend and, in brief, has entirely fascinated her imperial highness."

What the grand maitresse had told me was perfectly correct, for three days later a dance was held, and as I entered the room I saw amid that gay assemblage the widow of the long-forgotten military hero talking quite familiarly with her imperial highness. To my utter amazement, also, his majesty the emperor, in the gay uniform of the Third regiment of Uhlans of Saxony, advanced and smiled graciously upon her as she bowed as low as rheumatism and old age allowed.

The fascination which the shrill-voiced old woman exercised over "Cilli" (the crown princess) was quickly remarked, and, of course, gossip became more rife than ever, especially when, a week later, it was announced that she had actually been appointed a lady-in-waiting.

The crown prince, too, soon became on friendly terms with her, and many times I saw them chatting together as though exchanging confidences. Why?

"I can't make it out," declared Von Behr, the chamberlain du service, to me one day two months later. "The old woman has the most complete control over her highness. Because she was averse to the journey we are not going to Norway this year. Besides, since her appointment, she has succeeded in plotting the dismissal of the Countess von Scheet-Plessen.

A Conversation in Italian.

One evening I went to the countess' house in the Stulerstrasse to a dinner party, at which there were present the crown prince, Admiral von Spee from Kiel and Von Ilberg, the emperor's doctor, together with the old Duke von Trachenberg, who held the honorary and out-of-date office of grand cupbearer to the emperor, and the eternal "Uncle" Zeppelin. With us were a number of ladies, including their serene highnesses, the Princess von Radolin and the Duchess von Ratibor, both ladies of the court of the kaiserin, and several others of the ultra-smart set.

After the meal there was a small dance, and about midnight, after waltzing with a pretty girl, the daughter of the Baron von Heintze-Weissenrode, we strolled together into the fine winter garden, with its high palms, its plashing fountains and its cunningly secreted electric lights.

Two persons were approaching somewhere behind us, conversing in Italian—a man and a woman.

"Hush!" I whispered mischievously. "Listen! Do you know Italian?"

"Alas! no," was her reply. "Do you?"

I did not answer, for I had already recognized the voices as those of our hostess and the crown prince.

Next moment, however, my companion's quick ears caught that unmistakable squeaky voice.

"Why, it's the countess!" she exclaimed.

His highness and the little old lady-in-waiting seated themselves out of sight a short distance away and continued a very confidential discussion in an undertone in the language in which, after German, I happen perhaps to be most proficient.

The pair were discussing somebody named Karl Krahl.

"I saw the emperor today," declared the old woman, in her sibilant Italian, undoubtedly so that no one should understand, for Italian is seldom spoken in Germany. "His majesty shares my views now, though he did not do so at first. Indeed, I was very near being dismissed in disgrace when I first broached the affair. But, fortunately, he now knows the truth and sees the advantage of—well, you know, eh?"

"Certo, contessa," replied the crown prince, who speaks Italian extremely well. "I quite foresee the peril and the force of your argument."

"How shall we act?" asked the old woman. "It remains for you to devise a plan. At any moment matters may approach a crisis. One can never account for the confidences exchanged by those who love each other. And, remember, Krahl is in love."

The crown prince grunted, but as several couples entered at that moment the pair broke off their confidential chat and, rising, went out together.

Who was this Karl Krahl?

I searched various directories, lists of persons engaged in the government offices in the Wilhelmstrasse, the Liepzigerstrasse and Unter den Linden; I consulted the director of Berlin police, Von Jagow; the well-known Detective Schunke and Heinrich Wesener, assistant director of the secret service of the general staff; but nobody knew Karl Krahl. There seemed to be no record of him anywhere.

An Unexpected Caller.

In October I accompanied his imperial highness to Ballenstedt, the beautiful schloss in the Harz mountains. Here once or twice each season the crown prince's habit was to invite a few of his most intimate chums to shoot in the forests of Stecklenberg and the Lauenberg, and along that curious sandstone ridge known as the Teufelsmauer, or "Devil's Wall."

The guns consisted of five well-known officers from Berlin, together with Doctor Zelsing, the master general of forests, and Lieutenant General von Oertzen, the fat old inspector general of cavalry. As usual, we all had a most enjoyable time.

On the third day, after a champagne luncheon taken at the forester's little house at Neue Schenke, we were about to resume our sport. Indeed, all the guests had gone outside, preparing to go to their allotted stations, when the head forester entered and, addressing the crown prince, said:

"There is a man to see your imperial highness and refuses to leave. He gives his name as Karl Krahl."

His highness' brows narrowed for a second, which showed his annoyance; then, smiling affably, so clever was he, like his imperial father, in the concealment of his real feelings—he replied:

"Oh, yes—Krahl! I recollect. Yes, I will see him here."

Next moment the person whom I had heard discussed so strangely in the little old woman's beautiful winter garden was ushered in.

He was dark-haired, aged about twenty-eight, I judged, with small, shrewd black eyes, dressed in a well-cut suit of gray country tweeds, and, but for his German name, I should have taken him for an English tourist, one of those familiar objects of the Harz in peace time.

"Come in, Karl!" exclaimed the crown prince, affably, as he grasped his visitor's hand. His highness did not often offer his manicured hand to others, and at this I was greatly surprised. "The forester did not know you, of course. Well, I am very pleased to see you. Have you come straight here?"

"Yes, your highness. I went first to Berlin and, learning that you were here, I thought I had better lose no time."

"Quite right," laughed his highness, who, turning to me, said: "Heltzendorff, will you tell the others to go on ——that I am detained for an hour on state business, and—and that I will join them as soon as possible. I will find you in the woods, on the left of the Quedlinburg road, before one comes to the Wurmtal. Apologize for me, but the delay is inevitable. I have a conference with Herr Krahl."

The Crown Prince Disappears.

While his highness remained behind at the forester's house to chat alone with the mysterious Karl Krahl, we went out among the birds and had some excellent sport. Yet the sight of the young man, whom I had long endeavored in vain to trace, caused me considerable wonderment. Who was that young fellow in whom the little old countess seemed to take such deep and peculiar interest? What was his offence that she, with the crown prince, should concoct, as it seemed to me, such a plot as that I had partly overheard?

That there was a woman in the case I felt assured, but her name had not been mentioned and I had no suspicion of whom it could be. I realized, however, that something important must be in progress, otherwise his highness, devoted to sport as he was, would never have given up the best afternoon to consult with that stranger in gray tweeds.

The foresters and beaters had come with us, as the crown prince had, at his own request, been left alone with his mysterious visitor.

After a couple of short beats we arrived at the spot on the forest road to Quedlinburg, a most romantic and picturesque gorge, where his highness had arranged to meet us, and there we sat down and waited.

A full half-hour had passed, yet the head forester, who was keeping a look-out along the road, did not signal his highness' approach.

"I wonder what can have detained him?" remarked Von Oertzen, the inspector general of cavalry.

I explained that a strange young man had come to the forester's house.

An hour went past. The light would soon fade and we, knowing "Willie's" utter disregard for his appointments, at last decided to continue the shoot, leaving one of the foresters to tell his highness the direction we had taken.

The crown prince did not, however, join us, and darkness had fallen ere we returned to the forester's house. Of his highness there was no sign, a fact which much surprised us. In the room wherein I had left him, his gun and green Tyrolese hat were lying upon a chair, and the fact that all the cars were still ranged outside showed that he had not driven back to the castle.

The crown prince had disappeared!

A Lady's Bag.

Knof, his highness' chauffeur, who had been walking with us, was sent back posthaste to the schloss to ascertain whether he had been seen there, for his highness' movements were often most erratic. We knew that if the whim took him he would perhaps go off in an opposite direction, or trudge back to the castle with utter disregard of our natural anxiety.

Lights were lit and we enjoyed cigars awaiting Knof's return. In an hour he was back with the news that nothing had been heard of his highness. Soon after we had left that morning, however, a young man in a gray suit had called and seen the major domo, who had directed him where his highness might be found.

Upon Eckardt—the commissary of police responsible for his highness' safety—the onus rested. Yet, had he not been sent out with the party, as his highness had expressed to me a wish to be left alone with the stranger, whose name I alone knew?

While we were discussing the most judicious mode of action—for I scented much mystery in this visit of Karl Krahl—one of the party discovered, lying upon the ledge of the window, a lady's small and rather elegant handbag of black moire silk.

"Halloa!" I cried, when he held it up for inspection. "This reveals to us one fact—a woman has been here."

I opened the bag, and within found a small lawn handkerchief with a coronet embroidered in its corner, a tiny tortoise-shell mirror and four one-hundred-mark notes, but no clue whatever as to its owner.

The mystery was increasing hourly, but the gay party, knowing "Willie's" susceptibility where the fair sex was concerned, only laughed and declared that his highness would assuredly turn up before the evening was over.

Truth to tell, I did not like the situation. His highness' disappearance was now known to fifty or so persons, beaters and others, and I feared lest it might get into the Berlin papers. With that object I called them together and impressed upon them that most complete silence must be maintained regarding the affair.

Then Knof drove me alone back to the schloss. I wondered if his highness, wishing to get away unobserved, returning in secret there, had left me a written message in his room. He had done that on one occasion before.

I dashed up to the small, old-world room which by day overlooked the romantic and picturesque valley, but upon the table whereat I had been writing early that morning there was nothing.

The Countess Von Kienitz.

As I turned to leave I heard a footstep, and next instant saw the little deformed old countess facing me.

Her appearance quite startled me. Apparently she had just arrived, for she was in a dark blue bonnet and warm traveling coat.

"Ah! Count von Heltzendorff!" she cried in that squeaky, high-pitched voice of hers. "Is his imperial highness here? I must see him immediately."

"No, countess. His imperial highness is not here," was my reply. "This afternoon he mysteriously disappeared from the forester's lodge at Neue Schenke, and we are unable to trace him."

"Disappeared!" gasped the old lady, instantly pale and agitated.

"Yes," I said, looking her straight in the face.

"Do you know whether he had a visitor today—a young, dark-haired man?"

"He had, countess. A man called, and saw him. At his highness' request I left him alone with his visitor at the forester's house. The man's name was Karl Krahl."

"How do you know his name?" she asked, staring at me with an expression of distinct suspicion.

"Because—well, because I happen to have learnt it some time ago," I said. "And, further, on returning to the house we found this little bag in the room wherein I had left the crown prince."

"Why!—a lady's bag!" she exclaimed as I held it out for inspection.

"Yes," I said in a somewhat hard tone. "Do you happen to recognize it?"

"Me? Why?" asked the old woman.

"Well, because I think it is your own property," I said. "I have some recollection of having seen it in your hand!"

She took it, examined it well and then, with an artificial laugh, declared:

"It certainly is not mine. I once had a bag very similar, but mine was not of such good quality."

"Are you really quite certain, countess?" I demanded.

"Quite," she declared. "But why trouble about that bag while there is a point much more important—the safety and whereabouts of his imperial highness?" she went on in a great state of agitation. "Tell me, count, exactly what occurred—as far as you know."

I recounted to her the facts just as they have already been written down, and as I did so I watched her face, noticing upon it an expression full of suspicion of myself. She was, it seemed to me, undecided as to the exact extent of my knowledge.

"How did you know that the young man's name was Krahl?" she asked, eagerly. "You had perhaps met him before—eh?"

The Search.

To this leading question I maintained a sphinxlike silence. That the little old woman who had so unexpectedly become a lady-in-waiting was playing some desperate double game I felt sure, but its exact import was still an enigma.

"In any case," she said, "would it not be as well to return to the Neue Schenke and make search?"

I smiled. Then, in order to let her know that I was acquainted with Italian, the language she had spoken on that well-remembered night in her own conservatory, I exclaimed:

"Ahe! alle volte con gli occhi aperti si far del sogni." (Sometimes one can dream with one's eyes open.)

Her thin eyebrows narrowed, and with a shrug of her shoulders the old woman replied:

"Dal falso bene viene il vero male." (From an affected good feeling comes a real evil.)

I realized at that moment that there was more mystery in the affair than I had yet conceived. His imperial highness was certainly missing, though the female element of the affair had become eliminated by my recognition of her own handbag. She, too, had been in secret to the forester's house—but with what object?

Half an hour later we were back at the little house in the forest.

The guests had all returned to the castle, and only Eckhardt, the police commissioner, remained, with a forester and his underlings. Already search had been made in the surrounding woods, but without result. Of his imperial highness there was no trace.

In the long room, with its pitch-pine walls, and lit by oil lamps, the old countess closely questioned Eckhardt as to the result of his inquiries. But the police official, who had become full of nervous fear, declared that he had been sent off by his highness, and had not since found any trace of him. He spoke of the little silk bag, of course, and attached great importance to it.

Within half an hour we had reorganized the beaters from the neighborhood and, with lanterns, set out again to examine some woods to the east which had not been searched. About ten o'clock we set forth, the countess accompanying us and walking well, notwithstanding her age, though I could see that it was a fearful anxiety that kept her active. To the men with us every inch of the mountain side was familiar, and for hours we searched.

A Startling Discovery.

Suddenly, not far away, a horn was blown, followed by loud shouts. Quickly we approached the spot, and Eckhardt and myself, as we came up, looked upon a strange scene. Close to the trunk of a great beech tree lay the form of the crown prince, hatless, outstretched upon his face.

Instantly I bent, tore open his shooting jacket, and to my great relief found that his heart was still beating. He was, however, quite unconscious, though there seemed no sign of a struggle. As he had left his hat and gun in the house, it seemed that he had gone forth only for a moment. And yet we were quite a mile from the forester's house!

The countess had thrown herself upon her knees and stroked his brow tenderly when I announced that he was still living. By her actions I saw that she was filled by some bitter self-reproach.

With the lanterns shining around him—surely a weird and remarkable scene which would, if described by the journalists, have caused a great sensation in Europe—the crown prince was brought slowly back to consciousness, until at last he sat up, dazed and wondering.

His first words to me were:

"That fellow! Where is he? That —that glass globe!"

An hour later he was comfortably in bed in the great old-world room in the castle, attended by a local doctor—upon whom I set the seal of official silence—and before dawn he had completely recovered.

Yet, even to me, he declared that he retained absolutely no knowledge of what had occurred.

"I went out quickly, and I—well, I don't know what happened," he told me soon after dawn, as he lay in bed. Strangely enough, he made no mention of the man, Karl Krahl.

Later on he summoned the Countess von Kienitz, and for twenty minutes or so he had an animated discussion with her. Being outside the room, however, I was unable to hear distinctly.

Well, I succeeded, by bribes and threats, in hushing up the whole affair and keeping it out of the papers, while by those who knew of the incident it was soon forgotten.

Karl Krahl Again.

I suppose it must have been fully three months later when one evening, having taken some documents over to the emperor for signature at the Berlin schloss, I returned to the prince's private room in the palace, when, to my great surprise, I found the man Karl Krahl seated there. He looked very pale and worn, quite unlike the rather athletic figure he presented at the forester's house.

"If you still refuse to tell me the truth, then I shall take my own measures to find out—severe measures! So I give you full warning," the crown prince was declaring angrily, as I entered so unexpectedly.

I did not withdraw, pretending not to notice the presence of a visitor, therefore his highness himself beckoned the young man, who followed him down the corridor to another room.

The whole affair was most puzzling. What had happened on that afternoon in the Harz mountains I could not at all imagine. By what means had his highness been rendered unconscious, and what part could the little old countess have played in the curious affair?

In about half an hour the crown prince returned in a palpably bad humor and, flinging himself into his chair, wrote a long letter, which he addressed to Countess von Kienitz. This he sealed carefully and ordered me to take it at once to the Stulerstrasse and deliver it to her personally.

"The countess left for Stockholm this morning," I was informed by the bearded manservant. "She left by the eight o'clock train and has already left Sassnitz by now."

"When do you expect her to return?"

The man did not know.

On going back to his highness and telling him of the countess' departure, he bit his lip and then smiled grimly.

"That infernal old woman has left Germany and will never again put her foot upon our soil, Heltzendorff," he said. "You may open that letter. It will explain something which I know must have mystified you."

I did so. And as I read what he had written I held my breath. Truly it did explain much.

What the Crown Prince Told Me.

Imposing the strictest silence upon me, the crown prince then revealed how utterly he and the crown princess had been misled, and how very narrowly he had escaped being the victim of a cunning plot to effect his death.

The little old Countess von Kienitz had, it seemed, sworn to avenge the degradation and dismissal of her son, who had been in the famous Death's Head Hussars. She had secretly traced the crown prince as author of a conspiracy against him, the underlying motive being jealousy. With that end in view she had slowly wormed her way into his highness' confidence, and introduced to him Karl Krahl, a neurotic young Saxon who lived in London, and who pretended he had unearthed a plot against the kaiser himself.

"It was to tell me the truth concerning the conspiracy that Krahl came to me in secret at Ballenstedt. He remained with me for half an hour, when, to my great surprise, we were joined by the countess. The story they told me of the plot against the emperor was a very alarming one, and I intended to return at once to Berlin. The countess had left to walk back to the schloss, when presently we heard a woman's scream—her voice—and we both went forth to discover what was in progress. As I ran along a little distance behind Krahl, suddenly what seemed like a thin glass globe struck me in the chest and burst before my face. It had been thrown by an unknown hand and, on breaking, must have emitted some poisonous gas which was intended to kill me, but which happily failed. Until yesterday the whole affair was a complete mystery, but Krahl has now confessed that the countess conceived the plot, and that the hand that had thrown the glass bomb was that of her son, who had concealed himself in the bushes for the purpose."

Though, of course, I hastened to congratulate his highness upon his fortunate escape, yet I now often wonder whether, if the plot had succeded, the present world-conflict would ever have occurred.

A LETTER FROM THE CROWN PRINCE'S PERSONAL ADJUTANT TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX, POSSESSOR OF THE SECRETS OF EUROPE.

Veneux Nadon,
par Moret-sur-Loing,
Seine-et-Marne,
February 10th, 1917.

My dear LeQueux:

I have just finished reading the proofs of your articles describing my life as an official at the imperial court at Potsdam, and the two or three small errors you made I have duly corrected.

The gross scandals and wily intrigues which I have related to you were many of them known to yourself, for, as the intimate friend of Luisa, the ex-crown princess of Saxony, you were, before the war, closely associated with many of those at court whose names appear in these articles.

The revelations which I have made, and which you have recorded here, are but a tithe of the disclosures which I could make, and if the world desires more, I shall be pleased to furnish you with other and even more startling details, which you may also put into print.

My service as personal adjutant to the German crown prince is, happily, at an end, and now, with the treachery of Germany against civilization glaringly revealed, I feel, in my retirement, no compunction in exposing all I know concerning the secrets of the kaiser and his son.

With most cordial greetings from
Your sincere friend,
(Signed) ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF.

THE COUNTRY'S HONOR.

The large number of subscribers, more than four million, and the large amount subscribed, over three billion dollars, to the Liberty Loan was a splendid demonstration of the worth of a good name. For generations the United States Government bond has been a synonymn for absolute security, because the honor of our country is behind it. "As good as a Government bond," was as common a term as "As good as gold," in speaking of securities or investments.

The United States has reaped the reward from its own people for never having defaulted on an obligation. "Our sacred honor" is no idle phrase in the United States. The tradition of our national honor began in Washington's day when in his first Inaugural address he said "The foundations of our national defense will be laid in the pure and immutable principles of morality ," and it has been preserved through all our history.

The honor of the United States is back of the Liberty Loan Bonds and all America and all the world know that they are absolutely safe.

ADMINISTRATIVE BOARDS.

[Chicago News.]

Federal government, as a rule, is better administered than are state or local governments in the United States, in large measure because the federal departments are so organized that there is no divided authority. The head of each department directs its operations effectively. State and cities are beginning to realize the folly of maintaining boards for administrative purposes. The tendency is to substitute for boards with their diffused authority departments having single executive heads.

The national Senate runs counter to the best opinion on governmental methods in undertaking to provide a board of three members to have charge of food control in the United States for the period of the war. In so far as questions of broad governmental policy may be involved, Congress and the President should decide them. What is wanted from the Bureau of Food Control is action to conserve the foodstuffs of the nation, and effective action can be obtained in the best manner by placing the responsibility in a single individual. Boards waste time and create friction. This has been demonstrated anew in the Shipping Board's disagreements with General Goethals, which led to the latter's resignation and the reconstruction of the board.

OPPORTUNITY.

The air is full of it. Every day brings to us one or more opportunities to do something good or to make something of ourselves. The reason so many young people are not making good in life is because they do not seize the opportunities that come to them. "Time and tide wait for no man," but to every one comes the opportunity in life to better his condition, or to fit himself the better for life's stern work. Here is a story that I read of Commodore Farragut, one of the great naval leaders of the sixties. His vessel was passing through Mobile Bay and slowed up.

"What's the trouble" shouted the Commodore? "Torpedoes" replied the forward watch.

As he spoke, one exploded under an iron-clad gunboat just in front, filling and sinking her in a few seconds, with her commander and nearly all her men.

"All is lost!" shouted a man from the deck; but looking upward, Farragut prayed: "O God, who created man and gave him reason, direct me what to do. Shall I go on?"

"Go on!" something seemed to whisper in his ear.

"Four bells!" shouted Farragut through the trumpet, in a clear confident tone. "Captain Drayton, go ahead! Jouett, full speed! Give her all the steam you've got!" and like a thing of life the wooden flat ship "Harford" swept over the torpedoes to the head of the fleet, right into the jaws of death. Her timbers crashed, and the wounded came pouring down from the tops, with cries never to be forgotton. Twice Farragut was lashed to the rigging by his men lest he should fall overboard if struck by a ball. Several hundred men perished, and the great Admiral wept like a child as he looked upon the brave boys thus nobly dying in those terrible moments.

Never before had he witnessed such a scene of carnage since Captain David Porter began to train him at the age of nine, yet he had been familiar with bloodshed on the "Essex" in 1812—13 A midshipman at ten, he was sent as prize master of the "Barclay" to Chili. "This was an important event of my life," he wrote afterwards, "and when it was decided that I was to take the ship to Valparaiso I felt no little pride in command at twelve years of age."

Notwithstanding his early training, and his thorough knowledge of his business, he was not impatient for promotion before the proper time.

"I have no volition in the matter; your duty is to give me orders, mine to obey," he wrote to the Secretary of the Navy in 1856, replying to a suggestion that he might be sent to any station he preferred.

Farragut waited long for his opportunity. It came on that summer day in Mobile Bay, in 1864. The great Commander was equal to the occasion, and was lauded to the skies by all the world.

My young friend, you may have to wait long for your opportunity, but if you are prepared for it when it comes you will make good, otherwise you will lose, and the world will drop you.

SECOND BEAN CROP.

Thrift gardener spare that bean. Do not rashly teshly tear up the vines in the belief that they have yielded their crop and that they are ready only for displacement to give way to something else that may be planted in the bean vines and perceive that on account of the repeated rainfall the vines are putting out a new growth filled with new buds. Actually a second crop of beans will be gathered from the vines if let alone, and all the first beans are gathered so as not to go to seed. So, worthy thrift gardner, man or woman, look closely at the beans and observe these words of counsel, derived from long and weighty ruminations of experts in the habits and the mishaps of beans are not carried out by actual observation. Then rejoice that nature is allying itself against the Kaiser by a double growth of this most delectable diet. The first crop consumed upon the table, let the second, or grace crop, be gathered into jars by government process or old-fashioned methods and there housed against the strenuous times of winter.

SUPPORT BY REPUBLICANS.

Another instance of the stand-by-the-Government attitude of Republican Congressmen and the Democratic opposition, was shown in the short debate preceding the passage of the bill appropriating $640,000,000 for aviation pnrposes. The distinguished chairman of the appropriations committee, a Democrat, secured a half hour's time and proceeded to argue that the measure was unconstitutional. He even criticised the committee for adding $750,000, or about one-tenth of one per cent. to the Department estimate; advocated full discussion of the bill by the House, and in other ways endeavored to embarass the speedy passage of the measure. Another prominent Democrat proposed an amendment to cut the appropriation in half, which received the opposition of all the Republicans present, and was speedily defeated. Due largely to the able leadership of the ranking Republican of the Military Committee, Mr. Kahn of Californio, the debate in opposition was kept under control, and the bill passed without much delay.

A TIME TO RALLY.

The heated season is upon us, and the temptation is great for people to become lax in their Sabbath duties. It is so easy to yield to the inclination to stay at home, or take a ride, especially in the cool of the evening. As the result the evening service at least, is neglected. It is unfortunate, to say the least, that this is so. But there is no use trying to excuse them.

Why are people so negligent in regard to their spiritual interests than they are about their temporal.

Besides it must be discouraging to the ministers to prepare for these services and then have but a handful present.

It shows a lack of appreciation or interest and indicates a state of indifference that is appalling. If it is the duty of ministers to prepare and preach these sermons it is equally the duty of the members to be present and help make the services a success. We laymen owe more to the church, than to pay our mite to criticize the preacher. We may well ask too, where are the children? Why are they not at the preaching services? Ask the parents! Do they do their duty by the children when they send them to Sabbath school and stay at home themselves. They owe it to themselves and their families, to be regular attendants on the church services and to see to it that the children are with the children are with them. To leave the habit of church going in childhood, is worth much and the parents who instill this principle and duty into their children from youth are to be congratulated.

They have given their children what is of more value to them than money. If men today, all men, were as devout worshippers of God, as they are of Mammon, they would be surprised at the spiritual power they would have. Let us rally to our churches and do what we can to enlist those not now interested.

Let the whole membership rally and see how it works.

DO AMERICANS WANT PEACE?

Do Americans want peace? They positively want peace at the earliest practicable moment. They do not want any tpye of peace that has as yet been put forth by the Teutons with their "consciousness of victory." Americans have a way of balking at consciousness of victory save when they are the victors. And as they never fight a war for aggression, they are conscious of victory in the defense of right. The Americans are fighting neither for indemnity nor for territory. But they are fighting for right.

And they do not care whether this shall take the form of monetary, territorial or other satisfaction. Where wrong has been done they demand that right shall prevail and shall be satisfied. Right for those who have been wronged, such as Belgium and France.

But even beyond all this, the Americans demand that peace shall bring satisfaction for the American insistence that the world shall be made safe for democracy. And the plain A B C of this is that autocracy must come to an end, that small nations shall be given and secured in their rights, and that the conditions for a permanent peace of the world shall be satisfied through the elimination of its two great menaces—a military autocracy and secret diplomacy.

We have two people in our mind and heart as we write—the young man who has just enrolled and the women who stands beside him. To the young man who has just joined Uncle Sam's army in the state militia, in the navy or in any other branch of the service, to the young man who responds to the call of the draft, we have nothing but congratulation for his high desting. His is of the highest distinction that his country should place her honor in his hands to defend it. Youth with clear eyes accents the challenge of Duty.

But a word to the woman who stands beside him—whether her relation be that of Mother, Wife, Sister or Sweetheart.

Do you realize that all this is for you? These men go forth not for lands, not to collect indemnities, not to steal or destroy the prosperity of other nations, not to maintain a medieval monarch on his throne, not to impose a pagan ideal of kultur on the world—but to make the world a safe place for women and children to live in.

Sometimes mother or martial love would fling its own safety away to shield the man it adores. Yes, there are mothers and wives who would take the risk of enduring all that European wives and mothers have suffered if only their husbands and sons be left in safety. But in this, American wives and mothers, you reckon without the manhood of your protectors. They will not let you take that risk. Why, when they look at the Flag, they see two faces blended—the face of Liberty and the face of her whom they most dearly love. This country spells for us the place where our womenfolk live and we shall think of our own safety only after that is safe.

Women of the Land, this outpouring of American Youth today is all for you—all for you! Do you realize that there is one thing unspeakably more bitter than to have a brave son go off to war? Is to have a coward son skulk at home whilst other boys defend his mother. It is true, of course, that the enrollment does not necessarily mean the draft; it is true that war does not necessarily imply the supreme sacrifice. But suppose it does—suppose it does! Can any son take a nobler passage to the better life than through service to his country and for his kin? Are there not worse epitaphs we can write on the young man's tomb than that he died that Liberty might live?

Look back two thousand years. You see the hill called Calvary—and there, bleeding to death, hangs a woman's Son, and she, the mother, stands there bearing every woe within her heart. It is too sad for words, indeed it is, to think upon that Mother. But—you also see the mother of Judas; and the mother of Judas envies—yes, envies Mary, the Mother of Jesus. Yes, to have a son die in a sacred cause is not the greatest sorrow that can come to a mother.

Do you realize, women of today, that you are moulding your Man for a hero's part or a coward's? It was the Spartan mothers who made the Spartan heroes by their war spirit. Take off your hat to the mother who has a son in the service; reverence the mother who gave her son—whose son did not have gently to force himself away from a restraining embrace—but who gave her son out of a mother's patriotic heart in full understanding of the noble part he was playing. Glad that the mantle of the father had descended on the strong shoulder of her son!

Mothers! If your son is born into that band who count duty a sacred thing, be glad—do not hinder him. Though tears be in your heart, let courage shine from you eyes to his. For there is no better soldier than he who goes forth with the memory of a mother's brave face, or a wife's courageous blessing, or a sweetheart's sacrificial kiss in the sanctuary of his soul.

It is all for you, it is for your children that the nation moves with solemn tread to arms today. Yours is a tremendous gift to give—women of America—give it to his manliness, give it to his soul; let your womanhood strengthen him—be the strength of Divine Power to him as he goes forth to a man's duty.

AND SO SHALL PEACE COME BACK TO THE WORLD AND A WEALTH OF HONOR TO OUR HOMES BECAUSE BESIDE EVERY PATRIOT MAN STOOD A PATRIOT WOMAN.

Empire Theatre Program.

An exceptional good week of pictures.

Thursday night, August 2, George M. Cohan in Broadway Jones. At last it has come about. America's most popular star, in motion pictures. Having reached the very top rung of his theatrical ladder of success not only as an actor, but as an author and producer, George M. Cohan has finally turned to the silent drama as a new field of conquest, so as to speak. In order to display his very best efforts before the motion picture camera, the famous "Yankee Doodle Boy" selected his greatest stage hit, "Broadway Jones," as his initial vehicle in the motion picture field. The film has just recently been completed in Mr. Cohan's New York Studio.

Friday Aug. 3, "Those Without Sin," with Blanch Sweet taking the leading part.

Saturday Aug. 4, Fanny Ward in "Winning of Sally Temple," also a Black Diamond Comedy.

Monday Aug. 6, "Sapho," with Pauline Frederick. This promises to be a very good one.

Tuesday Aug. 7, A Blue Ribbon Vitagraph.

Wednesday Aug. 8, Cathleen Williams in "Out of the Wreck."

Sunday School Rally and District Convention.

There will be an all day singing and No. 7 District convention at Pleasant Valley U. B. church—the second Sabbath, August 12. The following schools are expected to take part in the rally—M. E., Oakland, Protestant Episcopal, Oakland, Mt. Lake, M. E., Loch Lynn, Baptist and U. B., Wesley Chapel M. E. Pleasant Valley U. B. and Lynndale U. B. Among the speakers are the County President, Hon. E. R. Jones, Hon. F. A. Thayer, Hon. A. T. Mathews. The singers throughout the county and the public at large are cordially invited to attend and take part. Bring a basket, invite your friends and come. Program will be published next week.

These machines must not be confused with the kind commonly offered by many firms or mail order houses. They all cut corn—and some of them elevate—but there the comparison ends.

Here's what you get in the Forty and Sixty "Ohio" Machines:

The famous power-saving direct drive cylinder type construction.

A friction reverse mechanism that operates at finger pressure without slightest strain.

A single lever control for stopping, starting or reversing.

A complete traveling feed table with wide flaring sides and solid hardwood frame—mortised, tenoned and double pinned (frames made 28 years ago still in use.)

A heavy 19-16 inch steel knife shaft with latest type of patented knife heads and knife adjustments for acurate shear cut at all times.

Heavy electric welded fan case and paddles.

Direct suction to knives and blower fans without use of auger.

"Safety first" powerful blast, low speed fan.

Easily removable knives and cutter bar for sharpening, replacement, etc.

The "Forty" and "Sixty" OHIO Blowers have been in actual service under the most severe conditions. What they have done for others is the best evidence of what they will do for you.

Fertilizer Shipments In Full Carload Lots.

The following from the National Council of Defense is sent you for your information, with the request that you co-operate as far as possible in an effort to obtain the result desired:

"The American Railway Association has found that in the transportation of fertilizer, only about 47 per cent. of the car capacity is now being used. This is on account of the low minimum tonnage for car load shipments. Figures for March show that in the movement of fertilizer, on one railroad, space to the amount of 1532 cars was lost by small loadings.

The Cooperative Committee on Railroad Transportation which handles the freight equipment of the United States under the direction of the Council of National defense, states that it is a grave question whether the traffic of the United States can be moved by the railroads unless every freight car is loaded to its full cubical capacity, or to 110 per cent. of its marked capacity.

The inference to be drawn from such a statement is clear. The freight car equipment of the country must be so assigned that shippers move their commodities only by loading cars to their full carrying capacity.

On this account, the farmers must place their fertilizer orders without delay, through the usual channels, so that they may be combined into maximum instead of minimum car load shipments. Otherwise, it may be impossible for them to secure enough fertilizer to satisfy even their bare necessities. When orders are placed early, the railroads will see to it that full car load shipments are made up.

By acting at once the farmers of the country can do much to relieve the present car shortage. They can lessen by one-half the number of cars needed for the movement of fertilizer. They can perform a patriotic service and at the same time insure their supply insofar as the resources of the country make it possible.

We recommend that you assist in this reform by communicating with the farmers and by generally giving this matter the widest publicity, so that this waste of car space may be avoided and the farmers secure their fertilizer in season for the Fall seeding and thus insure this country and our Allies a maximum supply of human food."

Yours very truly,
Signed, C. R. GRAY, Chairman.

The Red Cross.

It is always a pleasant task to commend a good cause and those who are working in it. The Red Cross Society of Oakland is to be congratulated on the success of their entertainment last week. But it was to be expected for those who were managing it are not accustomed to any thing but success. It is not putting it too strong to say, that everybody was delighted.

The sum realized will purchase supplies enough to keep nimble fingers busy for some time. It will make many a useful thing for the soldiers at the front. They should have all they need, and every thing to make them as comfortable as possible. They have taken their lives in their hands and have gone forth to do battle for a noble cause.

Somebody will be held responsible in the great day of judgment for the slaughter of the five million men who have already fallen. And the end is not yet. Perilous times are upon us, and it behooves all to recognize the fact and endeavor to meet them. We are just beginning to feel the pressure and before the winter has gone, many a one on this side of the ocean may, as multitudes certainly will on the other side, of it, feel the gnawings of hunger and the pinchings of famine. Some one perhaps is saying, the pessimist is abroad in the land. It isn't pessimism to look things squarely in the face, and admit the facts. It is simply good common sense, practical wisdom and it behooves every one to have and use this commodity for their best interests and that of others.

Housewives have the opportunity now to do a good deal. They can can all the fruit and vegetables possible, during the season, and hold them in readiness for any emergency that may arise. Besides it will pay far better to let nothing go to waste now for it will bring a good price in the winter, and it may help many a poor suffering mortal who can not possibly make any provision for the future now. This isn't the time to cultivate selfishness, We've had too much of that already, but we need to cultivate the generous spirit. "Help somebody today," try it, and see if you are not the happier for the effort.

He Was Cured.

Once there was a little boy who stole sugar. So strong was his craving for sugar that half his mother's time was taken up watching the sugar bowl. One morning, however, she filled a big tumbler full of sugar and gave it to the little boy and told him to eat it all. The boy took a spoon and started in. He ate about a third of it before he got enough. His mother insisted that he eat some more—it was all his to eat, and she'd box his ears if he didn't eat it. She did box his ears, and he ate a little more, but presently he slipped the tumbler under his chair and slipped out to play. When he came back, though, the tumbler was there waiting for him. He ate a little, but it wasn't good. He said it "was too sweet." Every day for a month that tumbler was by his plate at the table, on a chair by his bedside, in the closet with his playthings—everywhere he found that tumbler. The flies swarmed about it, and the ants came, but still it was "too sweet." That tumbler never was finished up. The boy is an old man now, and takes his coffee straight. Gooseberry pie is the only kind he likes. All other kinds are "too sweet."—Kansas City Star.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR AUGUST 5.

MANASSEH'S SIN AND REPENTANCE.

LESSON TEXT—II Chronicles 33:1-20.

GOLDEN TEXT—Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.—Isaiah 55:7.

The reign of Manasseh was the longest of any of the kings of Judah. It is strange that a wicked king should have the distinction of the longest reign. This can be accounted for, perhaps, by the fact that the nation was in such a state that their idolatrous corruption needed to go to its fullest development. It seems to be necessary in a world of free beings, that their actions must go to a certain stage of development. It was so with the inhabitants of Canaan before that land was possessed by Israel. Israel was kept in Egypt until the iniquity of that nation was full. In this case doubtless the Lord permitted this to go on until the idolatrous practices would become extremely obnoxious.

I. Manasseh's Sin (vv. 1-9). Though he had the example of a good father, he with passionate endeavor gave himself up to the imitation of the heathen about him. This shows that grace is not inherited; a good father may have a bad son. It also teaches us that it is absolutely necessary to bring the grace of God into vital touch with our children, for that grace is absolutely essential to their salvation. Only his grace can counteract the downward pull of sin.

1. He restored the high places which had been destroyed by his father (v. 3). It is thus seen that he sought to undo the good work done by his father.

2. He erected altars to Baal (v. 3). The idols worshiped on these altars seem to have been images of licentious appearance, provoking the indulgence of the human passion. Therefore, with this worship was coupled the grossest licentiousness.

3. He introduced the star worship of the Chaldeans and Assyrians (v. 3). He even erected these altars in the house of the Lord, placing them on a level with God himself.

4. He set up Moloch in the Vale of Hinnon (v. 6). He not only encouraged this worship on the part of others, but he even caused his own children to pass through the fire.

5. He practiced magic, witchcraft, and dealt with a familiar spirit (v. 6). So gross were these practices that they did even worse than the heathen whom God had destroyed before the Children of Israel came into the land.

6. He rejected the Lord's testimony (v. 10). Doubtless the prophets had again and again admonished him, but he seems to have turned entirely aside from such remonstrances.

II. Manasseh's Chastisement (vv. 11-13). The Lord in grace used the Assyrians to chastise Manasseh, so as to bring him to see his evil ways. He was captured, perhaps while hiding among the thicket of thorns (v. 11), bound in chains and carried to Babylon. This was most humiliating. His hands were manacled, his ankles fastened together with rings and a bar.

III. Manasseh's Repentance. (vv. 12, 13). Fortunately, the chastisement had its desired effect. Manasseh was brought to his senses and turned from his evil ways. The steps in his repentance are as follows:

1. Affliction (v. 12). This was most severe. Bound with chains and dragged to Babylon. While this was severe, it was light in comparison with the sins which provoked it.

2. Supplication (v. 12). Manasseh had the good sense to cry out to God in this condition. It is the unmistakable evidence that God's chastisement is accomplishing its purpose. We are instructed in James 5:13 in time of affliction to pray.

3. Humility (v. 12). This is a common characteristic of penitent souls. Those who come under the hand of God always recognize it in their humble walk.

4. Forgiveness (v. 13). As soon as God sees the signs of penitence, he turns in mercy to the penitent and grants absolution for sin. No one needs to wait long to receive his forgiveness.

5. His kingdom restored (v. 13). Manasseh not only was forgiven, but he was actually restored to his kingdom. Those who truly repent, God will not only forgive, but he will restore (Psa. 32:3-5).

6. Apprehension of God (v. 13). Through this experience Manasseh came to know God.

IV. Manasseh's Reformation (vv. 14-20). Manasseh was not content with merely receiving God's forgiveness and restoration to his kingdom, but he sought so far as possible to undo the mischief which he had done.

1. He strengthened the fortifications of Jerusalem, so as to make his people safe from the attack of a foreign foe (v. 14).

2. He removed the idols from the House of the Lord (v. 15). Through bitter experience he had come to know that an idol is nothing, that it could avail him nothing in time of deepest need.

Druggist's Experience With Kidney Medicine

I have handled and sold Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root for some time and have heard customers claim that it had produced very satisfactory results in different ailments of the kidneys, liver and bladder. I have nothing but favorable reports at hand and my personal opinion is that there is not anything on the market that will equal Swamp-Root for disease of the kidneys, liver and bladder and I know of a physician who is a very strong believer in the merits of Swamp-Root. Very truly yours,

THE J. M. WATTS MERC. STORE,
J. M. WATTS.

Marine Life.

According to C. R. Shoemaker of the United States National museum, the Danish West Indies offer an interesting field for study in marine life. In one of his expeditions to St. Thomas he found among other specimens, great numbers of a beautiful dark purplish red crab and many species of small, vividly-colored fish swimming about the coral. These were in shades of red and blue, and through the clear waters were beautiful objects.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription othine — double strength — is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Adv.

"Dressmaking Not an Art."

That dressmaking is not an art, but labor, was held by a jury in the United States district court recently, in the case of Albert de Vroye, husband of Marie de Vroye, fashionable dressmaker, says the St. Louis Star. He was fined $1,000 for violation of a federal statute forbidding the importation of contract labor into the United States.

The statute leaves several exceptions, including actors and artists. Shepard Barclay, attorney for De Vroye, contended a skilled dressmaker is an artist.

The prosecuting witness was a Belgian woman. She testified that in 1911 she answered an advertisement inserted by De Vroye in a Brussels newspaper for a premier dressmaker, capable of designing and executing dress patterns. She testified she was hired by De Vroye in Brussels at 375 francs (about $72) a month and brought to the United States.

Edible Varieties May Be Easily Identified With Exercise of a Little Care, Says Agricultural Expert.

Every year there are a few cases of mushroom poisoning. In some instances the individual is only made sick, while in other cases the results are fatal.

It is difficult to lay down any hard and fast rules that can be used to distinguish between edible and poisonous mushrooms. In some cases a species that may be harmless for one individual may cause serious digestive disturbances in another. There is, however, one group of mushrooms that is deadly poisonous. This is the group of Amanitas, says W. W. Robbins of the Colorado Agricultural college. There are a number of species of Amanita, all of which are deadly poisonous. The deadly Amanitas have white gills, a ring about the stem just beneath the cap, and a cup or scales at the base of the stem.

Do not place any reliance in the many popular and traditional tests of poisonous or edible qualities. These tests are entirely worthless. The discoloration of a silver spoon; sinking in water; or brilliant coloration—are no indication of either poisonous or edible qualities. Furthermore, the notion that poisonous mushrooms can be rendered harmless by boiling in water and then washing thoroughly in cold water is erroneous.

One can easily become familiar with a few edible kinds of mushrooms. There are many of these springing up in our lawns, dooryards and along fences. One may feel absolutely safe in using all those mushrooms having black gills which dissolve with age into an inky mass. These, of course, must be eaten before turning black, but usually several stages of ripening will be found in the same clump or group of individuals, so that identification can be made. Among these black gill species are the "shaggy mane," with a more or less bell-shaped, creamy-white cap which becomes shaggy, and the "inky-cap," growing in dense clusters. These two are both common in lawns, gardens, etc., from spring to autumn and are among the best of our edible forms. All of the puff-balls are edible, and excellent if eaten when the flesh is white and solid.

Mushrooms are sometimes soon attacked by worms, and in gathering those which have perhaps stood longer than the others it is well to break off the caps and note whether the worms have worked their way up through the stalk into the cap.

The deadly mushrooms are those which possess the following three characteristics: (1) white gills; (2) a ring on the stem just beneath the cap; and (3) a cup or scales at the base of the stem.

Why Paper Is High.

"I see by the paper," said the Willing Juror, "that there is a great scarcity of rags and they claim that is what causes the high price of paper."

"I reckon for once the newspapers told the truth," said the Grouch.

"Rags is scarce. We got to wear 'em. I have seen more three-year-old straw hats this year than ever I see before.

"I reckon folks is savin' their money to buy Liberty bonds or something, for they are a usin' up a lot of gasoline cleanin' up clothes an' suits they was gonna throw away.

"Used to pick out a suit for its wearin' qualities, but of late years they been runnin' mostly to style. You had to have four suits, one for spring, summer, fall and winter.

"Now you buy one suit and pray it will stick together until the war is over.

"Yes, I reckon the newspapers is right. Rags is scarce. We are wearin' 'em and beatin' the junk man out of an honest living."

He Was a Sport!

That genial and witty soldier, Lord William Beresford, V. C., was once at a ball in India, says London Tit-Bits. The evening being sultry the contriver of the festival had arranged a lot of seats in pairs in the adjoining racquet court, which was pitch dark. During one of the dance intervals Lord William took his partner there to talk politics or what not, and whilst there she dropped a small brooch. Groping about in the dark they could not find it.

"Light a match, will you, Lord William, and then we can see," said the lady. "Why not a bull's-eye lantern whilst we are about it? No, no; let's play fair." Then he stood up, and in a loud voice announced, "Ladies and gentlemen, I am about to light a match." And after a tactful pause he did so.

No Philanthropist.

"So, Mrs. Closeleigh got up a bazaar to help a poor widow pay her rent? I didn't know she was philanthropical."

She isn't. She owns the house the poor widow lives in."

Just Wondering.

"Did you know that he was once the lightweight champion of this town?"

"Was he? I've been wondering where he got his lightweight training. We buy our groceries from him."—Judge.

Tons of Gold Dollars.

The statement that there has just been counted in New York, at the United States assay office, the enormous sum of $765,000,000 in gold may be visualized somewhat when this is translated into ounces, pounds and tons, writes Girard in the Philadelphia Ledger.

While it has been asserted that this sum probably is the largest amount of gold coin and bullion ever accumulated in one place, it is well to remember that only so recently as a year ago there was said to be $800,000,000 in gold and bullion in the Russian State bank.

The sum in New York figures out something like this: There are approximately 39,000,000 ounces or 3,000,000 pounds or 1,646 tons. The figures are not exact.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Chairman Zouck of the State Roads Commission Is Apprehensive Concerning the Future.

To the Editor of The Republican, Oakland, Md.

DEAR SIR: There has been introduced in Congress a bill, known as the Adamson Bill, which is the same one that appeared in the spring of 1916. This bill has for its purpose the abolishment of the license fees charged the residents of the District of Columbia by the State of Maryland for the privilege of using its roads.

Last year we received from Washington licenses $86,988.76 for pneumatic tire vehicles and 3,088.50 for solid tire vehicles or trucks, making a total of $90,077.26. We shall expend $100,000 this year in maintaining the roads in the two counties bordering on the district of Columbia, and the Washington Boulevard.

The money received from the automomobile licenses is the only money which we receive to maintain our State road system, the Legislature of 1916 having removed the one cent State tax, which was formerly applied to the maintenance of State roads. If we are to be deprived of the revenue collected from the Washington cars, it will seriously embarrass this Commission. When the one cent State tax was removed, it was thought that the revenue from the automobile licenses would amount to sufficient to take care of our maintenance, but we find that we are running behind at the rate of about $100,000 or more, per year, and if the Adamson Law goes into effect, it will increase our deficit another $100,000, making a total of $22,000, or more, per annum. In view of the increased cost of material, labor, etc., and the increased amount of traffic which will pass over our roads because of the war, it will be utterly impossible for us to maintain our roads as we have in the past.

When the automobile tax license was first levied we did not have more than five miles of State roads. The charge for licenses has been gradually reduced, notwithstanding the fact that the State road system has been extended until it now comprises about 1,300 miles of modern roads. By dividing the amount of money received by the number of licenses issued, it is found that the State of Maryland is receiving an average of about $6.00 to $7.00 per year for each license or car which is using our roads, at a cost to the motorist of only about one-half cent per mile of road per year.

The District of Columbia is surrounded on three sides by the State of Maryland and on the other side by Virginia. Maryland has built 12 State and State Aid roads to the District Line. The State of Virginia has not built even one. (This comparison is not made to criticise Virginia, but only to show that Maryland has been extremely generous to the District of Columbia.) The only improved roads entering the District from Virginia were built by the Government or by private enterprise and upon which toll-gates have been placed.

The taxpayers of Maryland have made it possible for the automobilists of the District of Columbia to have intercourse with the other States of the Union over modern improved roads.

Maryland has reciprocity with every state and territory within the United States, which extends to our State the same privilige and the use of their many miles of road, but we think it is unfair to allow the same privilege to the District of Columbia, which has only a small number of miles of thickly traveled streets to offer in return. However, any member of Congress or temporary resident of the District of Columbia who has complied with the automobile laws of his own state may use the Maryland roads, unmolested, by displaying his home license.

The taxpayers of Maryland have willingly contributed the $24,000,000, including the $5,000,000, spent upon Baltimore City streets and the Hanover Street Bridge, which has been necessary to complete its modern system of State and State Aid Roads, but with our maintenance cost, as well as our maintenance deficit, increasing, and with our tax rate, increasing each year, it is doubtful, to my mind, whether they will allow the deficit to mount higher and higher, as it will do it we are not to receive the revenue derived from the District of Columbia licenses.

If the maintenance of our roads is to continue, money must be raised in some way. There are only three methods known, namely, first, direct taxation, second, licenses, and third, toll-gates. The Legislature eliminated the first and an effort is now being made to eliminate the second, and if the efforts are successful it does not require an imaginative mind to forsee what will confront the traveling public in the future, which I think everyone will agree will be deplorable.

This is a serious matter to the State of Maryland, and I hope that Congress will see the justice of our asking it not to pass the above-mentioned bill.

Very truly yours,

F. H. ZOUCK, Chairman.

Take Away The Stone.

Mr. Editor: I should like to present some thoughts on a question that is of interest to all and which sometimes perplexes us. We lose our friends by death and we naturally wonder if we shall know them on the other side. Shall we know our friends in heaven? is a question we often ask and one concerning which we do not have as clear a conception as we might have. The fact that there is no position, nor clear revelation on the subject has created some doubt, but there is enough given to establish us in a firm faith and to cheer us amid the hours of bereavement. We must admit that in our views on the subject the feelings of our heart affect to some degree the opinion of the intellect. The affections mingle with reason and evidence and give color to our belief. As we see our loved ones passing from us, we can scarcely give them up; we cannot tolerate the idea that they are lost to us; that we will never see them again or know them if we should meet them. In thought, we enter with them those bright regions and revel amid the glories and beauties of those scenes. We think of them there and try to imagine what they are doing. The thought of their eternal happiness fills us with joy and brings light into the gloom of our sadness. As the stars are hidden from our view by reason of the bright light of the sun, as it arises in the morning, so these though concealed for a time, are not lost to us, only gone on before. As we gather around the lifeless form of a friend, tears flow because that eye is closed forever and that hand will no more be stretched out to us, and the lips that once spoke words of affection are sealed forever; but we look aloft and think of them as welcomed by the angels above to the felicities of glory. They have entered into their heavenly rest; they have taken possession of their mansions.

Some think that the saved soul will be so taken up with the glories that shall be revealed in and to them; so interested in Christ and absorbed in His work that they will not know any one else, but this thought is chilling to the believer's affection, and however much he may desire to know them and to believe he will recognize them there, but few are able to give a satisfactory reason for the hope they indulge. To furnish such proof is the object of this writing.

The question is one of tender interest and great concern to every believer. As he stands and gazes at loved ones who are slipping away and then see the body cold in death, he cannot help asking, Shall I know them on the other side? Are they lost to us? Surely not, only gone before and then with affections intensified they await our arrival at their happy home. When the morning light scatters the gloom of night and the sun illumines the firmament, the stars are not lost, only concealed from our vision; so the saints seine in the moral heavens though we cannot behold them. While the mourners stand around the bedside of the dying and weep because the loved one has gone from us, angels above are welcomning the spirit of the saint and amid the smiles of the Redeemer, the approval of the Master, and the benediction of a reconciled Father, they enter their eternal rest. Friend after friend departs.

"Who hath not lost a friend?
There is no union ties of hearts
That finds not here an end.
Were this frail world our final rest,
Living or dying none were blest."

How the emotions of the soul swell at the thought of these! If we can find any evidence in the Bible to warrant the belief that we may meet and know them, it affords us unspeakable comfort. We think it strange that positive proof is not given in the scriptures, that the nature of our evidence is not such as to allow us to argue the question with mathematical precision and conclusionness, still there is testimony enough to satisfy the longings and sustain the faith of all believers.

In considering this question the first thing that shall occupy our attention is the fact, that there is a universal hope and expectation among mankind that they will know and love their friends in heaven.

In all ages of the world and among all classes, this sentiment has prevailed. Over the darkness of heathenism it shot like a gleam carrying comfort to the heart of the bereaved pagan. Amidst the gloom of superstition and their wanderings on the mountains of error, they have found comfort in the twilight of this doctrine, and so the poor widow as she flung herself on the funeral piere of her husband was sustained by the hope of meeting him again and knowing him. Why should she want to be with him if she would not know him?

Shall this doctrine, which rises like a May morn over the social life of the world, cheering and making it so beautiful, and which too, sets in beauty and grandeur. Shall it be abandoned and lost in the darkness of oblivion? Never! but it will rise on the morn of an eternal day with new beauty and with those glorious bodies that come from the grave will come also holy affections. Suspended ties of affection, like plants in winter, will revive in vernal beauty and bloom in an eternal spring. Here we rest for the present.

GRANTSVILLE.

Miss Wilda Getty entertained the Girl's Club and a number of friends on Monday afternoon, Red Cross work being the diversion. Refreshments were served. On Tuesday afternoon a few ladies spent several hours in Red Cross work at the Victor hotel. Recent receipts by Miss Bevans, chairman of service bureau, were: Locally, $3.00; Catholic church, $3.21; Reformed Sunday school, $4.21; for membership of National Red Cross, $2.50. The money was sent to Mrs. J. C. Renninger, county treasurer, at Oakland.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jenkins and mother, Mrs. Tennant, and Miss Aggie Davis, of Frostburg, were among several motor parties at the Victoria Hotel for Sunday dinner. They also spent a short time with their friend, Mrs. Sara R. Getty.

Miss Bernadine Knecht, of West Salisbury, has been the guest of her cousin, Miss Maud Bevans.

A crowd of fourteen picnicked at the home of Mrs. Fred Livengood Sunday. The party had planned to go to Mountain Lake, but were prevented owing to the rain. However, the big freezer of ice cream, the sandwiches and the other good things were heartily enjoyed by all the guests at the farm house, each contributing to the feast.

Mrs. Bruce Lichty and daughter Hilda, and Mrs. Alice R. Getty and son Oliver, of Meyersdale, were supper guests of Mrs. G. C. Keller, Saturday evening.

Mrs. J. C. Grady and children returned to Midland on Saturday after a three week's visit with relatives here. Miss Irma Swauger accompanied her aunt, Mrs. Grady, on her return to Midland.

Dallas Baer of Greenville township has been the guest for a few days of his aunt, Mrs. C. D. Hershberge. Mr. Baer is a student at Susquehanna University, having completed his first year's course for the ministry, and has many friends both in Grantsville and Somerset county.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Shaw and daughter, Miss Martha of Moscow Mills, Md., and grandson, of Coal Centre, Pa., were guests of Hill Dale farm last Thursday.

The Girl Scout meeting was held at Miss Helen Stanton's home on Thursday night.

Mrs. Eva Bevans spent several days with relatives in Salisbury last week.

S. C. Loechel, of Salisbury, spent several days with his son, W. C. Loechel, this week.

Miss Margaret Getty spent the week end with her friends, Misses Helen and Althea Engle, of "Englewood."

The work of erecting poles for the Electric Light Company is proceeding as rapidly as possible.

Mr. and Mrs. John Zehner and daughter Esther were Frostburg visitors Saturday evening.

Dr. M. F. Broadwater, of Pittsburgh, is visiting his mother, Mrs. Marion Broadwater, at present.

GORTNER

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Beckwith and daughter Mae, are visiting Mrs. Beckwith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Sanders.

Mr. and Mrs. Streib, Mr. and Mrs. Carter, of Baltimore, Md., were recent visitors at Joel Slabaugh's.

Mrs. Tena Murphy and daughter, Miss Marie, of Clarksburg, W. Va., have returned home after a weeks visit with Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Gortner.

Miss Hazel Shoemaker spent Sunday with Miss Leola Schrock.

Miss Josephine Sanders is visiting her sister, Mrs Guy Yutzy, at Crellin.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Wamsley, Dayton Teats and family were Sunday visitors at Noah Slabaugh's.

Misses Hazel Woods and Anna Richards, of Farmington, W. Va., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Martin.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Hardesty, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Moon and child, of Hutton, Mr. and Mrs. Will Feathers, son Darrel and daughter Geraldine, of Crellin, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Will Welch Sunday.

Miss Effie Wamsley spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents at this place.

Miss Lizzie Slabaugh is on the sick list.

Mrs. Dayton Teats and daughter, Rosalene and Sarah Sanders are spending a few days with Lester DeWitt's near Bayard, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Spoerlein and sons were Sunday visitors at Lorenzia Fikes.

There will be church services Sunday morning and evening. Everybody invited.

Benjamin Friend and family were visiting his sisters in Connellsville, Pa., Saturday and Sunday.

NORTH GLADE

Mrs. Winters was thrown from the carriage of J. L. McRobie Sunday morning and had her collar bone broken, Dr. Hinebaugh, of Oakland, was summoned immediately and the patient is now doing well.

A. B. Mason had the misfortune to lose a valuable gold watch recently.

Mrs. Wm. Oss, of Lonaconing, has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Rhodes, the past week.

A. G. Ross and wife, of Oakland, visited Mrs. Ross' mother here recently.

Rev. McCamic held a series of meetings here last week, which were well attended. Revs. Good and Ridings, of Swanton, assisted in the meetings.

On the 18th and 19th of August Supt. Moore will hold quarterly services for us. Let all arrange to come and hear the reverend doctor.

Sunday was Rally Day at the Lutheran chapel. There was splendid music and an interesting address by Rev. Marion upon the occasion.

There will be a picnic at Brenneman's Grove on August 11th.

20 Per Cent Saved on your FORD

Perfection Water Circulator

The 20 per cent. saving in cost of operation is only one of the advantages of the PERFECTION WATER CIRCULATOR. If your motor overheats it means great loss of power due to low induction; motor burns out; pistons "freeze;" burns out lubrication, and finally a ruined motor. By attaching the PERFECTION CIRCULATOR the motor of your Ford car is kept at 195 per cent.—the temperature of highest efficiency. You can put your car through the hardest kind of work—mud, sand, steep hills, continued running on low gear—and still the water in the radiator will not boil. Stop at the dealer noted below and see this device which can be bought for seven dollars and a half. It soon pays for itself in saving on costs and in increased efficiency.

$7.50

GUARANTEE: We absolutely guarantee than whet properly installed you cannot MAKE your Ford boil under running conditions. Even with fan removed it won't overheat. We further absolutely guarantee a saving of gasoline. No test has ever shown less than 9 per cent. and from that up to 45 per cent. We further absolutely guarantee a saving of from one-third to one-half of lubricating oil.

Western Maryland College.

Western Maryland College, at Westminster, Md., appears in our columns this week in an advertisement soliciting the patronage of our people for another year's enrollment.

It has just celebrated at its recent Commencement the completion of its first fifty years. The success of that occasion in every way proclaimed that "Western Maryland" has made a good record and built up a reputation that was enviable. Men and women can be found all over the State doing credit to its training and there are few communities not represented in the enrollment of its recent years. Although it has registered about 3500 students and of these it has graduated over 1000.

Its beautiful location, in the highlands of Maryland, its excellent equipment in buildings and grounds, its well trained faculty, its up-to-date curriculum, and its charges all kept down to reasonable terms make it an attractive place to get an education.

In addition to the usual Classical, Scientific and Historical courses leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts, there are supplementary courses in Music, Elocution, Oratory and Pedagogy. Completion of this last-named course secures the certificate of the State Board of Education.

We commend this Institution to any of our readers who may be considering the question where is my boy or girl to go to College. Adv. 23-13t

MR. N. R. SELBY FOR ASSEMBLY

Former Member Makes Formal Announcement of His Candidacy.

Mr. Nathan R. Selby, of Election District No. 2, makes a formal announcement of his candidacy for the nomination for House of Delegates in The Republican today.

Mr. Selby was a member of the House a number of years ago where he rendered excellent service to his county and State. For many years Mr. Selby was engaged as a public school teacher in the county but more recently has been an extensive agriculturalist and timber dealer. His experience at former sessions of the Legislature as well as his educational abilities makes him an ideal candidate for the position he seeks.

DROPPED DEAD IN ROAD

Wm. G. Wilson, of Kitzmiller, Died Suddenly Tuesday Afternoon.

William G. Wilson, aged about fifty years, residing at Kitzmiller, dropped dead Tuesday afternoon at a point near the farm gate of Daniel Orendorf on the Beckman road, about a mile from Mountain Lake Park, as he in company with his wife were walking from the Park toward their home.

Several men who were engaged in hay making in a field near the road saw the man fall and went to his assistance. Dr. McComas was called to the scene and upon arriving pronounced life extinct, stating that death was due to valvular heart disease, for which the physician had treated the man early in the spring.

The body of the deceased was brought to Oakland and placed in the undertaking establishment of D. E. Bolden where the remains were prepared for burial. Friends came from Kitzmiller Tuesday evening and conveyed the body to that point where interment will be made today.

The deceased is survived by his wife and a number of children.

Bishop Anderson In Oakland.

Bishop W. F. Anderson, of Cincinnati, Ohio, spent Wednesday in Oakland as the guest of Charles S. Davis. The Bishop is thinking of buying and making Oakland his summer home, and while here looked at a number of places. He was accompanied by Dr. Ernest W. Bysshe, of Grenoble, France, who has spent the last eight years in France as manager of the mission work of the M. E. church in that country.

There are at the present time over five hundred thousand orphan children in France as a result of the war. Dr. Bysshe is planning totake large numbers of the orphans and put them on farms owned and operated by the Missionary Society, not only to educate them but to make them self-supporting and is having sent fromth is country the latest and most improved machinery to do all kinds of farm work, and expectsd to revolutionise the farming industry that for years have been carried on by the peasants using their old methods for farming.

WHY NOT SENATOR SPEICHER?

A Largely Signed Letter of Appreciation for What He Has Done and a Demand That He Again Be a Candidate

The following letter signed, by prominent residents of more than two-thirds of the districts of Garrett county, has been received at this office and is published herewith.—Editor Republican.

To the Editor of The Republican.

We appreciate most highly all that Senator Speicher has done for Garrett county during the past eight years as a member of the Upper House at Annapolis, and we believe that now is the time for every Republican of the county to demand that he become the candidate for re-election this fall.

By the ability displayed by him in the State House he has shown to the State at large that he is a man well equipped to handle problems that confront the Nation and State at this time. It will reflect credit upon the electorate of Garrett county to re-elect him for another term and to secure his nomination and election we the undersigned pledge our best efforts.

Nominate Mr. Speicher, if he will become a candidate, and we trust that he will so decide. The time, the opportunity to bury personal differences and send a man to the Senate of Maryland who will be a credit to Garrett county, is at hand.

NINE ACCEPTED BY ARMY BOARD

Twenty Were Examined Yesterday of Whom Ten Were Rejected

These are trying times at the Court House, especially for those who are connected in any way with the army board having in charge the drafting and examination of those called for service in the new National Army.

Yesterday ninety-four men were called for examination. Of this number but twenty were reached by the examining physician owing to the rules laid down by the War Department, which are searching and requires the one undergoing the test to be almost perfect physically.

Of those examined yesterday nine were accepted for service; ten were disqualified and discharged on account of physical disabilities, and one claimed and filed his exemption paper.

Those accepted were Truman Frazee, Harry T. Russell, Roy S. Lichty, Teddy Gaust, Harry M. Stahl, Ernest Gortner, George Baker, Emanuel G. Bittinger and William H. Hansel.

Rejected and discharged: Archibald W. Connell, Ernest J. Wolf, James Martin, Thane O. White, Bert C. Reams, Lewis Cass Hutson, Frank S. Durst, George F. Comp, Chas. H. Hone, Milton Lee McRobie.

But one exemption claim was filed, that being Benj. Walter Myers.

A FRIEND'S ADVICE

Woman Saved From a Serious Surgical Operation.

Louisville, Ky.—"For four years I suffered from female troubles, headaches, and nervousness. I could not sleep, had no appetite and it hurt me to walk. If I tried to do any work, I would have to lie down before it was finished. The doctors said I would have to be operated on and I simply broke down. A friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the result is I feel like a new woman. I am well and strong, do all my own house work and have an eight pound baby girl. I know Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation which every woman dreads."—Mrs. NELLIE FISHBACK, 1521 Christy Ave., Louisville, Ky.

Everyone naturally dreads the surgeon's knife. Sometimes nothing else will do, but many times Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved the patient and made an operation unnecessary.

If you have any symptom about which you would like to know, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for helpful advice given free.

KIDNEY TROUBLE Is a deceptive disease—thousands have it and don't know it. If you want good results you can make no mistake by using Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney medicine. At druggists in fifty cent and dollar sizes. Sample size bottle by Parcel Post, also pamphlet telling you about it. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Companions in Suffering.

"I'm glad this car isn't heavy enough to hurt you," said Mr. Chuggins to the man he had run over.

"It's mighty uncomfortable under there, just the same."

Gander Sixty-Six Years Old.

An aged gander lives at Islay, Scotland. It is the property of a Mr. MacLachlan, and is now sixty-six years old. For 45 years it belonged to the proprietor of a hotel at Bridgend, Scotland. Twenty-one years ago the father-in-law of the present owner bought it. Mr. MacLachlan says that the gander looks as well and as young and seems as active as it ever did. There is no doubt about its age.

Funny Big Boy Scouts.

Two Ohio members of the officers' reserve corps at Fort Benjamin Harrison were walking along East Tenth street, near the technical high school campus, two weeks ago. They passed a group of small boys, who gazed, so the men thought, in tremendous admiration and awe. Just as the near-officers-maybe puffed out their chests in just pride, one of the young irrepressibles shouted:

"Oh, Jimmy, look at the funny big Boy Scouts."—Indianapolis News.

Flesh Color.

The large, portly colored man entered the drug store and looked around uncertainly.

"Young man," he said to the clerk confidentially, "has you got any letter paper and envelopes with flesh-colored borders?"

"Was it mourning paper you wished for, sir?" inquired the clever clerk.

"You's struck it disactly! But I dis-remember the name. Gib me a box of it, if you please, sah."

Patriotism.

"Have you a German flag for a penny?" was the surprising request made by Charles Morris, the four-year-old son of Jesse B. Morris of Cannelton, Ind., a few days ago, when he entered a store in the neighborhood of his home where the various standards of the allies are kept for sale, says the Indianapolis News. The young woman behind the counter felt a curiosity to understand the demand.

"Why, Charles, what in the world do you want with a German flag?" she inquired.

Suspicions of pro-German sentiment were promptly dispelled by the fierce declaration:

"I want to tear it up."

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. SELLERS, Acting Director of the Sunday School Course in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR JULY 29

GOD'S GRACIOUS INVITATION.

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 55:1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near.—Isa. 55:6.

The Bible is throughout a forward looking book. No matter how dark the light, it looks forward to the dawn of a new and better day. Whenever written, the prophet looks forward toward the end of the Babylonian exile. Isaiah died about 142 years before that event. That scene is laid in Babylonia. Isaiah prophesied in Jerusalem.

I. The Invitation, (vv. 1-8) In order to understand the fullness and blessedness of this invitation, we should read in its connection chapters 53 and 54. In chapter 53 we have a prophecy and vision of the Messiah, making his atonement for sins, "wounded for our transgressions." Again we have in this connection a picture of the Messiah as our leader and Savior. In chapter 55 we have the invitation and joyous welcome to the beautiful city which he is establishing for us.

(1) Who Is Invited? The word "Ho" is perhaps an abbreviation of the word "Hold," used to excite attention. This invitation is extended to every one: (a) the "thirsty," to those who are needy; (b) the poor and the rich; those "without money," and the supply is abundant, even as the water. Every one is invited without limitation or distinction. The greatness of a man's spirit is measured by the numbers of his desires and thirsts, by their qualities and by his capacities or the intensity of his thirst. Those invited were to have "wine," a luxury, and "milk," a staple necessity, without money and without price. The currency of the kingdom of Heaven is grace (v. 1).

(2) Who Will Come? (v. 3). Only those who are listening and who are attentive. Many fail of eternal life because they do not pay attention to the claims of religion. "Come unto me," (Matt. 11:28). We go to God for salvation and help, and we find life. Life is more than mere existence. It is the natural, harmonious, joyous activity of every part of our being. The result of coming is, "your soul shall live," and the surety of it is, "an everlasting covenant." Literally, an agreement with promises which can never be broken, namely, "the sure mercies of David." (See II Sam. 12:29; I Cor. 17:7-27; Ps. 89:1-4; also Luke 20:41, 44). We are bought but we did not pay the price. The mercies of David are the antitype of our Savior; the mercy of grace. True satisfaction is in its right order. (See vv. 2, 3). Christ is a faithful witness, the exalted one, (v. 5) to this covenant.

(3) When to Come (v. 6). While he may be found, and while he is near, implying a time when he may not be found and a time when he will not be near. All of God's promises are conditional.

(4) The Way to Come (v. 7). Forsake open sin, turn from unrighteous thought, turn to the Lord and receive his "multiplied pardon." Man is everywhere depicted in the Scriptures as wandering away from the true God and there is no salvation if we insist on continuing in sin.

II. The Transformation (vv. 8-13). God's promises have back of them all the power of the universe and are as certain as the process of the seasons. In working out his transformation in the character of man, we are to think his thoughts after him. We see and know only very little of this spirit, but God sees, knows and controls the universe, which is at his command. (I Cor. 10:13; Phil. 4:19). We are to enter into his ways, and his ways are as the heavens, higher than those of the earth. Having entered into his ways we are to bring his fruits (see John 15). If the Divine seed (v. 11) is implanted within us, then we may expect to see the fruits of the kingdom of God, which are born of the spirit. (Gal. 5:22-26). This transformation involves service, for we are to have a mission, "go out to all the earth," being led by the Messiah and thus receive "joy and peace." As sure as "the rain cometh down and the snow from heaven and returneth not but watereth the earth," so is the seed of the Word in the hands of the sower, to become bread to the eater. As we go forth we have his promise (v. 11) that, "it shall not return void but shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."

As a result the "thorns" (evil) shall be displaced by "fig trees" (good). God's word bears fruit in implanted lives. (John 6:33; James 1:18; I Peter 1:23). God calls this word, which is spoken of by the prophet, "My word." What the prophet says, God says. What an inspired man says, God inspires him to say. God's promise will be consummated in redeeming society, as well as redeeming creation (vv. 12,13; Ch. 35:10; 49:9,10; 51:11; Jer. 31:12-14; Isa. 35:1,2). The language about the mountains and hills breaking forth into singing, is interpreted in Psalms 65:11,13.

IDEA JUST SUITED DR. HALE

Famous Minister Declares That He Had Always Wanted His Church Called "The Exeter Club."

The sexton of Edward Everett Hale's church suffered from that convenient form of deafness that prevented a man from hearing what he does not wish to hear and enables him to hear what he does wish to hear. Occasionally, when sweeping the sidewalk in front of the church, some stranger would ask him for information, and his usual answer was a wave of the hand. "I'm totally deaf, totally deaf. You will have to ask someone in the church."

It often happened that Doctor Hale, in the midst of a busy day, would find the luncheon hour at hand and an important appointment still unmet. It was his custom to invite his caller into his study, and ask the janitress to make an oyster stew. The sexton resented Doctor Hale's informality.

The time came for a new sign to be placed on the front of the church, and Doctor Hale and the assistant pastor were standing in the vestry aisle discussing just what the wording of it should be. To their surprise the conversation was suddenly interrupted by the deaf sexton who stood far enough away to make doubtful the ability of a normal person's overhearing what had been said. "I'll tell you what to put on that sign!" he exclaimed. "'Come in! Everybody welcome! Meals served at all hours of the day and night!'"

"All right," said Doctor Hale quickly. "That's what we will do. I've always wanted to call the church 'The Exeter Club!'"—Youth's Companion.

In His Pocket.

To prevent private automobiles entering the road at Fort Benjamin Harrison leading past the quartermaster's office, and interfering with government hauling, a civilian employee has been placed at the junction of the quartermaster's road with the main road entering the post from the south. It is his job to permit only automobiles bearing Q. M. D. signs to pass him, says the Indianapolis News.

The other day an automobile, plainly a private machine and driven by a liveried chauffeur, turned down the forbidden road.

"Hey, where you goin'? Have you got a pass?" shouted the traffic man.

The chauffeur nodded "Yes."

"Where you got it?" the traffic "cop" continued.

"I've got it here in my pocket," the chauffeur replied.

"All right, then, go ahead," the traffic "cop" ordered, and the chauffeur winked as he shifted gears and started down the road.

It's Poor Economy to Endure a Bad Back

IN these days of rising prices, we need every ounce of strength and the ability to do a full day's work every day. The man or woman with weak kidneys is half crippled. Sore, aching kidneys; lame, stiff back, headache, dizzy spells, a dull, tired feeling and urinary disorders are daily sources of distress. You can't afford to neglect kidney weakness and make it easy for gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease to take you. Get a box of Doan's Kidney Pills today. They have helped thousands. They should help you.

Personal Reports of Real Cases

A PENNSYLVANIA CASE.

Daniel Straub, retired carpenter, 813 E. Russell St., Philadelphia, Pa., says: "Hard work and heavy lifting disordered my kidneys and my back gave out. I could hardly stoop or straighten on account of the severe pain and I often got terribly dizzy. Finally I had to lay off from work. I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and they fixed me up all right. My back and kidneys have since been in good shape and I have enjoyed fine health. Doan's Kidney Pills deserve all the credit for my healthy condition."

A VIRGINIA CASE.

Mrs. M. A. Eanes, 708 Polk St., Lynchburg, Va., says: "I had been a constant sufferer from kidney complaint and rheumatic pains for four years. My hands were so swollen and sore I couldn't use them and I had sharp pains through my kidneys. I suffered as no tongue can tell. When I happened to read about Doan's Kidney Pills, I began using them and the swelling and pain soon left. My kidneys stopped bothering me that way, too, and I am glad to say I have never had any sign of kidney complaint since."

New Method of Waterproofing.

A French scientist has recently recommended a comparatively simple formula for waterproofing shoes and clothing. It is a solution of paraffin and gasoline, the proportion being approximately one avoirdupois ounce of paraffin to one quart of gasoline. For shoes it can be applied warm, with a brush, while clothes can be dipped into it cold. The solution tends to preserve the softness and color of the material. Uniforms can be treated with it without removing the buttons or insignia.

Absent-Mindedness.

A parson noted for his absent-mindedness had a habit of forgetting something he intended to say in the pulpit. Then, after sitting down, he would rise up again and begin his supplementary remarks with, "By the way."

Recently he finished his prayer, hesitated, forgot what he was about, and sat down abruptly without closing. In a moment, however, he rose, pointed his finger at his amazed congregation, and exclaimed:

"Oh, by the way, 'Amen.'"—Harper's Magazine.

Poultry Flocks Smaller.

Reports recently gathered concerning 5,298 flocks of poultry on farms and in small towns in all parts of the country show that the average number of hens per flock this year is 107, as compared with 146 in 1914. This information, which was obtained by an incubator manufacturer in the middle West, indicates that shortage of supply has been an important factor in producing present high prices for poultry and eggs. It appears that a very considerable number of poultry raisers have sacrificed many of their hens for the sake of immediate profits—a policy the effects of which are now being felt by the entire country.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

ARMY EXEMPTION BOARD IN SESSION

Examination of Those Drafted Was Begun Yesterday Morning.

Yesterday morning at eight o'clock the local board of Garrett county, composed of Mr. Thomas J. Johnson, Clerk E. Z. Tower and Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh, who have in charge the examination of those drafted for service in the United States Army, met at the court house where they begun the onerous work mapped out for them under the Selective Service Law passed by Congress.

Those called for the first days examination numbered ninety-seven men. A like number will be examined today and tomorrow ninety-six will be before the board, making a total of two hundred and ninety men to be examined physically.

TO THE DRAFTED.

To you fortunate ones who are about to go forward to that long battle line where the armies of autocracy and oppression are facing the armies of the free, congratulations and God speed!

You go, not as reluctant victims of misfortune or a fatal chance, but rather as our chosen ones; the pick and flower of our manhood, whole of body, sound in mind and spirit—what all of us should like to be. And we who are too old or too weak, or in some other respect unfitted to go in body, shall go with you in spirit. We know that we ask much of you, and we expect much, for we expect things in keeping with our great traditions—things born of the spirit of Nathan Hale, but we know that we shall not be disappointed.

In imagination and in sympathy we shall be there with you on the firing line, and at home we shall do all that we can to make you comfortable and content. We shall pray that you may return in safety, but even more fervently we shall pray that your courage may not flag or the edge of your determination be dulled.

You are to fight in the noblest cause in which man ever took up arms, and a Nation the most generous in all the world to her soldier sons. You go with her blessing, for she trusts you; and be sure that whether you return or not she will hold your names in honor and grateful memory until the end of time —Youth's Companion.

HOW TO CAN STRING BEANS

Method Recommended for Use in The South.

String beans for canning should be small, tender, fresh, and well sorted. When the beans within the pod have grown to any size, canning is more difficult and the product of poorer quality from a commercial standpoint. String the beans and cut them into 2-inch lengths; cutting diagonally or "on the bias" gives a pretty product. In glass they may be canned whole, packed log-cabin fashion in square jars. Blanch in boiling water for three to eigh minutes or until the pod will bend without breaking, and plunge into cold water for an instant. Drain well, pack quickly, and cover with brine made by adding 2½ ounces of salt to a gallon of water. Put the rubber in place and adjust the cap losely. When the beans are young and tender allow packed quart containers to remain in water bath at boiling temperature two hours continuously, or, if more mature beans are packed, an hour on each of three successive days. Immediately after sterilizing the filled jar tighten the cap secarley and allow jars to cool away from and draft. Store in a cool, dry, dark place.

DROWNED AT PITTSBURGH

Carroll, Son of Mr. Isaac A. Paugh, Near Oakland, Lost Life Sunday.

Carroll, aged twenty-three years, son of Mr. and Mrs Isaac Allen Paugh, of near Oakland, was drowned at Pittsburgh Sunday while bathing in the river at that city. His body was recovered Monday and was brought to Oakland Tuesday morning, the funeral occurring at Deer Park yesterday.

The young man was employed in one of the steel mills of Pittsburgh for several months past, having recently visited his home near town. Last winter he was the victim of a powder explosion in a mine at Dodson, this county, and was badly burned. He was an excellent young man and was highly esteemed by all.

Dr. C. J. Maust, veterinary physician and surgeon, has opened an office over Bonig's store, Grantsville, Md., and will be at the service of the public in the future.—Advertisement.

COAL OPERATORS

Largely Attended Meeting To Be Held at Deer Park.

Invitations have been sent out by R. D. Lawson, secretary of the Central West Virginia Coal Operators' Association, to attend a two-day mass meeting of all coal operators in central and northern West Virginia to be held at Deer Park, Md., on August 10 and 11.

Among the prominent men who will attend the meeting are F. S. Peabody, chairman of the coal committee of the National Council of Defense; W. J. Harris, chairman of the Federal Trade Committee, and ex-Governor John F. Fort, a member of the Federal Trade Commission.

During the two-day session these prominent men from Washington will give information on the present status of coal, as well as the allotment of coal covering government requirements. These are the big subjects before the West Virginia coal operators at this time.

Among the other subjects that will be discussed is the method by which the coal operator's association in this State may co-operate with the National Coal Operators' Association that was just recently organized in Washington.

The mass meeting will be brought to a close Saturday evening, August 11 with a big banquet.

POTATO SPRAYING

Demonstration Will Be Given Shortly.

The Extension Service of the Maryland State College of Agriculture is planning to give some potato spraying demonstrations in the vicinity of Oakland. A new Watson triplex traction sprayer has been shipped here together with chemicals for doing the work. These will be furnished free, and also the service of a man who will go with the sprayer from field to field. The co-operating growers will be requested to furnish one man and a team while the spraying is being done on his place and he will drive the sprayer to the next place after his work is done. The time required to do the spraying will be approximately one hour for mixing and applying the materials.

Any person wishing a demonstration should give their names together with their potato acreage to County Agent Middleton so that the field may be examined to see whether it is suitable for demonstration or not.

GRANTSVILLE.

That interest in the Red Cross movement is daily growing was manifested Thursday evening when a Red Cross social was given under the auspices of Mrs. C. S. Zeller, and Miss Marie Connor, assisted by the former's husband, Mrs. D. M. Zeller, Mrs. Irene Hayes and Miss Gertrude Hone. Icecream, cake, sandwiches and coffee were served, by the ladies. The tables were placed on the lawn and in Mr. Zeller's barber shop. The ladies deserve great credit for their achievement, as nearly $10 was cleared for the cause.

Mrs. J. C. McCullough, of Friendsville, entertained the Grantsville sewing club at a most charmingly appointed luncheon on Thursday last at her beautiful home in Friendsville. Not all the members, unfortunately, were able to be present. Those who enjoyed the Friendsville trip were Mesdames C. H. Bill, John Zehner, J. O. Getty, C. A. Bender, G. C. Keller, C. B. Getty; Misses Gertrude Hone, Lulu Shaw and Ethel Broadwater. The two first mentioned ladies went up with C. H. Bill in his Dort car, and the others were taken over by Stewart Rodamer in a garage Buick car. The luncheon was at 12 o'clock. The afternoon was spent on the big cozy porch and in the library, where the gifted daughters of the hostess, Misses Claudine and Maria, entertained with instrumental and vocal music. The party returned at 6 o'clock in the evening, after a delightful day.

The M. E. Ladie's Aid were most delightfully entertained by Mrs. Ira S. Wright at her home a few miles from Grantsville, Saturday afternoon. The ladies present included Mesdames Ralph Engle, Ellen Younkin, Chas. Younkin, Susan Durst, W. J. Wright, Marshal Beachy, Ward Beachy, Michael Nathan, Miss Theresa Slicer and Miss Ethel Broadwater. A dainty collation was served at close of the afternoon.

Mrs. J. J. Glotfelty entertained the Ladies Aid Society of the Reformed church on Saturday afternoon at her home near Grantsville. The ladies spent the afternoon at sewing on the big cool porch. Those present were Mesdames G. J. Gnagey, Ida Hershberger, H. P. Miller, Fred Livengood, G. C. Keller, Goddard Doerr, J. A. Beachy, Chas. Getty, J. U. Stanton, W. C. Loechel, Misses Ina Spitznas, Lulu Warnick and Grace Yutzy. Following the afternoon's work the hostess and daughter, Miss Thelma, served pie a la mode, cake and coffee, to the guests.

Communion services were held at the Lutheran church Sunday morning, with preparatory services on Thursday evening. The installation of Albert Swauger and L. H. Diefenbach as elder and deacon, respectively, took place at the Sunday service. Acquisitions to membership: By letter—from Frostburg charge, Mrs. J. J. Bender; by confirmation—Arnold and Cora Jenkins. Infant baptism—Daniel Olen Meyers, Mary Katherine Schrock, Eva Lucile Durst and John Luther Horchler.

Services were held in the Catholic church on Sunday morning and in the Reformed church Sunday night. Rev. L. N. Wilson, pastor of the latter church delivered a stirring sermon from the text "Blessed are the Pure in Heart."

Master Hess Winterberg, of Lancaster, Pa., who has been the guest of his grandmother, Mrs. Sophia Winterber, had the misfortune to fall from the barn loft on Saturday and break his left arm near the wrist. The child was taken to a physician who immediately set the injured member which, while painful is doing nicely.

The three volunteer soldiers, Earle and Fay Miller and Harry Gingerich, left this week for Cumberland from which place, along with the other boys of Maryland Company G. they will start for Alabama to enter training. A chicken roast was given in their honor at the river one night last week, a number of their friends planing the event. Those who were drafted will not leave for several weeks.

Among the absent sons of Grantsville parents who will have to answer to their country's call under the recent draft law are Dr. M. F. Broadwater, of Pittsburgh, son of Mrs. Marion Broadwater; E. H. Reppert, of Hepzibah, W. Va., son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Getty, and Dr. B. T. Keller and Wm. G. Keller, of Wilmington, Del., sons of Dr. and Mrs. G. C. Keller. All are loyal patriots and stand ready and willing for their country's service.

Fred Livengood of this place has been appointed to the position known as "Community Man," whose duty it is to inspect farms in the interest of the agricultural department and co-operate with the farmers in an endeavor to secure farm help. Mr. Livengood is popular, capable and intelligent, three requisites which fit him for the position.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Rev. Dr. S. K. Arbuthnot and family, of Buckhannon, W. Va., spent last week here. They left Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Flowers and child accompanied by Mr. Wm. Hickman, all of Baltimore, spent the latter part of last week with friends here, returning to their homes Sunday morning.

The hotels and boarding houses are fast filling up in fact it is difficult to get entertainment in any of the boarding houses.

We have had a pest of mosquitoes for the first time in the history of the Park, probably by reason of failing to properly clean up the grounds. Great winrows of leaves were left to rot and become water soaked, making fine hatcheries for these pests.

A meeting of the community was held Wednesday morning of last week but was again adjourned until the 21st inst. The light and sidewalk problems are to be considered among other things.

The Moody Institute will begin on the 13th and close on the 20th. Many are already arriving to attend this meeting. Our country folks should attend in large numbers, especially at night and on the two Sundays. Everything is free.

John Hayden and family, of Rowlesburg, spent Sunday here.

Mr. L. A. Rudisill is again in charge of the office of the Association, having been installed Tuesday on account of the illness of Mr. Westwood, who went to his home in Wheeling that day.

The operetta presented by the Oakland young ladies and gentlemen and the other numbers of the program for the public library benefit, at the amphitheatre Tuesday evening, was patronized by more than a hundred of the Park people, all of whom expressed their appreciation of the efforts of the Oakland people.

Operated On For Appendicitis.

Mrs. George Warnick, wife of County Commissioner Warnick of Bloomington, was stricken with appendicitis on last Friday and on Saturday was brought to Oakland and placed in the Home Sanatorium where she was operated upon for the trouble. Mrs. Warnick's condition today is satisfactory.

Woman Watchmen.

Mrs. John King, of Mountain Lake Park, has been placed at the Second street crossing in Oakland as watchman, taking the place of a man who has gone to work as a trackman.

The body of Scott Gilpin, Jr., whose death occurred at Pierce, W. Va., on Monday, was taken through Oakland yesterday morning to Swanton where interment was made. The remains were accompanied by a large delegation of Eagles and Odd Fellows, of which organizations he was a member, and also by the band of Pierce. The cause of death was tuberculosis, with which the deceased was afflicted for more than a year. He was aged about thirty years.

DEER PARK'S ANNUAL EVENT

Bazaar To Be Held on August 18th In Hotel Grounds.

The Deer Park Improvement Society will hold its annual bazaar in the grove in the rear of the Deer Park Hotel, at the band stand, opposite the cottages, occupied by many of the ladies of Baltimore who will take an active part with the officers and active workers of this much appreciated organization on August 18th from 3 to 6 p. m.

Mr. James A. Annan is president. Mrs. Annan is President of the advisory committee, assisted by Mrs. L. D. Thrasher, Mrs. Florence Apsley, Mrs. John S. Clary, Mrs. Frank H. Thrasher and the Misses Thrasher.

Mrs. Josias Pennington is President of the Hotel Cottages, assisted by many of the prominent ladies of Baltimore, who year after year have done a noble work in behalf of this much appreciated work, and now as three of their faithful workers have gone to their reward, viz: Mrs. J. Swan Frick, Mrs. G. W. Haulenbeek and that prince of gentlemen, the late Dr. J. K. Mitchell, of Philadelphia, all of whom will be sadly missed, and lamented by this organization and its faithful workers, especially the ladies of the town, who have with their own fingers made so many useful articles which will be exposed for sale at the coming bazaar.

There's a Right Way To Do Everything. Napoleon Knew This

By MOSS.

MR. BUSINESS MAN, don't ditch this. READ IT.

Advertising consists of HAMMERING AWAY at the same point until the inert covering of the public mind is penetrated.

Advertising is the SYSTEMATIC sowing of seed, not the scattering of salt on the desert.

Advertising is the STEADY plying of the ax of publicity upon the tree of obscurity until the tree is cut down.

Perhaps you are the kind of merchant or manufacturer who has heretofore bought space for one insertion of an ad, and then resisted all efforts of our solicitors to get you to follow it up, or you have followed it up when too late.

One tap of the hammer, one blow of the ax, is not enough. Scattering a handful of seeds never raises a crop in rows.

You can't CONVINCE people that your goods are reliable if your advertising is UNRELIABLE.

Napoleon never would have been Napoleon if he had not been the most DARING, most CONSISTENT planner and campaigner of the age.

Examiners' Notice

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the said new public county road, beginning for the same at Irvin Custer's shop on the Swanton and Bittinger road, and following the old road through the lands of Irvin Custer, Lydia S. Brenneman, Ida F. Bernard and Columbus Mason, thence by the most practiable route through the lands of the late M. M. Armstrong, Military Lots Nos. 2020 and 2022, to intersect the Oakland road at a point near Josiah Beckman's place, a distance of about two miles, and examine whether the said new road should be viewed will meet on the 27th day of August, 1917, for such purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said new road, and if so, to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

Silver's Light Draft "Forty" and "Sixty" Silo Fillers

Especially Suited for 4 to 8 h. p. Gas Engines—Fill Highest Silos With Ease

What They Have Done For Others

"Six tons an hour easily—not a second's trouble".....''Keeps 3 men and 3 teams busy".....''Fills 75 ton silo with 8 horse gas engine".....''My 6 H. P. gas engine runs No. 40 with ease".....''Filled 40 foot silo in two days".....''Best I ever saw".....''No 60 filled 84 tons in 15 hours on 2 inch cut".....''Fills 12x30 silo with No. 60 with 4 H. P. gas engine".....''Filled 73 tons in 12 hours with 7 H. P. Made grand feed, never clogged once.

These machines must not be confused with the kind commonly offered by many firms or mail order houses. They all cut corn—and some of them elevate—but there the comparison ends.

Here's what you get in the Forty and Sixty "Ohio" Machines:

The famous power-saving direct drive cylinder type construction.
A friction reverse mechanism that operates at finger pressure without slightest strain.
A single lever control for stopping, starting or reversing.
A complete traveling feed table with wide flaring sides and solid hardwood frame—mortised, tenoned and double pinned (frames made 28 years ago still in use.)
A heavy 19-16 inch steel knife shaft with latest type of patented knife heads and knife adjustments for acurate shear cut at all times.
Heavy electric welded fan case and paddles.
Direct suction to knives and blower fans without use of auger.
"Safety first" powerful blast, low speed fan.
Easily removable knives and cutter bar for sharpening, replacement, etc.

The "Forty" and "Sixty" OHIO Blowers have been in actual service under the most severe conditions. What they have done for others is the best evidence of what they will do for you.

How A Thousand Dollars Was Lost

A MAN who received a legacy kept the money in his home until his death. At that time the administrator of his estate discovered that the money would have earned over a thousand dollars, if it had been deposited in an interest bearing account at the Bank. This comfortable sum was lost as a result of the money being idle during its owner's life. The money was also constantly subject to loss by fire or burglary as well as being idle. Do not allow money to remain idle at home; but deposit it with this Bank for safety and interest earnings.

MOTORCYCLE ACCIDENT

Charles Rodeheaver Seriously Injured at Grantsville Saturday.

Last Saturday afternoon Charles Rodeheaver, of Sand Flat, six miles north of Oakland, met with a most painful accident when his motorcycle was wrecked by the muffler becoming disconnected and falling beneath the rear wheel of the machine.

It is said that the rider was going at a pretty stiff gait and as he approached the Casselman River bridge, just east of Grantsville, the mechanism of the machine fell to the roadway and immediately under the rear wheel which caused it to lift more than two feet into the air and threw Rodeheaver headforemost over the handlebars and within a few inches of the guard walls of the bridge. He fell upon his left shoulder, breaking his collarbone and lacerating his forearm besides breaking his nose and suffering other less serious injuries.

First aid was rendered the young man at Grantsville and he was later brought to Oakland where his injuries were dressed by Dr. Darby.

The motorcycle is practically a total wreck.

Rev. S. E. Wicker, pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran church, left Oakland Monday morning for a visit of three weeks to his parents and other relatives at Altoona, Pa. During his absence from Oakland his pulpit will be filled by Rev. E. Roy Hauser, of Altoona, who with Mrs. Hauser are visiting the latter's parents near Oakland, having arrived Tuesday evening.

The Secrets of the Hohenzollerns

STARTLING EXPOSURE OF INNER LIFE OF KAISER AND CROWN PRINCE AS TOLD BY COUNT ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX

EDITORIAL NOTE. — William LeQueux, who here chronicles for his friend, Count Ernst von Heltzendorff, the latter's revelations of the inner life of the imperial German court, has long been recognized throughout Europe as the possessor of its innermost secrets.

The English "Who's Who" says of him: "He has intimate knowledge of the secret service of Continental countries and is considered by the government (of Great Britain) an authority on such matters." Another authority says: "Few people have been more closely associated with or know more of the astounding inner machinery of Germany than he."

LeQueux probably has more sources of secret information at his command than any contemporary in civil life, and for the last six years the British Government has made valuable use of his vast store of secret information through a specially organized department with which LeQueux works as a voluntary assistant.

Count von Heltzendorff became an intimate of LeQueux several years prior to the outbreak of the war; he has been living in retirement in France since August, 1914, and it was there that LeQueux received from the crown prince's late personal adjutant permission to make public these revelations of the inner life of the Hohenzollerns—that the democracies of the world might come to know the real, but heretofore hidden, personalities of the two dominant members of the autocracy they are now arrayed against.

The Plot Against Princess Louisa

THE TRUTH of the plot which caused the downfall of the unfortunate and much-maligned imperial Princess Louisa Antoinette Marie, archduchess of Austria and wife of Friedrich-August, now the reigning king of Saxony, has never yet been revealed.

I, of course, knew the charming imperial highness, the Crown Princess Louisa of Saxony, as she often came on visits to the kaiserin, but I had never spoken much with her until at Easter, 1902, the emperor went to visit Dresden. He took with him, among other people, one of his untitled boon companions, Judicial Councilor Lohlein, a stout, flabby-faced hanger-on, who at the time possessed great influence over him.

Louisa was the most popular woman in Saxony, and deservedly so, for hers had been a love match.

After her marriage to the Saxon crown prince the kaiser, in one of his whimsical moods, became greatly attached to her because of her frankness, her love of outdoor life, and her high educational attainments, hence we often had her visiting at Potsdam or at the Berlin Schloss. She was known to be one of the few feminine royalties in whom the kaiser took the slightest interest.

At the grand ball of Easter I found myself chatting with Louisa, who, I recollect, wore a most charming and artistic gown of sea-green chiffon, decollete, of course, with pink carnations in her hair and a few diamonds upon her corsage, as well as the Order of St. Elizabeth and her magnificent rope of matched pearls, which went twice round her neck and reached to her knees—a historic set which had once belonged to Marie Antoinette.

The Story of the Crown Prince Told.

As we stood chatting in a corner of the room, watching the scene of unusual brilliancy because of the kaiser's presence, the princess turned to me:

"Well, a curious thing happened here about a month ago," she said. "I was—" At that moment the emperor, in the uniform of the Second regiment of Saxon Grenadiers, of which he was chief, and wearing the Order of Crancelin of the House of Saxony, strode up, and, standing before us, exclaimed:

"Well, Louisa? What is the very interesting topic of conversation, eh?"

Her imperial highness hesitated, as though endeavoring to avoid an explanation, but next second she waved her lace fan quickly and said:

"Well, recently Friedrich-August and myself have moved into rooms in the older wing of the palace—rooms that have not been occupied for nearly forty years. They are old-world, charming, and remind me constantly of Augustus the Strong and the times in which he lived. Just about a month ago the king and queen of Roumania were paying us a visit. We were at dinner, and while we were all laughing and talking, for 'Carmen Sylva' had been telling us one of her stories, we heard a great clatter of horses' hoofs and the heavy rumble of wheels, just as though a stage coach was crossing the small courtyard. All of us listened, and in the silence we heard it receding quite distinctly. I at once sent my lady-in-waiting to ascertain who had arrived or departed, four-wheeled coaches being quite unusual nowadays. It seemed just as though the coach had driven out of the palace gate. The message brought back from the guard-room was that no carriage had entered or left. I told this to those around the table, and the queen of Roumania, who had taken much interest in omens and folk-lore, seated opposite me, seemed much impressed, and even perturbed."

"Then the noise you heard must have been an uncanny one, eh?" asked the emperor, deeply interested.

"Quite. Two of the women at the table declared that it must have been thunder, and then the conversation proceeded. I, however, confess to your majesty that I was very much puzzled, and the more so because only two nights ago, while we sat at dinner, Friedrich-August and myself en famille, we heard exactly the same sounds again!"

"Really!" laughed the emperor. "Quite uncanny. I hope, here in Dresden, you are not believing in spooks, as London society believes in them."

"Not at all," said the princess earnestly. "I don't believe in omens. But, curiously enough, the king told me yesterday that his two old aunts, who formerly lived in our wing of the palace, had sometimes heard the clatter of horses' hoofs, the jingle of harness, the grinding of brakes, and the rumbling of heavy carriage wheels."

"H'm!" grunted the emperor. "I've heard that same story before, Louisa. The departing coach means trouble to the reigning family."

"That is exactly what the king said to me only last evening," answered Louisa frankly. "Does it mean trouble to me, I wonder?"

"Certainly not," I declared. "Your imperial highness need not worry for one moment over such things. Nobody nowadays regards such phenomena as presage of evil. There is no doubt some perfectly natural explanation of the sounds. Every old palace, castle and even private house, has its traditions."

The Kaiser's Merry Mood.

Then the emperor, after acknowledging the salute of Baron Georg von Metzsch, controller of the royal household—a tall, thin, crafty-eyed man, with hair tinged with gray, and wearing a dark blue uniform and many decorations—changed the topic of conversation.

The kaiser was in particularly merry mood that night. He had gone to Dresden against his inclination, for he had long ago arranged an Easter review on the Tempelhofer Feld, but the visit was, I knew, for the purpose of consultation in secret with the king of Saxony.

Several times I wondered upon what his majesty of Saxony had stumbled. That morning the emperor and king had been closeted alone together for fully three hours, and the outcome of the secret conference seemed to have put the all-highest into a most excellent mood.

The Saxon crown prince and his wife were at that time a most devoted couple, though all of us knew that the modern ideas Louisa had brought to Dresden from the Hapsburg court had much shocked old King George and his consort. The Saxon court was unused to a pretty women with buoyant spirits rejoicing in life with a capital "L."

According to the court whisperings, trouble had started a few days after marriage, when the king, having given his daughter-in-law a tiara of diamonds, a royal heirloom, with strict injunctions to wear them just as they were—a style of the seventeenth century—he one evening at the opera saw her wearing the stones re-set in that style known as art nouveau. The king became furious, and ordered them to be set again in their original settings, whereupon Louisa coolly returned the present.

Such was the commencement of the old king's ill-feeling toward her.

The state ball that night was certainly a brilliant one for such a small court, and next day we all returned to Potsdam. Louisa, in a depressed mood, for while dancing with Count von Castell Rudenhausen of the Prussian Guard her lovely rope of pearls had suddenly parted as though cut by a knife.

A Mysterious Absence.

Before we left Dresden, however, I met the crown princess in one of the corridors. It was nine o'clock in the morning. She wore her riding-habit, having just come in from her morning canter.

"Well, count!" she laughed. "So you are leaving us unexpectedly! I shall be coming to pay another visit to Potsdam soon. The emperor invited me last night. Au revoir!"

Her imperial highness paid her promised visit to the empress at the Neues Palais in July.

At the time of her arrival the emperor had left suddenly and gone away to Hubertusstock. When anything unusual upset him he always went there. I overheard him the day before his departure shouting to Lohlein as I passed along one of the corridors. The judicial councilor seemed to be trying to pacify him, but apparently entirely without avail.

"You are as sly as all the rest!" I heard the emperor declare in that shrill, high-pitched tone which always denotes his anger. "I'll hear none of it—no excuses. I want no fawning, no Jew-juggling."

The next I heard was that the kaiser had left for that lonely retreat to which he went when he wished to be alone in those periods of crazy impetuosity which periodically seized him, and further, that he had taken with him his crafty crony, Lohlein.

During that mysterious absence—when the tinseled world of Potsdam seemed at peace—the good-looking Saxon crown princess arrived.

I was on duty on the railway platform to bow over her hand and to welcome her.

"Ah! Count von Heltzendorff! Well, did I not say that I should not be very long before I returned to Potsdam, eh?" she exclaimed. Then with a merry laugh: "Do you remember those clattering hoofs and my broken rope of pearls? Nothing has happened yet."

An Angry Emperor.

Three days later an incident occurred which caused me a good deal of thought, and, truth to tell, mystified me considerably.

That somewhat indiscreet journal, the Militaer Wochenblatt, had published a statement to the effect that Friedrich-August of Saxony and the handsome Louisa had had a violent quarrel, a fact which caused a great deal of gossip throughout court circles.

Old Von Donaustauf, who at that time was master of the ceremonies at the emperor's court, busied himself by spreading strange scandals regarding the Crown Princess Louisa. Therefore, in the circumstances, it struck me as strange that her highness should have been invited to the puritanical and hypocritical circle at Potsdam.

That afternoon, soon after the guard had been changed, I chanced to be writing in my room, which overlooked the big central courtyard, when I heard the guard suddenly turn out in great commotion, by which I knew that his majesty had suddenly returned from Hubertusstock.

Ten minutes later my telephone rang, and, passing the sentries, I went by order to his majesty's study, that chamber of plots and secrets, hung with its faded green silk damask, its furniture covered with the same material, and its net curtains at the windows threaded with ribbons of the same shade.

The moment I entered the emperor's countenance showed me that he was very angry. Lohlein had returned with him, and stood watching the emperor as the latter impatiently paced the room.

I saluted, awaiting orders in silence, but so preoccupied was his majesty that he did not notice my presence, but continued his outburst of furious wrath. "Only see what Von Hoensbroech has reported!" he cried. "I am being made a laughing-stock—and you know it, Lohlein! It has been said of us that a woman, a whim, or a word will today raise any person to high rank in our empire! That black-guard, Harden, has actually dared to write it in his journal. Well, we shall see. That woman—she shall—"

Suddenly he realized that I was present, and hesitated. Next second both his tone and his manner changed.

"Heltzendorff—I—I—wish you to go to Dresden and take a private letter. It will be ready in half an hour. Say nothing to anyone concerning your departure, but report to me here at four o'clock."

A Secret Mission to the Saxon Court.

As commanded, I reported, but the kaiser was with the empress, who, in one of her private apartments, was holding petit cercle, the Princess Louisa being present. Indeed, as I entered that semi-circular salon the kaiser was standing astride before Louisa's chair, laughing gayly with her. He could alter his moods just as he changed his three hundred odd uniforms.

There was something mysterious in the wind—of that I felt absolutely convinced. The atmosphere of that faded green upstairs room was always one of confidential conversations, intimate conferences and secret plots—plots, as has since been proved—against the peace of the world.

The emperor, noticing that I had entered the imperial presence, came forward, and I followed him back into the softly-carpeted corridor. Then he took from the inner pocket of his tunic an envelope of what you in England call "court" size—linen-lined, as are all envelopes used by the emperor for his private correspondence. I saw it had been sealed in black by his own hand. Then, as he handed it to me, he said:

"Go to Dresden as quickly as possible and obtain a reply to this."

I clicked my heels together, and, saluting, left upon my secret mission to the Saxon court.

The letter was addressed to Baron Georg von Metzsch at Dresden.

Next day, when I presented it to the tall, thin controller of the household, I saw that its contents greatly puzzled him.

He wrote a reply, and as imperial messenger, I returned at once to Potsdam, handing it to the emperor as he strode alone from the Shell salon, through which he was passing after dinner.

He took it from my hand without a word, tore open the envelope, read its contents, and then smiled contentedly, after which I went to old Von Donaustauf's room, and smoked a good cigar in his company.

The Crown Princess Calls.

Next day we were all back at the Berlin Schloss. During the morning his majesty inspected the Berlin garrison in the Tempelhofer Feld, and the Princess Louisa rode with him. That same afternoon, while I was busy writing in the long room allotted to me in the Berlin Schloss, her imperial highness, to my surprise, entered, closing the door quietly after her.

"Count von Heltzendorff, you have been on a secret mission to that spy, Von Metzsch, in Dresden, have you not?"

I rose, bowed, and without replying courteously offered her a chair.

"Why do you not admit it?" she asked quickly.

"Princess, if the emperor gives me orders to preserve secrecy, then it is my duty to obey," I said.

"I know," she answered, and then I realized how upset and nervous she seemed. "But Von Metzsch hates me, and has put about all sorts of scandalous reports concerning me. Ah! count," she sighed, "you do not know how very unhappy I am—how I am surrounded by enemies!"

"I much regret to hear that," I said. "But your imperial highness has also many friends, of whom I hope I may be permitted to number myself."

"Ah! it is extremely good of you to say that—very good. If you really are my friend, then you can help me. You are in a position to watch and discover what is in progress—the reason the emperor exchanges those constant confidences with Von Metzsch, the man who twisted my husband around his little finger, and who has, with my lady-of-the-bedchamber, Frau von Fritsch, already poisoned his mind against me. Ah! you have no idea how much I have suffered!"

She seemed on the verge of a nervous crisis, for I saw that in her fine eyes stood the light of unshed tears, and I confess I was much puzzled, for I had certainly believed, up to that moment, that she was on excellent terms with her husband.

"But surely his highness, the crown prince of Saxony, does not believe any of those wicked reports?" I said.

"Ah! Then you have heard. Of course, you have. Von Metzsch has taken good care to let the whole world know the lies that he and the Countess Paule Starhemberg have concocted between them. It is cruel! It is wicked!"

"No, no. Calm yourself, princess!" I urged sympathetically. "I am at least your friend, and will act as such, should occasion arise."

"Ah!" she exclaimed in a low voice. "I fear I shall require the assistance of a friend very soon. Do you recollect my broken pearls?"

And a few moments later she left the room.

"You Lie!"

Through all that day and the next I wondered what underhand work could be in progress. I pitied the good-looking, unconventional imperial princess who, because of her somewhat hoydenish high spirits, had aroused the storm of anger and jealousy in the Saxon court. But the Hapsburgs had ever been so unfortunate in their loves.

On the day before the crown princess' visit to the Berlin court was due to end, at about six o'clock in the evening, I passed the sentries and ascended to the emperor's study with some papers I had been going through regarding the reorganization of the Stettin garrison. I was one of the very few persons ever admitted to that wing of the palace.

As I approached the door, treading noiselessly upon the soft carpet, I heard voices raised excitedly, the door being slightly ajar.

Naturally I halted. In my position I was able to hear a great deal of palace intrigue, but never had I listened to a conversation that held me more breathless than at that moment.

"Woman," cried the emperor, "do you, then, openly defy my authority?"

"What that crafty sycophant, Von Metzsch, has told you is, I repeat, a foul and abominable lie," was the reply.

And I knew that the unfortunate princess was defending her reputation, which her enemies at the court of Saxony had torn to shreds.

"No woman ever admits the truth, of course," sneered the emperor. "I consider you a disgrace to the Dresden court."

"So this is the manner in which you openly insult your guests!" was the princess' retort. "You, who believe yourself the idol of your people, now exhibit yourself in your true light as the traducer of a defenseless woman!"

"How dare you utter those words to me!" cried the all-highest one, in fury.

"I dare defend myself—even though you may be emperor," replied Louisa, in a cold, hard tone of defiance. "I repeat that your allegations are untrue, and that you have no right to make them. Surely you can see that my enemies, headed by the king of Saxony, are all conspiring to effect my downfall. I know it! I have written proof of it!"

"Bosh! You say that because you know that the statements are true!"

"You lie!" she cried fiercely. "They are not true. You cannot prove them."

"Very well," answered the emperor in that tone of cold determination that I knew too well. "I will prove the charges to my entire satisfaction."

Words That the Kaiser Would Never Forgive.

I was startled at the manner in which the princess had dared to call the emperor a liar. Surely nobody had ever done so before.

I drew a long breath, for as I crept away unseen I recollected the kaiser's unrelenting vindictiveness.

Poor princess! I knew that the red talons of the Hohenzollern eagle would sooner or later be laid heavily upon her.

She left Berlin two hours later, but half an hour before her departure I found a hurriedly scribbled note upon my table explaining that she had had "a few unpleasant words with the emperor," and that she was leaving for Dresden a day earlier than had been arranged.

A fortnight passed. Twice Baron von Metzsch came to Potsdam, and was on each occasion closely closeted with the emperor, as well as having frequent consultations with Judicial Councilor Lohlein. I had strong suspicion that the conspiracy against the lively daughter of the Hapsburgs was still in progress, for I felt assured that the kaiser would never forgive those words of defiance from a woman's lips, and that his vengeance, slow and subtle, would assuredly fall upon her.

I did not know at the time—not, indeed, until fully three years later—how the actions of Von Metzsch, who was a creature of the kaiser, had from the first been instigated by the all-highest, who, from the very day of the princess' marriage, had, notwithstanding his apparent graciousness toward her, determined that a Hapsburg should never become queen of Saxony.

For that reason, namely, because the emperor in his overweening vanity believed himself to be the heaven-sent ruler of the destinies of the German empire, was much opposed to an Austrian princess as a potential queen at Dresden, and had set himself the task to ruin the poor woman's life and love and to arouse such a scandal concerning her that she could not remain in Saxony with every finger pointing at her in opprobrium and scorn.

I Decipher a Message for the Kaiser.

A fresh light, however, was thrown upon what I afterward realized to be an astounding conspiracy by the receipt of a cipher message late one November night at Potsdam. I was at work alone with the emperor in the pale green upstairs room, reading and placing before him a number of state documents to which he scrawled his scribbly signature, when the telegram was brought.

"Decipher that, Heltzendorff," he commanded, and went on with the work of reading and signing the documents, while I sat down with the red leather-covered code book, and presently found that the message, which was from Dresden, read:

"Frau von Fritsch today had an interview with Giron, the French tutor to the crown princess' children, but unfortunately the latter refuses to admit any affection for Louisa. Giron angrily declared his intention to leave Dresden, because of Von Fritsch's suggestion. This course, I saw, would be unfortunate for our plans, therefore I urge the king to induce Louisa to request him to remain. She has done so, but to no avail, and Giron left for Brussels tonight. May I be permitted to come to discuss with your majesty a further elaboration of the plans?—Von Metzsch."

The emperor read the secret message twice.

"We go to Erfurt tomorrow, do we not?" he said. "Telegraph in cipher to Von Metzsch to meet us there tomorrow evening at seven. And destroy that message," he added.

I obeyed his orders, and afterward continued to deal with the state papers, much enlightened by the news transmitted by the emperor's creature.

I confess that I felt the deepest sympathy for the helpless victim. At the Schloss, high above the old-world town of Erfurt, Von Metzsch had a long conference with the emperor, but I was unable to overhear any word of it. All I know is that the controller of the Saxon household left Erfurt for Dresden by special train at midnight.

Poor, defenseless Louisa! You, my dear LeQueux, to whom the princess a few months afterward fled for advice, know well how sterling, how womanly and honest she was; how she was one victim of many of the unscrupulous intrigues by which the arrogant war lord of Germany has until the present managed to retain his throne.

The Crisis.

Well, I watched the course of events; watched eagerly and daily. Twice I had received letters from her imperial highness, short notes in her firm, bold handwriting.

From Von Metzsch came several cipher messages to the emperor after we had returned to Potsdam, but Zorn von Bulach, my colleague, deciphered all of them, and, as he was not my friend, I did not inquire as to their purport. I knew, however, that matters in Dresden were fast approaching a crisis, and that the unfortunate Hapsburg princess could no longer sustain the cruel and unjust pressure being put upon her undoing. That a hundred of Germany's spies and agents provocateurs were busy I realized from the many messages by telephone and telegraph passing between Berlin and Dresden, and I felt certain that the ruin of poor Princess Louisa was nigh.

A significant message came to Potsdam late one December night—a message which, when I deciphered it and handed it to the emperor, caused him to smile.

The princess had left Dresden!

Three days later, on December 9, a further cipher telegram came from Von Metzsch, in Dresden, which read: "Louisa has learned of the Sonnenstein project, and has left Salzburg for Zurich, her brother accompanying. —Von Metzsch."

Sonnenstein! That was a private lunatic asylum!

In a few moments the kaiser had summoned, by his private telephone, Koehler, then chief of the Berlin secret police, and given orders that the princess be watched in Switzerland. Half an hour later three police agents were on their way to Zurich to follow the poor, distracted woman, even beyond the confines of the empire.

She was, no doubt, in deadly fear of being sent to a living tomb, so that her mouth should be closed forever. And seeing herself surrounded by enemies and spies on every hand—for even her brother Leopold, with whom she had traveled to Switzerland, now refused to assist her—she adopted the only method of further escape that at the moment presented itself.

Alone and without anyone to advise her, she, as you know, took a desperate resolve, one alas! fraught with disastrous consequences.

The iron had indeed entered the poor princess' soul.

Note by William LeQueux.

The denouement of this base intrigue will be best related in her imperial highness' own words. In one of her letters, which I have on my table as I write, she says:

"I saw before me in those never-to-be-forgotten days all the horrors of a 'Maison de Sante.' What could I do? I was friendless in a strange hotel. Even Leopold seemed disinclined to be further troubled by a runaway sister. I knew Frau von Fritsch had accused me falsely of having secret love affairs, and that the emperor had directed the whole plot which was to culminate in my confinement in an asylum. Suddenly a solution occurred to me. I remembered Monsieur Giron, who had already suffered greatly through his friendship with me. If he joined me, then my flight from Dresden would be considered as an elopement, and I should escape a living death in a madhouse! Monsieur Giron was at that moment my only friend, and it was for that reason that I telegraphed to him at Brussels. Well, he joined me, and by doing so completed the emperor's triumph."

A LETTER FROM THE CROWN PRINCE'S PERSONAL ADJUTANT TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX, POSSESSOR OF THE SECRETS OF EUROPE.

Veneux Nadon,
par Moret-sur-Loing,
Seine-et-Marne,
February 10th, 1917.

My dear LeQueux:

I have just finished reading the proofs of your articles describing my life as an official at the imperial court at Potsdam, and the two or three small errors you made I have duly corrected.

The gross scandals and wily intrigues which I have related to you were many of them known to yourself, for, as the intimate friend of Louisa, the ex-crown princess of Saxony, you were, before the war, closely associated with many of those at court whose names appear in these articles.

The revelations which I have made, and which you have recorded here, are but a tithe of the disclosures which I could make, and if the world desires more, I shall be pleased to furnish you with other and even more startling details, which you may also put into print.

My service as personal adjutant to the German crown prince is, happily, at an end, and now, with the treachery of Germany against civilization glaringly revealed, I feel, in my retirement, no compunction in exposing all I know concerning the secrets of the kaiser and his son.

With most cordial greetings from

Your sincere friend,

(Signed) ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF.

Political Announcements.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for nomination for House of Delegates, subject to the result of the primary election and earnestly solicit the support of my friends throughout the county.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Heavenly Recognition.

Resuming where I left off in my last, let me say that philosophy joined with paganism and over the great chasm that separated them locked hands with Christianity, robed in her garments of white, and from the institutions of learning down to the meanest hovel, it has shed its influence. It has been consolation to the dying Christian, while weeping friends as they stood by the grave of loved departed have been comforted by the hope of meeting again. How came this belief to find a place in every age and tribe?

How does it come that it has a place in the enlightened consciousness of every believer? That it does find such a place, cannot be denied, and this fact forms strong presumptive evidence in favor of it. There are some doctrines which are intuitive—born in us, and these have their origin with the author of our being. He has planted them there. The very fact that all through scripture, the doctrine seems to be taken for granted; that it is assumed that it is something that does not need proof, is strong presumptive evidence in its favor.

The idea of God, of the future and of immortality are innate and is strong proof, indeed it is sufficient for us. The idea of an atonement is everywhere impressed upon the human heart and hence allfeel the necessity of making some sacrifice for sin. This is the central force of paganism and is an inducement for all to bring their offerings to the altar or submit to extreme bodily torture. The united voice of the world proclaims the existence of a moral government; of the being of God; of the doctrine of immortality and the needs of an atonement and should we not listen to the same voice as it proclaims the truth of the doctrine of recognition. As christianity advances it sanctifies and enobles the thoughts and desires of the heart, and this doctrine advances with it. Just in proportion as you break the power of sin and man is brought under the power of holiness, is the desire to meet and know our friends in the future increased. The nearer we live to the cross and heaven, the more distinctly we hear the voice of the departed and see their forms as they tread the bowers of paradise regained.

He who by faith and prayer lives upon the mountain height, in the full light of divine love, can almost hear the loved ones calling:

"Come to the land of peace!"
Come where the tempest hath no longer sway,
The shadow passes from the soul away,
The sounds of weaping cease!"

The doctrine is reasonable, scripture affirms that we shall all be changed, yet it will not be such as will destroy our identity. It will not destroy the characteristics by which we know each other now.

We recognize each other after years of separation. Memory is sometimes so tenacious that it recalls all with whom we may have formed an acquaintance. Will this faculty be obliterated when we have passed the boundaries of time? We regard it our duty to retain a warm affection for those with whom we are connected by ties of kindness or religion. Will death sever these ties and cut off this fountain of enjoyment? Our work here is preparatory to the next world.

We are to cultivate virtues which will be carried into the next. We are to cultivate virtues which will be carried to perfection in a nobler state of being. The natural instinct of the parent leads it to love the child and the child if faithful will be, from a sense of gratitude interested in the parents and will do all it can for its happiness. The family is designed to cultivate social affections and in society we are dependent upon each other that benevolence, love and confidence may be called into exercise.

In every community social virtues are developed just in proportion as the spirit of piety reigns in the heart. Sin destroys all these virtues but holiness sanctifies and envolves the growth of our affections and gives sacredness to human friendship. Some of the sweetest friendships of life have been formed by similar tasts and feelings in religious life. Common temptations, cares, troubles and labors have knit their hearts in one undying friendship.

It is not reasonable to suppose that the same religion which sweetens and enobles life's friendships and the social nature of man, will more perfectly develop our affections in a higher life? And have you not felt in hours of affliction the instincts of your nature and the feelings of your heart, favoring the idea that the affliction will only be for a time? How this hope comforts the sorrowing ones as they sit beside the grave of some loved one, as through heir tears they exclaim:

O happy world! O, glorious place!
When all who are forgiven
Shall find their loved and lost below,
And hearts, like meeting streams shall flow,
Forever one in heaven."

However reasonable it may be, if we do not find authority for it in the scripture, we must give it up as a mere sentiment. If we can find one proof for it here, we may rest our faith on a firm foundation.

We could wish to find some direct and unqualified declaration concerning this doctrine, but there are none, though there are frequent allusions and expressions which indicate that the Jews believed in the future recognition of their friends.

To be continued.

To the Republican Voters of Garrett County.

As the primary election day is drawing near I take this method of addressing the Republican voters of the county.

I have visited every district during the past few weeks and expect to make another visit to the several communities prior to the election, but it will be impossible for me to see personally every voter owing to the lack of time.

If nominated and elected to the office of Sheriff I will endeavor to give the office my best attention and to discharge the duties incumbent upon me without fear or favor.

Soliciting the votes of the Republicans throughout the county, I beg to remain,
Very truly yours,

VOLUME 42. OAKLAND, MARYLAND THURSDAY, AUGUST 16, 1917. NUMBER 25

PROF. BENDER HEAD OF O. H. S.

Was Reappointed Friday By County Board of Education

The Board of Education of Garrett county met last Friday in its office in Oakland and transacted the following business along with other routine affairs.

The President was directed to instruct and require the county treasurer of Garrett county to pay by separate checks the $20,000 levied April 17, 1917, by the Board of County Commissioners. "To apply on erection of a High School building in Oakland," and the President and Treasurer were directed to keep those funds separate and intact from the usual school funds of the county.

Member J. T. Glotfelty was authorized to secure a deed for the ground upon which the Board contemplates building a new school building for the Dry Run School neighborhood, it being in election district No. 1. near Swanton.

The following were appointed teachers of the schools designated during the school year of 1917-1918:

Walnut Bottom, Mary Eggere; Friendsyille High, (Academic), Marcia L. Leach; Grantsville, Zaidee Browning; Lyndale, Della Savage; Cove, Estella Gies; Finzel, Genevieve Winters Oakland High School, C. Edward, Bender, principal; Erna Fismer, domestic science and art; Kitzmiller, Marie Ryland; Friendsville Grammar, O. Foster Frind; Painter, Jessie Riggleman; Mill Run, Emma Glorios; Mar's Hill, Lulu Warnick; Sang Run, Delphia Hunt; Bishoff, Lorna Broadwater; Broadford, Mary A. Powers; Bernard, Elizabeth Hendley; Sunnyside, Margaret E. Reilly; Sand Run, Edith Bennett; Corunna, Stella M. Sterry; Red House, Virginia E. Williams; Steiding, Eva B. Lewis; Spring Glade, Dolores Scott; Merrill, Isabella C. Durst; Swallow Falls, Louise L Llewllyn.

THESE WANT TO GO TO THE HOUSE

Messrs. Harvey and White Announce Their Candidacy.

Today's Republican contains two additional announcements of well-known Garrett countians for the House of Delegates, namely: Mr. Elliott C. Harvey, of District No. 8, and Mr. Albert T. White, of Loch Lynn Heights.

Mr. Harvey was a member of the Legislature several years ago where he made a splendid record as a man of conservative views and with the experience thus gained he would be a very valuable man to return to the Lower House. He has always stood for Republican principals and has been on the right side of all issues affecting the passage of laws looking to the betterment of the masses.

Mr. White is a member of the family of that name whose home for many generations has been in the vicinity of Loch Lynn Heights. He is a son of the late George P. White, a sterling citizen of the county. The family has been strictly Republican. Mr. White is the first of the connection to seek public office. He is a man of pleasing personality and is an intelligent likable gentleman.

Ada Baugh was re-appointed grade supervisor and was directed to devote her efforts and assistance to the one room schools of the county.

A petition was presented asking for a change in the location of the Stricker's school building.

The resignation of B. H. Wiley as school attendance officer was accepted

The superintendent was directed to write all teachers that a county institute will be held at Oakland during the week of September 3-7, 1917, and that the schools of the county are to open upon Monday, September 10, 1917.

The Board adjourned to meet Tuesday, September 11th, at 10 o'clock.

WHY NOT SENATOR SPEICHER?

Many Men of Importance In the County Want Him As A Candidate.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Appreciating the importance of selecting men for positions of trust especially at this time when the world at large, so to speak, needs the guiding hand of men of experience, of mental capabilities and sufficient business acumen to push them forward in the world and as a representative of the masses, we who have signed our names to the within letter, urge upon the Republican party of Garrett county as a whole to demand that Senator Speicher again become the candidate of the party for Senatorial honors. He is the man of the hour in our community, which includes all of Garrett county, and in him we shall have a true advocate. With the world at war the country needs men of ability to handle the affairs confronting us and such a man we find in Senator Speicher who is known and has always stood for good citizenship. He is the acknowledged leader of the Republican forces in the State Senate and has reached that position simply because his colleagues in the Upper House have become convinced that he is well able to maintain his position and bring credit upon his party. He is without doubt able to lead the Republican ticket in the county to victory and we desire that he become a candidate for the nomination.

THE DEATH RECORD.

ROBERT GREEN.

Robert Green, aged 92, died at 4 o'clock Tuesday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Dick Shaw, in Moscow, from old age. Mr. Green was born in Allegany, and for a number of years operated a large farm in Garrett county. He is survived by four children, Mrs. Dick Shaw, Mrs. Frank Shaw, of Moscow; Frank Green and Charles Green, of Garrett county.

"BARS" WON BY FOUR YOUNG MEN

Officers for New National Army Include Four Garrett Countians

After three months of vigorous military study and discipline members of the reserve officers' training camps located at various points in the United States, who have been chosen for commissions in the New National Army, have been notified of their appintments to date from yesterday, the 15th inst.

Young men from all parts of the nation are among the newly made officers. Many were lately students at colleges and universities, while others left business occupations in order to take the course of intensive training that would fit them for military leadership.

Of the thousands from all sections of the country who received their commission yesterday were four from Garrett county, representing the total number who were made members of the reserve corps when the camps opened three months ago, namely:

D. Earl Smite, of Hoyes, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Smith. He was commissioned first lieutenant, infantry section, at Fort Meyer, Va. He is a graduate of St. John's College and also of the University of Maryland.

Charles Morris Sincell, son of the editor of The Republican and Mrs. Sincell, commissioned second lieutenant, infantry section, at Fort Niagara, New York. He is a graduate of Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, Pa., and is probably the youngest officer turned out at this particular camp, having passed his twenty-first anniversary on July 27th.

Albert Ely, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Ely, of Oakland, commissioned first lieutenant at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, Ind. After spending three years at Central College in Kentucky and a like number of years at the University of Kentucky at Danville, he was called for service on the Mexican border and then became a member of the reserve corps.

Corwin S. Burns, son of the late Major and Mrs. J. M. Burns, of Mountain Lake Park, second lieutenant, ordnance department, National army. Commissioned at the Presidio, San Francisco, Cal.

The young officers will, for the most part, be assigned to commands in the National army now forming. Some will be ordered to stay at their respective headquarters for the second camp, while others will be held in reserve for duty in the third camp to be opened in January, 1918.

WILL COMPLETE WORK THIS WEEK

Large Number of Exemptions Claimed—Additional Calls Will Be Made.

The local Exemption Board made faster and better progress during the past week than at the beginning of the examinations and will probably wind up the work on the first 290 called tomorrow. In all 217 men have been examined since last Thursday, and of this number 153 have been found physically qualified for military service, and 64 physically deficient. One hundred and ten of those found capable for service have filed exemption claims, most of them on account of dependents and quite a number on the ground of religious belief.

These claims will be carefully investigated by the Board as soon as possible, and it is not probable that very many claims will stand. There remains about 42 young men yet to be examined, and these will be disposed of today and tomorrow.

We are informed by a member of the Board that a second call will be necessary to fill the quota from this county, and an additional call will be sent out as early as possible, possibly next week.

Mrs. Quinn's Experience Ought to Help You Over the Critical Period.

Lowell, Mass.—"For the last three years I have been troubled with the Change of Life and the bad feelings common at that time. I was in a very nervous condition, with headaches and pain a good deal of the time so I was unfit to do my work. A friend asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and it has helped me in every way. I am not nearly so nervous, no headache or pain. I must say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best remedy any sick woman can take."—Mrs. MARGARET QUINN, Rear 259 Worthen St., Lowell, Mass.

Other warning symptoms are a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness, inquietude, and dizziness.

If you need special advice, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

62 Die Every Minute.

The annual death rate of the human race is 33,000,000. That's 91,000 a day, 3,700 every hour, 62 every minute. One-half of the human race die before they are sixteen years old; one-quarter of the human race die before they are five years old. The average length of a human life is thirty-three and one-third years. Not one man or one woman in a million lives to be one hundred years old. But don't let this discourage you from taking as good care of your health as if it were a new motorcar.

"SKY LINE" LOGGING LATEST

Modern Methods of Western Camps Said to Be Cheaper and More Efficient Than the Old Ways.

In the logging camps of Oregon and Washington a "skyline" method of logging is proving much cheaper and more efficient than the former method of dragging out logs from the forest by a donkey engine and cables operating on the ground, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The sky-line plan is to run a cable through blocks or pulleys suspended at a great height on giant trees, so as to form a sort of trolley line by which the logs are hoisted into the air and then hauled over the tops of ordinary trees and other obstructions to the rollway, where they are loaded aboard freight cars for shipment.

The donkey engine which operates the skyline has five drums, including two for main lines and two for trip lines. The top cable, from which the log is suspended, is one of the main lines, while the other is used to haul the log. In operation the top cable is lowered with its block, or trolley, directly over the log to be picked up; it is then pulled taut, raising the log with it by means of a "choker," or steel tongs. In the air a log can, of course, be moved much faster than on the ground.

A Philadelphia Idea.

Music and cleaning the parlor have never been very closely associated. When the housewife wants to play the piano she generally waits until she has cleaned the parlor, taken a bath and dressed herself in party clothes. Now a Philadelphian has patented a dust-filtering attachment which can be attached to the player-piano, and the ordinary housewife can now seat herself at the player-piano, obtain music via the keys, work the pedals for all she is worth and, with her child to run the vacuum cleaner about the floor, she can have it clean in a jiffy. The bellows of the player are attached to the vacuum cleaner by means of a special pipe, and in this manner the needed vacuum is created for cleaning purposes.

If a man is able to gain time he gains everything.

LESSON FOR AUGUST 19

FINDING THE BOOK OF THE LAW.

LESSON TEXT—II Chronicles 34:14-33.

GOLDEN TEXT—I will not forget thy word.—Psa. 119:16.

I. The Book of the Law Found (vv. 14-17). 1. The occasion (v. 14). It was found while the work of repairing the temple was going on. At what part in the temple we do not know; perhaps in the treasure house, for it was found while bringing out the money to pay for the repairs. Perhaps this was in or near the ark, for the law was usually kept in or by the ark.

2. By whom (v. 14). Hilkiah, the high priest, was the finder. It is strange that the high priest was ignorant of the place where the law was found. It is a sad comment upon the moral and spiritual condition of priests and kings, since they were appointed guardians of God's law. It is, however, always true that when one does not want to have his life ordered by the Bible he will put it out of his sight. The disappearance of the Bible from our homes, and the neglect of it in our study, is a certain sign of evil in our lives. Be assured, however, that though the law of the Lord be removed from our sight it shall sooner or later come before us to judge us. God has declared that his Word shall not return unto him void, but shall accomplish that whereunto it hath been sent.

3. Its disposition (v. 16). Hilkiah gave the law to Shaphan the scribe, who delivered it to the king along with his report as to the disposition of the money which had been collected.

II. The Book of the Law Read (vv. 18, 29, 30). 1. To the king (v. 18). This was a most impressive scene, the king listening to the reading of the law of God. It was the proper thing to do, for those appointed by God to rule over the people should be anxious to know the will of God concerning them. The pious king, believing in it as God's Word, was anxious to know God's thought concerning the nation. His interest became intense, as he was made conscious of the apostasy of his people from God's law. His chief anxiety was to know what was God's purpose as to the nation in view of their idolatry. It is a sensible thing to make oneself intelligent as to his responsibilities, even to know what judgments shall befall those who have turned from God. One should know the worst while there is time yet to escape his wrath, for repentance is the only door of escape from perdition.

2. To the people (vv. 29, 30). At the direction of the king the priests, elders and all the people were called together to hear God's Word read. This was as it ever should be. People have a right to hear what God has to say to them as well as the king. To keep the people ignorant of the Word of the Lord is a great crime. The crying need of the age, with all its boasted knowledge, fine church equipment and cultured ministry, is for the Word of God to be brought to the ears of the people.

III. The Effect of the Reading of the Law. (vv. 20-28; 31-33). When God's Word is intelligently read and understood there is bound to be an impression made.

1. The king rent his clothes (v. 19). The man who will honestly listen to the reading of God's Word will be brought to his knees, for he will be convicted of sin, and will take the place of self-abasement before the Lord. The king first saw his own sins and confessed them. It is a good sign when one sees his own shortcomings and failures, and not primarily those of others.

2. The king made inquiry of the Lord through Huldah the prophetess (vv. 22-28). His supreme motive in this inquiry was to find out whether there was some way to avert the awful judgments which were impending, as set forth in the Word of God. After all, the human heart instinctively turns from threatened woe to inquire whether there is not a way of escape. Alongside of the flaming, thundering Sinai was placed the Levitical system of offerings. Law and grace are not far removed. The law becomes our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ. Through Huldah the message came that God had taken account of all their sins and that judgment must fall, but Josiah would be spared the sight of all God's visitation of wrath. The penitence of the king turned aside God's wrath from himself, but the nation would be obliged to suffer for its awful apostasy.

3. The king made a covenant (vv. 31, 32). This was to the effect that he would walk in the commandments of the Lord. He also made the people stand to this covenant. He no doubt acted from the sincerity of his heart.

4. Further reforms (v. 33). Josiah now reached out as far as the national boundaries, took away their abominations and made Israel to serve the Lord their God. The fact that the book of the law was found implies that it had been lost. The way it had been lost is not definitely set forth, but numerous ways may be suggested. The Bible is a lost book to many professing Christians today, maybe through lack of interest in it, willful neglect or neglect through the stress of life's business and pleasures. May we not each one inquire as to whether our Bibles are lost?

Splendid Medicine For Kidneys, Liver and Bladder

For the past twenty years I have been acquainted with your preparation, Swamp-Root, and all those who have had occasion to use such a medicine praise the merits of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root; specially has it been very useful in cases of catarrh or inflammation of the bladder. I firmly believe that it is a very valuable medicine and recommendable for what it is intended.

WAR IS DECLARED ON MICE

All Household Pets Should Be Kept Away From Food, Says Government Experts.

Rats and mice destroy millions of dollars' worth of food and other property every year in homes or on farms and in business establishments. Many rats harbor the germs of bubonic plague. Trap and kill them, enjoins a United States department of agriculture bulletin. Look upon every mouse as an enemy to your property.

Eradicate roaches and house ants. Keep weevils out of cereals.

Keep your food where such pests cannot reach it.

Keep household pets away from food.

Don't let fresh vegetables or fruit wilt or lose their flavor or begin to rot because they are handled carelessly. Keep perishable vegetables in cool, dry, well aired, and, for most vegetables, dark, rather than light places.

Learn how to store potatoes, cabbages, root crops, fruits and other foods so that they will keep properly for later use. Don't think that any place in the cellar or pantry is good enough to store food.

Heat, dampness, poor ventilation, bruising or breaking will rapidly make many vegetables rot, ferment or spoil. Warmth and light make vegetables sprout and this lowers their quality.

The Last of the Caribs.

The Carib Indian was the first representative of Lo the poor red man to meet the tide of European travel. He was the one found by Columbus and the later Spanish explorers in the West Indies, and he has given the Caribbean sea his name. Thus he is assured a monument as long as geography shall last, and he needs it, because as a living race he has practically disappeared.

How many thousands of Caribs dwelt in the West Indies in 1492 is largely a matter of conjecture. They quickly began to die out under the hand of the conqueror, who worked them as slaves, and shot them when they made war. Today it is doubtful whether there are a hundred pure-blooded Caribs alive. Practically all of them live on the British island of Dominica, on a reservation set apart for them called Salybia.

When you lose a friend by lending him a small sum of money you get the best of the bargain.

"There's a Reason"

THE JAPANESE JUG

By SYLVIA TURNER.

"But there's no place for it," protested Evelyn. "I am so sick and tired of these baby white elephants that people call wedding gifts I don't know what to do, and it's blue and white. Imagine that with Jacobean furniture and dull olive decorations. I think I'll put it in the bathroom. It goes beautifully with the white tiling."

"You poor fish—"

"Bennie—"

"I mean goldfish, darling. Don't you know the value of that thing?" The recent bridegroom stood before the long, dark oak table beaming on the object that had just emerged from many wrappings. It was nearly two feet high—a jug of blue and white porcelain. About it coiled in sinuous folds a most engaging dragon.

"Uncle Barnaby has collected Chinese porcelains ever since I can remember," informed the young husband. "I am sure it is worth its weight in gold. We'll have to make a place for it somewhere."

"The dear old thing," Evelyn said, happily. "Let's invite him down for a week. Perhaps he'd take a fancy to you, and do something wonderful."

The following month Uncle Barnaby arrived. He was a little, light-eyed, alert man, with not very much to say, but nothing escaped his ken. Almost the first thing he spied was the porcelain jar on its pedestal in the sunny dining room. Evelyn had put tall sprays of flowering almond in it and a Japanese print on the wall behind it.

"Humph!" said the old gentleman. "Looks pretty good, doesn't it?"

"We prize it highly," Ben answered reverently. And Eve added:

"I've been up to the library and read up all about Japanese and Chinese porcelains."

"You did, did you? Then you probably found out that this is an imitation."

The silence in the dining room for a moment was unbroken.

"Yes," Uncle Barnaby went on, pleasantly, "I flatter myself it's one of the best imitations I have ever seen. I had a lot of them made before I started disposing of my collection. I don't suppose you heard, Ben, two of the companies I had stock in went up in smoke, so to speak. I've been riding close to the wind for a good many years. One reason why I came down here was to look around quietly for a tidy little job of some sort."

"The worst of it is," Ben told his wife that night, "you can't tell whether he's joking or in earnest."

"Well, I'll tell you," Evelyn was braiding her long brown hair thoughtfully, as she sat before the three-fold mirror of the dressing table. "Let's treat him just as if we believed everything he said. There's one comfort, if the old thing does get broken now, it doesn't matter. I'm rather sorry I invited Miss Rutherford up for tea to look at it."

"Don't tell her," advised Ben.

"Oh, but she'll know, she's a connoisseur on porcelains."

The following Saturday Ann Rutherford arrived. When Uncle Barnaby saw her a look of utter amazement spread over his face, while she gave a little exclamation of pleasure. "Why, Mr. Wynne-Jones, to think of seeing you down here in New York at this time of the year. You've come for the Creighton auction haven't you? The pieces are marvelous, I hear."

After she had gone the old man beamed happily at Evelyn.

"Found me out, didn't you?" he asked. "Well, I did come down for that sale, and your jar's a real one. I just wanted to try you out, and I tell you one thing, if you'll invite Ann Rutherford down often and help me make her Bennie's aunt I'll give you some porcelains that will make that look like a toothbrush mug. She's the only person that I believe knows more about porcelains than I do."

Evelyn went into the campaign heart and soul. She willingly forgave the old gentleman his kindly deception in the spur of the chase. It was such fun chaperoning this pair of lovers, she told Ben. From being a hermit, Uncle Barnaby suddenly developed into a joyous spendthrift and Beau Brummel, and at the end of another month, when they returned from a motoring trip through the Catskills, Evelyn sank into the willow chair in her own room with a little sigh of relief.

"Ben," she said thankfully, "I've got them married. Really married. You'll never know what I've gone through. I've trotted that couple to every possible Cupid's trap I knew of. But they're safely married now and on their honeymoon. Uncle Barnaby's given me a check. Never mind for how much. It's enough, and you're going to stop work for a month and go camping with me up in the wilds. I need a rest cure."

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and a FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. Timeless.

Religious literature characterized by a certain elevation is always timeless. As the Psalms are timeless, and many passages in the Gospels and the New Testaments, it must still be possible today and must have been possible in every generation to express these things with a timeless power and warmth.

She Objected to Change.

Natural Study.

The teacher was hearing the class in nature. Trying to impress upon the children's minds the horror of cruelty to animals, she told the following story:

"Once a farmer went out to milk a cow and a little calf switched the man in the eye with its tail. The man took out his knife and cut off the calf's tail. Now, children, what verse in the bible should that man have remembered?"

The Idea!

A prospective bridegroom made his first call on his future bride in company with a marriage broker and while in the parlor waiting for the appearance of the family the broker drew the young man's attention to a glass closet containing a handsome silver set.

"Just look at these things," he said. "You can see how wealthy these people are."

"But is it not possible that these articles were borrowed for the occasion," inquired the suspicious young man, "so as to give an appearance of wealth?"

"What an idea!" answered the agent reprovingly. "Who in the world would lend them anything?"

Pride.

An oldish man with a waist line like the equator paused on the street to confer a somewhat patronizing greeting on an oldish woman.

"Well, well—I was afraid you had gone by the board! How are you getting along?"

"Oh, making money and taking on fat!"

The only thing worth noticing about the small interchange was that the woman was a positive bone, and she sure didn't look as if she were making money.

GRANTSVILLE.

The pageant given by the Reformed Womans Missionary Society on Monday night was a decided success, all the women and children taking their parts admirably after but two rehersals. The audience was favored with a pantomime by the girls of St. Paul's Sunday school, a beautiful piece of acting in unison, while a duet "Jesus Lover of My Soul," was sung by Mrs. Newman and L. N. Wilson of St. Paul, who also sang "Tell Me His Name" as a duet. Miss Mary Stanton rendered several excellent selections.

The first part of the pageant was a one-act drama, "When I Was Sick," portraying amusing and Pathetic types of life in Japan, China, Persia, India, Africa and South America, with an American child in the center. These parts were taken most effectively by Harriet Stanton, Grace Hershberger, Margaret Getty, Edna Gingerich, Esther Bender, Ruby Beachy and Frances Bevans. While the children were seated a recital of Cabel Kimball Whiting's poem, "Motherhood," was given by Sara R. Getty as "A Christian Mother."

The next act was "The Searching Women" and too much praise cannot be said for these ladies, a number of them busy farmers' wives, who so splendidly with pathos, humor and real histrionic ability took the parts assigned them.

They came in the following order: Africa, Mrs. Fred Livengood; Mohammedan, Miss Anna Speicher; South America, Mrs. John Folk; China, Mrs. Urban Stanton; India, Miss Bessie Warnick; Japan, Mrs. J. A. Beachy; the Missionary, Miss Lulu Warnick.

Then followed a clever piece of acting, "A Missionary's Dream," with Miss Lulu Warnick as the missionary and the Grantsville girls in pantomime. A short and timely address was made by the pastor Rev. L. N. Wilson, after which "Holy Night" was sung by the participants in the pageant, followed by "All Hail the Power," by the congregation, then the benediction.

The door receipts amounted to about ten dollars which is being used for missions. The costumes with the exception of a few which were cleverly and hastily improvised by the ladies, were brought by Mrs. Wilson, being provided by the Board of Missions. The same pageant was given at St. Paul on Sunday night, with equal success.

A dance and ice cream festival was given at the Pavilion on Thursday night and was quite successful, the receipts being considerable. The affair was given by the Girl Scouts of Grantsville.

A camping party of Girl Scouts from Elk Lick were in possession of King Oak cottage last week, the crowd being chaperoned by Mrs. R. H. Johnston, and Miss Mima Harding. Not all the scouts were present this year, those enjoying the outing being Misses Harriet Maust, Harriet Garlitz, Charlotte McMurdo, Annabel Dietz, Elizabeth Johnston and Irene Newman. A number of Elk Lick people visited them during the week.

A moonlight picnic was held on Friday night at the river by a crowd of young people. A basket lunch was provided and a big fire was built on the river bank. Those partitipating in the event were Misses Claudine and Maria McCullough, Angelo and Wilda Getty, Bessie, Vida and Ida Engle, Ethel and Viola Broadwater, Beulah Bender and Hazel Younkin; Messrs. John Livengood, John Younkin, Jacob Gnagy, Robert Price, O. T. Broadwater, Chas. Keller and Clay Stanton.

The Girl's Sunshine Class were entertained by Miss Viola Broadwater on Friday, Red Cross work being the diversion. Refreshments followed.

Misses Mary and Ruth Stanton entertained the sewing club in a most delightful manner last Thursday, serving a delicious collation on the big cool porch after which work was concluded. The out of town guests were Miss Lulu Luecke, of Paterson, Miss J. Tibbetts Shaw, of New York City, and their house guest, Miss Mary Cuddy, of Baltimore.

Miss Maud Bevans, chairman of the Red Cross service bureau, received a check for one hundred dollars for the cause this week, with request that the donor's name be witheld. All honor to the giver! Several new members have been added also.

Miss Ruth Keller, who has been ill at Cornell University, at Ithaca, N. Y., the past week, is now able to resume her studies. Acute indigestion confined her to the university infirmary for several days, much to the alarm of her friends, appendicitis being at first suspected, Miss Mayme McLaughlin, of Pittsburgh, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Llewellyn Blocher.

Miss Gertrude Hone and Miss Christine Winterberg have each been on the sick list this week.

Dr. and Mrs. McDonald, from Cumberland, are among the many guests at the Casselman Hotel.

A party of young people from Brownsville spent last week at the Casselman Hotel.

H. C. Bonig and daughter, Miss Winifred, were Cumberland visitors, Thursday evening.

Miss Marie Connor has returned from a visit to her aunt at Youngwood, Pa.

Harold Miller spent Sunday as the guest of Daniel Hershberger.

Mrs. C. A. Bender, Mrs. Ida Hershberger and sons, Misses Grace Yutzy and Beulah Bender enjoyed a motor trip to Frostburg, Saturday, with Miss Beulah as chauffeur.

Miss Marie Cochrane, of Salisbury, is visiting her sister, Mrs. James Younkin.

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Shirer, of Somerfield, Pa., are spendinfi their vacation at Washington, D. C., leaving their little son in care of Mrs. Shirer's mother, Mrs. Joel H. Miller.

The Girls' Sunshine Class will hold an icecream social on C. B. Getty's lawn on Saturday night, proceeds for Loysville Orphan's Home.

Miss Mary Royer, of Keysers Ridge, has been the guest of Mrs. Harry Leatham this week.

Miss Effie Gingerich, of Washington, D. C., is visiting her mother, Mrs. Lewis Gingerich.

Miss Irma Swauger has returned from a two weeks' visit at Midland.

Miss Ina Taylor, of Cumberland, is a guest at the National hotel.

Misses Maria and Claudine McCullough, of Friendsville, spent the weekend with Misses Angela and Wilda Getty.

Miss Anna Speicher, of Elk Lick, has been the guest of Miss Thelma Glotfelty.

J. O. Getty has had his residence improved with a new coat of paint, the work being done by Ward Beachy.

Miss Mary Cuddy, of Baltimore, has been enjoying the hospitality of the Misses Stanton, of Little Crossing, the past week.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. James Younkin on Sunday, July 29th a baby boy.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Walker and family, from Knoxville, Tenn., and Lewis Luecke and daughter, Miss Laura, from Patterson, N. J., have been guests of Miss Christine Winterberg the past week.

Rev. and Mrs. L. N. Wilson and house guests, Mrs. W. Wisseman from Tomsbrook, Va., were dinner guests of Mrs. J. A. Beachy, Tuesday evening.

A number of young people from Elk Lick, Cumberland and Frostburg attended the scout dance here on Thursday evening.

GERMANY'S FEAR.

There are those who assert that we have indisputable proof that Germany is breaking. These people find this proof in her willingness to make peace without annexation or indemnities, without any advantage from the superior military position which she holds, or from the submarine campaign which she pretends to think is being fatal to England.

It is possible that Germany's eagerness for peace and reconciliation is based, as these people assert, upon economic conditions or a ralization that eventually she must be militarily defeated. But there is another explanation. Germany has to fear something worse than military defeat or economic pressure. The most terrible thing that could befall her would be an economic alliance against her after the war. Germany as Germany cannot exist if shut off from the markets of England, America, France, Russia, Italy. It is vain to say that a military victory by Germany would enable her to include in her peace terms a provision that there should be no economic alliance against her. She could not, in any peace terms, compel the good will of other nations. If the war ends with them hating Germany they will not buy her goods, even if no tariff walls discriminate against those goods. It is not possible to compell the will of peoples. It is not possible in peace terms to provide against an economic boycott.

The greatest enemy that Germany has is the widspread hatred which exists against her in the world. Culturally she might be able to endure that hatred. Economically she cannot. It is to her interest to end the war before that feeling is intensified. It is to her interest to end the war and sacrifice all material gains if she can become reconciled to the other members of the family of nations. This economic threat is the most powerful weapon which the enemies of Germany hold in their hands.

ENEMIES OF THE COUNTY AND NATION.

In every national crisis there have been hosts of shrewd men who saw a chance to mint the blood and tears of a nation into drops of gold. We speak bravely of Washington's soldiers at Valley Forge; we say nothing at all about the "patriots" at home whose extortion made that winter the hell that it was. Even in Revolutionary times, ghoulish men who would profit out of woe—illegitimate, piratical profits—were in evidence.

In the civil war it was the same thing. Men sold shoddy to the government and rations unfit for use, and squirmed themselves into the government service to do business with themselves in matters of transportation and supplies.

The scandals of the Spanish-American war, which are still remembered by the mature generation, arose from the same cause. Men took advantage of the stress of the times to reap fortunes which were paid for not only in the need of the people but in the death of men through neglect and illnourishment.

The traitor who trafficks with the enemy has his place fixed for him beyond retrieve. Nothing can ever happen in this world to render him respectable. But the man who trafficks with his own government to that government's hurt, charging it three prices for what is buys, shoving upon it shoddy goods because the emergency is so imperious that he knows he can get by with it—knowing all the while (if he thinks at all) that he is robbing the people who are already burdened with a war, and cheating the soldiers who have already offered all they have to give—we say that such a man should have his place and the name of his act as definitely fixed as the other sort of traitor has.

It may be that our imaginative powers are too narrow, it may be that our experience of men is too limited, but we cannot think of such men amongst us—men bearing the name American, men dubbing themselves patriots, men who shouted loudest for war and talked most about sacrifice—we cannot think of such men and know what they are doing, and what they are willing to do for profit, without feeling that they are more active and dangerous enemies of the United States than the heart-persuaded pro-German who shouts for the kaiser. The pro-German is at least one-faced and honest; these reapers of illegitimate profit are two-faced and traitorous.

It goes without saying that our government must do business with the business men of the country. It goes without saying that a lumber man could, if he would, do great service as the government's agent in buying lumber supplies, and that experts or manufacturers in any line, if they were honest and wholly consecrated to the government's interests, could be greatly useful in the work of purchasing that must be done. It ought to be, if we were all patriotic, that the government could trust the great meat baron to buy from himself as a government agent at a lower price than smaller purchasers could. We say it ought to be so. If we were patriots, if we were honest, if we felt the war in our heart as we ought to, this government ought to be able to rely on everyone of us doing the big thing without a penny increase of profit.

How woefully some men fail in this test! With our unspoiled manhood marching out to face the supreme test, how pitiable, how execrable it is to see men biding safely at home to coin illegitimate dollars out of this great mobilization of the nation's young manhood! Young men are leaving the payments on their homes, in order to go to war; some rich men are staying in the rear to get the gold of greed by pressing a goverment that is up against so big a task that it simply must trust whole hosts of men to do business for it.

The man whom we denounce is the man who bleeds money from a people that is already beginning to bleed real blood for freedom. Any man who exults in war as a chance to further his nefarious commercial trickery is an enemy to his country and an enemy to humanity; he belongs to the reptilian race on which all men instinctively set their foot.

Bible Conference Closes Sunday.

The Bible Conference which has been in session during the past week at Mountain Lake Park, held under the auspices of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, will close Sunday, with six great meetings.

Beginning at 7:30 a. m. the Rev. John C. Page, will lead the prayer and testimony service. At 9:30 Mr. W. G. A. Millar, of Pittsburgh, will tell how a business man can do work for God during his business hours. At 10:30 the sermon will be preached by the Rev. George E. Guille, a noted Bible teacher from the southland.

At 3 p. m. the Rev. Dr. Ed. F. Cook, director of the Missionary Course in the Moody Institute, will speak.

The vesper service at 5 o'clock will be led by Miss Eleanor Stafford Millar, of Melbourne, Australia.

The closing service will be of special interest. The Rev. George E. Guille will preach, and farewell addresses will be made by Mr. E. B. Buckalew, Prof. Hammontree and others.

At every service there will be selections rendered by the male quartette, a solo by Mr. Hammontree and special music by the choir. Readers of THE REPUBLICAN are invited to attend as are the people of Oakland.

The Great Crellin Rally.

Next Sabbath there will be an all day singing and "Fellowship" meet at Ashby's grove, Crellin. Bishop W. M. Weekley, D. D., of Parkersburg, will speak at 10:30 a. m. There will be singers from all over the county and from Preston county, W. Va. If you really wish to enjoy a great speritual day come and bring a basket and your neighbor and take part in the services. Each church and Sunday school cordially invited to take part. Bishop Weekly is a great preacher and you will be pleased to hear him. Remember, it is "Fellowship Day" come and help make it a day of blessing to some one else.

Lutheran Picnic at Bittinger.

The great annual gathering of the Lutheran church at Bittinger will occur this year on next Saturday, the 18th inst., when a special program of speaking, music, etc., will be carried out. In addition to the above the folks about Bittinger who know how to prepare for picnics will be on hand with well-ladened baskets of the very many good things produced in that section of the county. A general invitation to everyone to attend the picnic is extended by the committee through these columns.

You will never regret the time spent at this gathering.

AUTOISTS MET WITH ACCIDENTS

Several Badly Hurt Sunday In The Vicinity of Oakland.

Last Sunday brought its usual toll of automobile accidents in Garrett county when three more or less serious mishaps occurred on the State road within a few miles of Oakland, resulting in the injury of some eight or more persons.

About 1 o'clock in the afternoon the Oldsmobile driven by Mr. J. F. Cole, of Fairmont, West Va., was wrecked at the Sebold turn, fourteen miles north of town, when all the occupants of the car, with the single exception of the owner and driver, were hurt, two of them seriously. The car contained besides Mr. and Mrs. Cole and their little four-year old child, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Johnson and their two year old child. The inujred were:

R. A. Johnson, cut and bruised and painfully injured about the chest.

Mrs. Cole, compound fracture of her leg.

Baby Johnson, abrasion about the face.

Baby Cole, badly cut lip and bruises.

The accident occurred at the intersection of the Hoys and Accident roads at which point the road leading to the latter point makes a sharp down hill curve. Mr. Cole stated that it was his first trip over the road and thinking the Hoyes road was the proper one to take he had nearly passed the point to turn before he discovered his error when he gave the steering wheel a sharp thrust. The front wheel of the car collapsed and after turning completely over twice righted itself in the roadway, but was turned in the contrary direction.

The occupants were all thrown clear of the car except Mr. Johnson, who was pinned beneath it and was released within a few minutes by other automobilists who were on the road. As soon as possible medical aid was summoned and Dr. Ravenscroft of Accident was soon at the scene who rendered first-aid to the injured and accompanied them to the Home Sanatorium in Oakland where they are recovering. At first it was feared that Mr. Johnson had been fatally hurt.

Later on Sunday afternoon a car from Thomas being driven by a man named Brennen, turned out of the Weber road on to the Oakland and Park road where it came in collision first with the Ford of Wallace Brown and darting across the road hit the car of Mr. J. A. Turney. Both cars were at a standstill when struck and both were badly damaged. Brennen had his family with him, all of whom were thrown from the machine and bruised. They received treatment at the Home Sanatorium and were later taken home.

In front of the residence of Mr. H. W. Smouse, on the Gortner road, Mr. Howard Eckles, a former Oakland resident but now a successful merchant of Fairmont, West Va., was struck by a car when he walked from behind his own machine into the centre of the road. The injured man was taken into Mr. Smouse's home where it was found he had suffered a badly bruised and lacerated leg.

Sunday School District Convention

The Sunday schools of District No. 7 met in a rally and convention last Sabbath at Pleasant Valley U. B. church. Seven out of the eight schools were represented and reported.

The rally began with a union session of the Sunday schools at 9:30 o'clock. At 11 o'clock the Rev. G. S. Hanleiter gave an illustrated talk, "Christ in the Tabernacle or the Bloody Way," which was spoken very highly of. At the conclusion of the address the vast congregation repaired to the splendid grove which surrounds the church manse where a sumptuous dinner was spread which was enjoyed. Each house wife had prepared more than enough for herself and friends.

The afternoon session was called to order by the acting president at 1:45 o'clock. The splendid choir under the direction of Mr. G. M. Brown and A. J. Lee rendered several numbers. After prayer by Dr. Shultz of Oakland M. E. church the Rev. Hanleiter introduced Mr. E. R. Jones, the County Sunday School president who spoke on "The relation of the home to the Sabbath school." The address was forceful and was appreciated. Little Miss Lee, the daughter of Mr. Robert T. Lee, sang beautifully a solo. The splendid choir joining in the chorus. She and the choir were urged to attend the great "Fellowship Day" next Sabbath at Crellin (Ashby's Grove) and sing the same song.

Dr. Shultz was introduced and made a splendid address.

The committee on nomination: Josiah Beckman, Albert White, Mrs. Ready, Miss Bernice Moomaw and J. A. Sims reported the following names who were elected as officers for District No. 7 for the ensueing year: President, A. J. Lee; vice president, H. V. Leighton; secretary, Miss Grace Callis; treasurer, Mrs. L. C. Yutzy; superintendent cradle roll department, Mrs. T. E. Meese; superintendent home department, Mrs. H. B. Harvey. The county president, assisted by Rev. G. S. Hanleter, installed the new officers, after which the services of the day was closed.

The church was beautifully decorated in national colors and an abundance of cut flowers which were tastfully arranged. Some one deserves commendation for the splendid success and preparation for the rally.

FAITH IN PRAYER

Woman Hurt By Auto Declines Medical Aid.

Determined to be "cured by faith," Mrs. R. A. McCauley, of near Grantsville, injured yesterday afternoon in an automobile accident, declined the services of Dr. J. Marshall Price, of Frostburg, trusting to prayer.

Mrs. McCauley is a member of the sect known as the Assembly of God, which is holding a big camp meeting at Shatt. She came from Grantsville yesterday afternoon in an automobile, with her three young children, to attend the services in their little Shaft church. While attempting to cross the road outside the church to enter the car, in which were seated her three children, she was struck by a Westernport auto coming in the opposite direction, thrown down between the wheels, and was thought to have been badly injured. She was carried into the church, Dr. Price was notified and came from Frostburg, but was not allowed to enter the church to minister to the injured woman, friends and members of the sect stating that it was not necessary, that she would be cured by faith and prayer.

When seen in the church last night by a Daily News man, Mrs. McCauley had one of her children with her and was being attended by three women members of the Assembly of God. She evidently had suffered from severe shock as well as being badly bruised and has receivsd a deep cut on her ankle. But she confidently declined the service of a medical man, asserting her faith in prayer according to the tenets of the religion of the Assembly of God, of which she is a devout follower. Plans were for the patient to stay in the church all night with her women friends.—Cumberland News.

Why Use Intermittent Method In Canning?

To the Editor of The Republican:

Bacteria in their active growing state can be killed by subjecting them to moist heat at boiling temperature for different lengths of time. Unfortunately for the canner many kinds of bacteria have the power under adverse conditions of producing spores which are much more resistant to heat than are the growing stages. These spores are often able to resist boiling temperatures for hours. Almost all the bacteria which are so resistant to heat when in the spore state are abundant in cultivated soil, and therefore present upon the pods and husks of such vegetables as corn, peas and beans, which contain the food upon which the spore-bearing forms thrive. The presence of these bacteria upon the parts of vegetables to be canned, therefore, is almost inevitable. The difficulty of sterilizing is increasingly great when such vegetables have been bruised or allowed to stand, or have among them decayed portions. Since certain vegetables are frequently attacked by spore-bearing bacteria, a longer period of sterilization at boiling temperature is required for them than for fruits. Often they are sterilized by boiling three to five hours. The spores of some species of bacteria have been known to resist even five hours' boiling. Since this might give a chance for failure and intermittent or fractional sterilization is applied to household canning when a hot water canner is used for processing certain vegetables. Intermittent sterilization consists of applying boiling temperature to vegetables already packed in containers for a period on each of three successive days, sealing the jars immediately after each boiling or processing. After each daily processing the containers are kept at ordinary temperature, under which the spores not killed by boiling develop into bacteria of the growing state, which are then destroyed by the next period of boiling. Rarely do many spores fail thus to develop and be destroyed by the third processing. Processing for one hour in a water bath at boiling temperature on the first day, repeated on the second and third days, will ordinarily sterilize beans, peas, and corn in quart jars. The flavor of vegetables thus processed is finer than when they are subjected to high temperature. This is the safest method to follow with hot water canners.

Bulletins describing in detail the method recommended by the government together with many valuable recipes may be secured by writing to—Miss Frances E. Gerber, Co. Home Demonstration Agent, Oakland, Md.

Dislocated Arm.

Mrs. J. Morgan Orr, of near town, had the misfortune, on Saturday afternoon last, to fall on the pavement on Alder street and dislocated her arm at the elbow. Mrs. Orr suffered extremely for a few days following the accident but is now better.

BOTH PHONES PROMPT SERVICE

BITTINGER.

The public is cordially invited to attend the Lutheran Sunday school picnic, to be held in Ellithorp's Grove on Saturday, August 18th. Without enumerating the various features of the special program prepared for the occasion, a general good time is promised all who attend, and all seasonable refreshments will be served on the grounds during the day and during the evening festival.

O. C. Buckle and family motored over to Somerset county, Pa., last Sunday and made a brief visit to Berlin.

A. J. Orendorf and wife, accompanied by Miss Cora Bittinger, spent Sundey with Mr Orendorf's parents near Jennings.

The picnic attraction at Meadow Mountain last Saturday enticed many people from their homes on this side of the mountain, and a squad of the young gentlemen were held prisoners by the young ladies of that neighborhood and were not released until early Sunday morning.

B. H. Wiley, of Oakland, spent Sunday at his home here.

Work has been begun on the new road over Beachy Hill and it will not be long until a far better grade will be had at that point.

The time is now ripe for the annual outbreak of political fever, and the visitation of candidates is daily expected.

GORTNER

On last Saturday a very pleasant event took place in Martin's Grove near the Swan Meadow school house, it being the family reunion of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gortner, of Loch Lynn, at which all the family were present, namely, William and Lee, of Akron, Ohio; Peter, of Shabbona, Ill; John and Robert Beach, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mrs. Archie Davis, of Frostburg; Grover, Guss, Ula and Arlington, of Loch Lynn. The grandchildren were all present, six in number, Edna, Elizabeth, Clara, Earl and Mildred Davis and Clair Beach. The other relatives present were Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Gortner and family, of this place; Mrs. Lewis Gortner, of Oakland; Mrs. Mary Brenninger and sons Peter, Geo. and Alvin, of Sunnyside and Miss Alma Lohr, of Oakland; Mr. and Mrs. Silas Beachy, Mr. and Mrs. Christ Beachy and daughter Bessie, of Bittinger and Mrs. Mannassah Schrock, of Mt. Lake. Among the friends were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Arnold, Mrs. Kitty Hendrickson and daughter Mary Margaret, of Texas, Mrs. Catherine Slabaugh and family, Mrs. Robert Martin, of Thomas, W. Va., and Mary Martin.

Mrs. John Irwin and daughter Virginia, of Pittsburgh, Pa., are visiting Mrs. F. S. Irwin.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Smouse and son, of Fairmont, W. Va., were visiting Mr. Smouse's brothers W. H. and Bert Smouse last week.

Mr. Cris Bender, Mr. and Mrs. Eli Yoder and Miss Lillian Hostetler, of Meyersdale, motored to this place Sunday and were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Beachy.

Harvey Swartzentruber spent the week end with relatives near Grantsville.

Rev. and Mrs. E. R. Hauser and daughter Eleanor, of Juniata, Pa., are spending their vacation with relatives at this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Dodge and Mr. and Mrs. Artie Dodge spent Saturday and Sunday in Cumberland.

Messrs. Lemuel and Osborne Beckman and the Misses Paugh's, from near Gorman were callers at the home of D. M. Schrock Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Swartzentruber, of Millersburg, Ohio, arrived here Friday evening, making the trip through in Mr. Swartzentruber's car.

Messrs. Enos Maust and Floyd Yoder, Misses Ina Maust, and Vernie Yoder, of Grantsvills, are spending a few days with relatives at this place.

Roy Lichty and Miss Mabel Pike spent Saturday and Sunday the guests of Miss Alma Miller at Grantsville.

Noah Slabaugh and family were the guests of his mother, Mrs. Christian Slabaugh Sunday.

There will be church services by the German Baptist Brethren Sunday morning. You are all invited to attend.

Messrs. Ansel and Erwin Miller, of Springs, Pa., took dinner at S. J. Lichty's Sunday.

BREEDLOVE

Mr. S. H. Lewis and W. C. Bord made a flying trip to Mt. Lake Park Sunday.

Miss Elva Christman and Miss Mary Breedlove were Sunday visitors at Shafer, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Christman, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Breedlove, of Shafer, were guests at R. E. L. Breedlove's Sunday.

Mr. J. M. Christman, who is running an engine for W. C. Bond at Wilsonia, spent Sunday at home.

Mrs. Perly Sell is attending the protracted meeting at Wilsonia which is held at that place by Rev. Bishop.

Mrs. Milt Christman was calling on Miss Ruth Lewis recently.

Mr. Robert Breedlove, of Thomas, W. Va., spent a few days last week with his parents at this place.

Mrs. Chas. Winters was a pleasant caller at Milt Christman's Saturday evening.

Quite a number of people from this place attended the picnic at Aurora Saturday, and all reported a good time.

Rev. Bishop, of Fairfax, will begin his revival meeting at Breedlove August 14.

LawnFete.

There will be a lawn fete held on the lawn of Trinity Reformed church at New Germany, August 25, for the benefit of the church. Everobody invited to come.

WOMEN PATRONS OF THE BANK

A FEW years ago, there were practically no women who were patrons of the Bank. Now, however, women recognize the service of the Bank as one of the aids in handling household and personal money affairs. The progressive woman deposits allowances for home expenses and pays all accounts by check. The result is that her money is always safeguarded against loss by fire or burglary and her money goes farther because of the systematic way in which it is handled.

A Romantic Wedding.

A very beautiful and romantic wedding recently occurred which we cannot refrain from making a note of. The contracting parties were Miss Esther Hinebaugh, of McHenry, and Mr. Gorman Thayer, of Thayerville. Being a life long friend and acquaintance of both we can truly say the bride is a sweet dispositioned and accomplished young lady with a smile for everyone. The groom is a most congenial and industrious young man, always ready to lend a helping hand to all. This happy event took place at the residence of Rev. McCamic at Deer Park, Sunday morning, Aug. 5th. The attendants were Miss Hazel Thayer, sister of the groom, and Mr. Lex Baily, of Clearfield, Pa. After the ceremony the bride and groom drove to the famous Swallow Falls where they spent a few days camping. We extend to them our heartiest congratulations and best wishes for a long and happy life.

The English Lutheran church at Accident will hold a lawn fete on Saturday, August 25, when refreshments of all kinds will be served. Everybody invited.

Taken to Sykesville.

Sheriff Albert Ashby left Oakland Monday night for Sykesville, taking with him Clarence Bittinger, of near Bittinger, who was taken in charge by officials at Elk Garden and brought to Oakland Sunday, where he was found lying upon private property and making threats to do personal injury to the residents of that place. He was examined Monday by Drs. McComas and Broadwater and pronounced insane and ordered to the State Insane Asylum. The Sheriff also took to the same institution John Ringer, who has been an inmate of the jail for more than two years.

Empire Theatre Program.

Tonight, the Bottle Imp, featuring Sessue Hayakawa.

Friday, Aug. 17, As Men Love, with House Peters and Myrtle Stedman.

Saturday, Aug. 18, The Spirit of Romance, featuring Vivian Martin; also a Black Diamond comedy will be shown.

Monday, Aug. 20, The Bond Between in which George Beban takes the leading part.

Tuesday, Aug. 21, a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon of more than ordinary interest.

Wednesday, Aug. 22, A School for Husbands, with Fannie Ward leading.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The Park is simply packed with people at this time, and the audiences in attendance on the Moody Bible Institute are large. There should be a large turnout of our people at this meeting Sunday.

E. E. Kessner has purchased the barber shop of Earl Willett and will conduct it in the Hicks House.

Owing to the lack of labor the State aid road is not progressing rapidly.

Pototaes sold on the street this week at 25 cents per peck. Other vegetables are coming down, but butter and eggs are as high as ever.

The crops hereabout are the largest on record.

The Secrets of the Hohenzollerns

STARTLING EXPOSURE OF INNER LIFE OF KAISER AND CROWN PRINCE AS TOLD BY COUNT ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX

EDITORIAL NOTE. — William LeQueux, who here chronicles for his friend, Count Ernst von Heltzendorff, the latter's revelations of the inner life of the imperial German court, has long been recognized throughout Europe as the possessor of its innermost secrets.

The English "Who's Who" says of him: "He has intimate knowledge of the secret service of Continental countries and is considered by the government (of Great Britain) an authority on such matters." Another authority says: "Few people have been more closely associated with or know more of the astounding inner machinery of Germany than he.

LeQueux probably has more sources of secret information at his command than any contemporary in civil life, and for the last six years the British Government has made valuable use of his vast store of secret information through a specially organized department with which LeQueux works as a voluntary assistant.

Count von Heltzendorff became an intimate of LeQueux several years prior to the outbreak of the war; he has been living in retirement in France since August, 1914, and it was there that LeQueux received from the crown prince's late personal adjutant permission to make public these revelations of the inner life of the Hohenzollerns—that the democracies of the world might come to know the real, but heretofore hidden, personalities of the two dominant members of the autocracy they are now arrayed against.

THE MYSTERIES OF FRAU KLEIST

THE clever intrigues of Frau Kleist were unknown to any outside the court circle at Potsdam. She was indeed a queer personage, "only less of a personage than his majesty," as Prince Bulow declared to me one day as we sat together in my room in the Berlin Schloss.

Frau Kleist was the court dancing mistress, whose fastidious judgment had to be satisfied by any young debutante or officer before they presumed to dance before royalty at the state balls. Perhaps she was seventy. Her real age I never knew.

Truly Frau Kleist, with her neat waist and thin, refined face, was a very striking figure at the Berlin court. The intricacies of the minuet and gavotte, as well as those of the old-world dances in which she delighted, were taught by the old lady to Prince Joachim and Princess Victoria Luise, both of whom always went in deadly fear of her caustic tongue and overbearing manner.

The emperor never permitted any dancing at court which was not up to a high standard of excellence, and all who sought to dance were compelled to pass before the critical eye of the sharp-tongued old lady in her stiff silken gown.

Whence she had come or who had been responsible for her appointment nobody knew. One thing was quite certain, that though at an age when usually rheumatism prevents agility yet she was an expert dancer.

The old woman lived in considerable style in a fine house close to the Glienicke bridge at Potsdam, beneath the Babelsberg, a power to be reckoned with by all who desired to enter the court circle.

Regarding her, many strange stories were afloat. One was that she was an ex-dancer, the mother of the famous Mademoiselle "Clo-Clo" Durand, premiere danseuse of the Paris opera, and another was that she had been mistress of the ballet at the Imperial opera in Petrograd in the days of the Emperor Alexander. But so great a mystery were her antecedents that nobody knew anything for certain, save that, at the age of nearly seventy, she had access at any hour to the kaiser's private cabinet. I have often seen her whisper to his majesty strange secrets which she had picked up here and there—secrets that were often transferred to certain confidential quarters.

Those at court who secured the benignant smiles of Frau Kleist knew that their future path in life would be full of sunshine, but woe betide those upon whom she knit her brows in disapproval. Frau Kleist kept her pretty house and her big Mercedes car upon the secret money payments she received from those who "for value" begged her favors. With many young officers the payment to Frau Kleist was to open the back door to the emperor's favor.

We in the Neues Palais (New Palace) knew it. But surely it did not concern us, for all of us looked askance at those who strove so strenuously and eagerly for "commands" to court functions, and really we were secretly glad if the parvenus of both sexes were well bled before they were permitted by Frau Erna to make their obeisance before royalty.

The palace world at every European court is a narrow little world of its own, unknown and unsuspected by the man in the street. There one sees the worst side of human nature without any leaven of the best or even nobler side. The salary-grabber, the military adventurer, the pinchbeck diplomat, the commercial parvenu, and the scientist, together with their jewel-bedecked womenfolk, elbow each other in order to secure the notice of the all-highest one, who, in that green-upholstered private room wherein I worked with him, often smiled at the unseemly bustle while he calmly discriminated among men and women according to their merits.

It is in that calm discretion that the emperor excels, possessing almost uncanny foresight.

"I know! Frau Kleist has told me!" were the words his majesty used on many occasions when I had ventured perhaps to express doubt regarding some scandalous story or serious allegation. Therefore I was confident that the seventy-year-old dancing mistress, whose past was a complete mystery, was an important secret agent of the emperor's.

And what more likely? The kaiser, as ruler of that complex empire, would naturally seek to know the truth concerning those who sought his favor before they were permitted to click their heels or wag their fans and bow the knee in his imperial presence. And he had, no doubt, with that innate cunning, appointed his creature to the position of court dancing mistress.

Emperor's First View of an Airplane.

On October 17, 1908, I had returned with the emperor and his suite from Hamburg, where his majesty had been present at the launching of one of Herr Ballin's monster American liners. I was seated at the side table in his private room in the Berlin Schloss, taking down certain confidential instructions which he wished to be sent at once by one of the imperial couriers to the commandant of Posen.

Suddenly Von Kahlberg, my colleague, entered with a message and handed it to his majesty. The kaiser at once grew excited and, turning to me said:

"The crown prince sends word from Potsdam that the American, Orville Wright, is flying on the Bornstedter feld. We must go at once. Order the cars. And, Von Krahlberg, inform her majesty at once. She will accompany us, no doubt."

Quickly I placed before his majesty one of his photographs—knowing that it would be wanted for presentation to the daring American—and he took up his pen and scrawled his signature across it.

Within a quarter of an hour three of the powerful cars were on their way to Potsdam, the emperor with Herr Anton Reitschel—a high German official at Constantinople—and Professor Vambery in the first car; the kaiserin with her daughter, Victoria Luise, and the latter's ober-gouvernante (governess), with one of the court ladies, in the next; while in the third I rode with Major von Scholl, one of the equerries.

On arrival at the Bornstedter feld it was already growing dusk, and a great disappointment awaited us. The crown prince rode up to inform us gravely that the flying was over for the day. At this the kaiser grew angry, for he had been out once before upon a wild-goose chase, only to find that Orville Wright had gone home, declaring the wind too strong.

At his father's anger, however, "Willie" burst out laughing, declaring that he was only joking, and that all was in readiness. Indeed, as he spoke, the aviator came up and I presented him to his majesty.

Then, while he stood alone in the center of the great, sandy plain, Mr. Orville Wright clambered into his machine and, rising, made many circuits high above us.

The emperor stood with Herr Reitschel and the shaggy old professor, straining his eyes with keenest interest. It was the first time his majesty had seen an airplane in flight. Much had been promised of Von Zeppelin's invention, yet the German public had, until those demonstrations by the American aviator, taken but little heed of the heavier-than-air machine. At that time, indeed, the emperor had not taken up Von Zeppelin, and it was only after seeing Orville Wright's demonstrations that he entered with any enthusiasm into aeronautical problems.

High above us against the clear evening sky, wherein the stars had already begun to twinkle, the daring American rose, dipped and banked, his machine droning like a huge gadfly, much to the interest and astonishment of the emperor.

"Marvelous!" he exclaimed, as I stood beside him, with the empress on his right. "How is it done?"

The sight of a man flying in the air, maneuvering his machine at will, rising swiftly, and then planing down with the engine cut off, was one of the most amazing spectacles the loyal Potsdamers had ever seen. Even the emperor, with all his dreams of world power, could never for a moment have foreseen what a great factor airplanes would be in war.

At last Wright came down in a spiral, banked slightly, steadied himself, and then came lightly to earth within a few yards of where we stood, having been the first to exhibit to the emperor how completely the air had been conquered.

A LETTER FROM THE CROWN PRINCE'S PERSONAL ADJUTANT TO WILLIAM LEQUEUX, POSSESSOR OF THE SECRETS OF EUROPE.

Veneux Nadon,
par Moret-sur-Loing,
Seine-et-Marne,
February 10th, 1917.

My dear LeQueux:

I have just finished reading the proofs of your articles describing my life as an official at the imperial court at Potsdam, and the two or three small errors you made I have duly corrected.

The gross scandals and wily intrigues which I have related to you were many of them known to yourself, for, as the intimate friend of Luisa, the ex-crown princess of Saxony, you were, before the war, closely associated with many of those at court whose names appear in these articles.

The revelations which I have made, and which you have recorded here, are but a tithe of the disclosures which I could make, and if the world desires more, I shall be pleased to furnish you with other and even more startling details, which you may also put into print.

My service as personal adjutant to the German crown prince is, happily, at an end, and now, with the treachery of Germany against civilization glaringly revealed, I feel, in my retirement, no compunction in exposing all I know concerning the secrets of the kaiser and his son.

With most cordial greetings from

Your sincere friend,

(Signed) ERNST VON HELTZENDORFF.

Afterwards, though it had now grown dark, the emperor, by the powerful headlamps of the three cars, thoroughly examined the American's airplane, the aviator explaining every detail.

From that moment for months afterwards the kaiser was constantly talking of aviation. He commanded photographs of various types of airplanes, together with all literature on the subject, to be placed before him. Indeed, he sent over to Britain, in secret, two officers to attend the airplane meetings held at Doncaster and Blackpool, where a large number of photographs were taken, and duly found their way to his table.

The Dancing Mistress' Visit.

I have recalled the emperor's first sight of an airplane in flight, in company with Herr Anton Reitschel and Professor Vambery, because of an incident which occurred that same day. Just before midnight the emperor was giving me certain instructions to be sent to Carlton House Terrace when the door opened without any knock of permission, and upon the threshold there stood Frau Kleist.

"Have I your majesty's permission to enter?" she asked.

"Of course, of course," replied the emperor, turning in his chair. "Come in and close the door. It has turned quite cold tonight. Well?" he asked, looking at her inquiringly.

The court dancing mistress hesitated for a second. Their eyes met, and in that glance I saw complete understanding.

"May I speak in confidence with your majesty?" she asked, advancing into the room. Except the court ladies she was the only female at court whom the sentries stationed at the end of the corridor allowed to pass to his majesty's private cabinet.

But Frau Kleist had access everywhere. Her eyes were the eyes of the emperor. Many a diplomat, financier, military or naval commander has been raised to position of favorite because he first secured the good graces of the ex-ballerina. And, alas! many a good, honest man has been cast out of the Potsdam circle into oblivion because of the poisonous declaration of that smiling, bejeweled old woman.

"Of what do you wish to speak?" inquired the emperor.

"Of the Reitschel affair," was the old woman's low reply.

At her words the kaiser frowned slightly, and dismissed me. I bowed myself out, and closed the door upon the emperor and his clever female spy.

That she should have at that late hour come from Potsdam—for, looking down into the courtyard, I saw the lights of her big Mercedes—showed that some underhand work was in progress.

By handling, as I did, hundreds of secret reports which reached the emperor I had learned much concerning Herr Anton Reitschel, and from old Von Donaustauf, master of ceremonies, I had also been able to obtain certain missing links concerning the intrigue.

Reitschel, a burly, round-faced, fair-haired Prussian of quite superior type, held the position of chief director of the German-Ottoman bank in Constantinople. His duty for the past three years had been to conciliate the sultan and to lend German money to any industrial enterprise in which any grain of merit could possibly be discovered. He had been singled out, taken from the Dresdner bank, and sent to Constantinople by the kaiser in order to play Germany's secret game in Turkey—especially that of the Bagdad railway—and to combat with German gold Great Britain's diplomacy with Tewfik Pasha and old Abdul Hamid, in view of "The Day," which the emperor had long ago determined should soon dawn.

As old Von Donaustauf had put it:

"Our employer intends that, notwithstanding Britain's policy in the near East, Germany shall soon rule from Berlin to Bagdad. Herr Reitschel is in reality charged with the work of 'Germanizing' the Ottoman empire." That I already knew by the many secret reports of his which arrived so constantly from Constantinople.

Truly the game which the emperor was playing in secret against the other powers of Europe was a desperate one. On the one hand, the kaiser was making pretence of fair dealing with Great Britain and France, yet on the other his agent, Herr Reitschel, was ever busy lending money in all directions in order to secure favor in Germany's interest.

Yet a further game was being played, namely, that while the kaiser was making pretence of being the best friend of the sultan Abdul Hamid, visiting Constantinople and Palestine, building fountains, endowing institutes, yet he was also secretly supporting the Young Turk party so as to effect the sultan's downfall.

Herr Anton had been paying a number of flying visits to Berlin, and had many private audiences of both kaiser and sultan.

Suddenly all of us were surprised by the announcement that the kaiser's favored civilian in Turkey had married Mademoiselle Julie de Lagarenne, daughter of Paul de Lagarenne, son of the great French sugar refiner, and secretary of the French embassy at Rome. A week after that news was spread I met them both in Kranzler's in Unter den Linden, and there he introduced me to a pretty, dark-haired, vivacious young Frenchwoman, who spoke German well, and who told me that her husband had already given in her name for presentation at the next court.

That was about a month prior to Orville Wright's flight and the midnight visit of Frau Kleist to the emperor.

Truth to tell, the old woman's mention of Herr Reitschel's name caused me considerable misgivings, because three weeks before I had gathered certain strange facts from a secret report of a spy, who in Constantinople had been set to watch Herr Reitschel's doings. That spy was Frau Kleist's son.

The kaiser trusts nobody. Even his favorites and most intimate cronies are spied upon, and reports upon those familiar blue papers are furnished regularly. In view of what I had read in that report from Karl Kleist, I stood amazed when, at the grand court a week later, I had witnessed Herr Reitschel's French wife bow before the emperor and empress and noticed how graciously the kaiser had smiled upon her.

Nearly three months passed.

The Trip to Ilmenau.

Herr Reitschel often came from Constantinople, and frequently brought his handsome young wife with him, for he was persona grata at court. To me this was indeed strange in view of the reports of the ex-opera dancer's son—who, by the way, lived in Constantinople in the unsuspicious guise of a carpet dealer, and unknown to the bank director.

The latter had, assisted by his wife's fortune, inherited from her grandmother, purchased the Schloss Langenberg, the splendid ancestral castle and estates of the princes of Langenberg, situated in the beautiful Thuringian forest, and acknowledged to be one of the most famous shooting estates in the empire. It was not, therefore, surprising that the emperor, to mark his favor, should express a desire to shoot capercailzie there—a desire which, of course, delighted Herr Reitschel, who had only a few days before been decorated with the Order of the Black Eagle.

One afternoon in midautumn the emperor, accompanied by the crown prince and myself, together with the suite, arrived by the imperial train at the little station of Ilmenau, where, of course, Reitschel and his pretty wife, with the head and underforesters, and all sorts of civil officials in black coats and white ties bowed low as the all-highest stepped from his salon. The kaiser was most gracious to his host and hostess.

The emperor had complained of a slight cold, and in consequence, just before we left Berlin, I had been instructed to summon by telegraph a certain Doctor Vollerthun from Augsburg, who was a perfect stranger to us all, but who had, I supposed, been recommended to the emperor.

While the emperor and his host were out shooting I remained alone in a big, circular, old-world room in one of the towers of the castle, dealing with a flood of important state papers which a courier had brought from Berlin two hours before. Papers followed us daily wherever we might be.

About midday Doctor Vollerthun was ushered in to me—a short, stout, guttural-speaking man of about sixty, rather bald, and wearing big, round, gold-rimmed spectacles. I quickly handed him over to the major-domo.

About three o'clock that same afternoon a light tap came at the door, and I saw my hostess standing upon the threshold.

She was quietly but elegantly dressed, presenting the true type of the smart Parisienne, but in an instant I realized that she was very pale and agitated. Indeed, her voice trembled when she asked permission to enter.

Since her marriage I had many times chatted with her, for she often came to the palace when her husband visited Berlin. I had danced with her; I had taken her into dinner at various houses where we met, always finding her a bright and very intellectual companion.

She quietly closed the door and advanced to the table from which I had risen.

"Count von Heltzendorff!" she exclaimed in a low, strained voice. "I—I have come to seek your aid because—well, because I'm distracted, and I know that you are my husband's friend," she exclaimed in French.

"And yours also, madam," I said earnestly.

"My husband is out with the emperor!" she gasped in a curious, unnerved tone. "And I fear; oh, I fear that we are in great peril—deadly peril, every hour—every moment!"

"Really, madame, I hardly follow you," I said.

"My husband, whom I love devotedly, has done his best in the interests of his emperor. You, count, know the real aims of the kaiser in Turkey. These last six months I have watched, and have learned the truth! I know how, when the emperor went to Constantinople five months ago in pretence of friendship toward the sultan, with Professor Vambery as interpreter, he practically compelled Abdul Hamid to give him, in return for certain financial advances, those wonderful jewels which the Empress Catherine, wife of Peter the Great, gave in secret to the grand vizier to secure the escape of the Russian army across the Pruth. I know, too, how he laughed with my husband at the cleverness by which he is fooling the too trustful Turks. I—"

"Pardon, madame," I said, interrupting her, and speaking in French, "but is it really wise to speak thus of the emperor? Your husband is, I fear, guilty of great indiscretion in mentioning such matters."

"I am his wife, count, and he conceals little, if anything, from me."

I looked the pretty young woman straight in the face in fear and regret.

Instantly I realized the serious danger of the secret being betrayed to France.

"Madame," I said. "If I may be permitted, I would urge that the emperor's diplomacy neither concerns your husband, as an official, nor yourself. It is his own private affair, and should neither be discussed nor betrayed."

"I know," she said. "That is just why I have ventured to come here to consult you, monsieur! You have been my good friend as well as my husband's, and here today, while the emperor is our guest beneath our roof, I feel that I am in greatest peril!"

"Why?" I asked with considerable surprise.

"The emperor has already learned that I know the truth regarding his secret," was her slow reply. "By what means his majesty discovered it, I, alas! know not. But I do know from a confidential quarter that I have incurred the emperor's gravest displeasure and hatred."

"Who is your informant?" I inquired sternly, eager to further investigate the great intrigue.

"A certain person who must be nameless."

"Have you spoken to anybody of the emperor's secret plans in Turkey, or of his possession of the Empress Catherine's jewels?"

"I have not uttered a word to a single soul except my husband. I swear it."

"Your husband was extremely indiscreet in revealing anything," I declared again quite frankly.

"I fully admit that. But what can I do? How shall I act?" she asked in a low, tense voice. "Advise me, do."

For some moments I remained silent. The situation was difficult.

"Well, madame," I replied after reflection, "if you are really ready to promise the strictest secrecy and leave the matter to me, I will endeavor to find a way out of the difficulty—providing you—good German that you are by marriage—will take, before the emperor himself, an oath of complete secrecy."

"I am ready to do anything—anything for my dear husband's sake," the handsome young woman assured me, tears welling in her fine dark eyes.

"In that case, then, please leave the matter entirely in my hands," I said.

That same night, about ten o'clock, the emperor entered the room to which I had just returned to work.

"Send Frau Kleist to me," he snapped. "And I will summon you later when I want you, Heltzendorff."

Frau Kleist! I had no idea the woman had arrived at the castle. But I dispatched one of the servants to search for her, and afterwards heard her high-pitched voice as she ascended the stairs to hold secret counsel with his majesty.

Below I found the fat, fair-haired little doctor from Augsburg, who was still an enigma, but eager to see his imperial patient.

Suddenly one of the imperial flunkey's bowed at the door, commanding the doctor to the royal presence, and he left me, hot and flurried.

Had the emperor called the unknown doctor into consultation with Frau Kleist?

Inquiries I had made concerning the doctor from Augsburg showed that he was quite a well-known specialist on mental diseases, and he had also written a textbook upon bacteriology and the brain. Why had the kaiser summoned him? He required no brain specialist.

"We leave tomorrow at noon," the emperor exclaimed brusquely when, an hour later, I was summoned to his room. This amazed me, for our arrangements were to remain three days longer. I recollected Madam Reitschel's words.

"I do not feel at all well," his majesty added, "and this Doctor Vollerthun orders me rest at Potsdam."

In silence I bowed, and then ventured to refer to what was uppermost in my mind.

"May I be permitted to speak to your majesty upon a certain confidential subject?" I begged.

"What subject?" snapped the emperor.

"Your majesty's negotiations with the sultan of Turkey. Frau Reitschel has learned of them, but she is eager to come before you and take an oath of entire secrecy."

The kaiser's eyes narrowed and glowed in sudden anger.

A Woman's Oath.

"A woman's oath!" he cried. "Bah! Never have I believed in silence imposed upon any woman's tongue—more especially that of a born enemy! I appreciate your loyalty and acumen, Von Heltzendorff, but I have, fortunately, known this for some little time, and in strictest secrecy have taken certain measures to combat it. Remember that these words have never been uttered to you! Remember that! You are adjutant, and I am emperor. Understand! I fully appreciate and note your royal report, but it is not woman's sphere to enter our diplomacy, except as a secret agent of our fatherland. Let us say no more."

Ten minutes later, being dismissed, I wandered back through the great silent, echoing corridors of the ancient castle to my own room. A great human drama, greater than any ever placed upon the stage, was now being enacted.

The emperor was plotting the downfall of the Turkish empire and the overthrow of Islam in Europe. Between the all-highest one and the realization of those plans for world power stood one frail little Parisienne, the vivacious, well-meaning Madam Reitschel!

Next day we left the Schloss Langenberg, but before doing so we heard with regret that our charming little hostess had been suddenly taken ill during the night, and the kaiser, as a mark of favor, had ordered his doctor, Vollerthun, to remain behind to attend her. That Herr Reitschel was in great distress I saw from his face as he stood on the little platform at Ilmenau.

Back in Berlin, I wondered what was in progress in that far-off schloss in Thuringia, but a week later the truth became vividly apparent when I read in the Staats-Anzeiger an announcement that Frau Reitschel, the young wife of the famous Anton Reitschel of Constantinople, had been seized by a sudden and mysterious illness and had developed insanity to such a hopeless degree that it had been necessary to confine her in the Rosenau private asylum at Coburg.

In a second I thought of the dancing mistress and the mental specialist from Augsburg.

Poor Madam Reitschel! She died early in 1913, a raving lunatic. Her devoted husband, having served the emperor's purpose, had been recalled to Berlin, where, bereft of the kaiser's favor, he predeceased her by about six months, broken-hearted.

Supervisors' Notice OF Registration of Voters.

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL
633-645 TITLE BUILDING
Baltimore, Md., Aug. 14, 1917.

To the Honorable,
The Board of Supervisors of Elections
for Garrett County,
Oakland, Md.

Gentlemen:—

I beg to call your Board's attention to the fact that by the Act of 1916, Chap. 569, codified as Section 17A of Article 33 of Bagby's Code, and as Section 17A in the 1917 Pamphlet of the Election Laws of Maryland, a registration is required to be held in each of the counties of the State on the Tuesday preceding primary election day. As primary election day this year falls on Tuesday, September 11th, this registration will be held on Tuesday, September 4th.

I am calling your Board's attention to this fact because the 1917 Pamphlet of the Election Laws inadvertently omits references to the registration required to be held in the counties on September 4th.

Several of the Boards of Supervisors of Elections have made certain inquiries of my Department with respect to this registration, and I beg to submit my answer thereto, for your information.

1—Notice of the time and place of the registration to be held on September 4th must be given for the period and in the manner provided by Section 14 of Article 33 of Bagby's Code. While Section 17A does not specifically provide for such notice, yet section 14 applies to every registration held in the State.

2—Section 17A, providing for the September 4th registration, applies both to adults and to persons attaining their majority, as follows:

a. Adults who have not been registered prior to September 4th and who will be entitled to vote at the general election in November, are entitled to register on September 4th, and to vote at the primary election on September 11th, and also, of course, at the general election in November.

b. Persons who become twenty-one years of age between the last preceding general registration day and the registration of September 4th, may register on September 4th, and may vote at the primary election on September 11th, and also, of course, at the general election in November.

Such persons will not be entitled to vote at the primary election of September 11th unless they do register on September 4th, because Section 182, (which allows persons not twenty-one years of age to vote at a primary, provided they will become twenty-one before the general election succeeding the primary), only applies to persons "arriving at the age of twenty-one years after the close of the next preceding registration." In the present case, the next preceding registration to the primary election of September 11th will be the registration of September 4th, so that persons who become twenty-one before September 4th will not arrive at the age of twenty-one "after the close of the next preceding registration." Therefore, persons who become twenty-one before September 4th will not be entitled to vote at the primary election on September 11th unless they register on September 4th.

c. Persons who will become twenty-one years of age after the registration of September 4th and before the general election in November, may register on September 4th, and may vote at the primary election on September 11th, and also, of course, at the general election in November.

d. While persons who will become twenty-one years of age after September 4th and before the primary election of September 11th, may, as just explained, register on September 4th, yet such persons are not required to register on September 4th in order to vote on September 11th. They may vote at the primary election of September 11th, without registering at all, in accordance with the provisions of Section 182. But in order that such persons may be entitled to vote at the general election in November, they must, of course, register at one of the October registrations.

3. After the close of the registration of September 4th, the registration books must be returned by the Boards of Registry to the Supervisors. They should not be retained until after the primary election is held on September 11th. Section 61 requires the Supervisors to deliver to the judges of election before the primary election of September 11th, sealed packages containing, among other things, the registers for such precinct. This provision could not, of course, be complied with unless the registration books are returned to the Supervisors, in order that they may be placed in the sealed packages.

Very truly yours,
ALBERT C. RITCHIE,
Attorney General.

VOLUME 42. OAKLAND, MARYLAND THURSDAY, AUGUST 23, 1917. NUMBER 26

AUTO ACCIDENT LAST THURSDAY

Robert Durst, of Grantsville, Suffered Three Broken Ribs.

Last Thursday about eleven o'clock, a Ford automobile, owned by Mr. C. C. Durst, of Grantsville, was wrecked at the John T. Mitchell farm, just north of Oakland, when a front tire blew out, followed immediately by the blowing out of a rear tire, which caused the car to swerve and topple over in the roadway, pinning beneath the rear wheel of the machine, Robert Durst, aged about sixteen years and injuring him so severely that he is yet confined to the Home Sanatorium in Oakland suffering with three broken ribs and a punctured lung.

An eyewitness to the occurrence, Mr. Paul Mitchell, stated that the machine was going at a very moderate rate of speed when the accident took place and was the first upon the scene. The car was being driven by William Durst, an older brother of Robert, who had as their companion Simeon Lee, the son of a neighbor, who was on his way to Oakland in answer to the draft summons. When the car went over Robert Durst was caught beneath the rear wheel and as the car was still in gear and the power on the wheel continued to revolve with the result that the hub cap literally buried itself in the boy's back just below his shoulder. William Durst and the Lee boy were not injured.

A few minutes after the accident occurred the truck used by the Garrett County creamery happened along and it was used to bring the injured lad to Oakland where he was placed in the hospital and surgical aid rendered.

56 MEN CERTIFIED FOR U. S. SERVICE

More Will Be Today and Probably 300 More Will Be Called.

The Local Board which has been busy for the past two or three weeks examining and certifying men for Army service, adjourned yesterday morning after having gone through the entire list of 290 names listed in the first call for examination.

Thus far the names of fifty-six have been certified to the District Board as being fit for service and an additional number which will bring the list up to eighty will be certified today, leaving a deficit in Garrett county's proportionate share for service of 75 men. To secure this number the local board will issue notices this week for 300 men to appear for examination upon a date to be fixed in the notices thus sent.

The full list of those exempted, discharged and qualified will appear in these columns next week.

FOR THE STATE SENATE.

SENATOR HARVEY J. SPEICHER

Senator Harvey J. Speicher, of Accident, has consented to be a candidate for renomination on the Republican ticket, having reached this conclusion after mature and deliberate consideration.

It was the intention of Mr. Speicher not to again enter the contest, but so much pressure was brought to bear upon him by his friends in every section of the county that he deemed it a duty as well as an obligation to them to allow his name to be placed upon the primary ticket. Appreciating deeply the expressions of his friends both verbally and through the columns of this paper Mr. Speicher, in an interview given out at his home in Accident on Saturday said:

"To the Republicans of Garrett county:

"After careful consideration of the many demands and requests through the columns of THE REPUBLICAN, as well as many personal requests, that I again enter the primaries for renomination and reelection to the Maryland Senate, I feel that under the circumstances and the present conditions of our country that I would not be true to my friends and my party should I decline to give my time, experience, influence and best service to my country's needs.

"I appreciate to the fullest extent the honor you have done me in twice electing me to the highest office within the gift of the people of my county. I have tried to serve you honestly, conscientiously and to the best of my judgment and ability, and by my long service and experience I fully agree with you who have requested that I serve you another term in the Senate, would place me in a much better position to serve the people of my county and State.

"I desire to say a few words regarding the road system of the State. We now have the finest road system of any State in the Union, of which every Marylander should feel proud, and now that the main artery of the State road is completed I hope to see the time when every district and town in our county will be connected up by a State road leading to the main system.

"If nominated and elected, as I hope to be, I will secure an appropriation to supplement the fund alreay appropriated to complete the road from Oakland to the State road system of Preston county, West Va., and use every honorable means to secure an appropriation from the State to complete the State road leading from the main road via Friendsville to the State line, there now being two miles of this road provided for under the Shoemaker Act. By securing such an appropriation from the State will relieve the taxpayers of the county from paying forty per cent. to complete this road as provided under the Shoemaker law, and if possible repeal the Shoemaker Act so far as it applies to Garrett county and have what is due Garrett county from the State under the law, placed in the hands of the County Commissioners to be given each district in the county its pro rata share so that every district may be benefitted instead of only a small section. I shall use all honorable means to secure an appropriation from the State to complete the State road from Gortner to the West Virginia line, also for a road leading from Swanton and Kitzmiller via Deer Park to connect with the main State road; from Grantsville via Jennings to Bittinger; from Bittinger to connect with the State road at a point to be determined by the citizens and the State Road Commission and to connect the Maryland State road from the National Pike to the Pennsylvania State Highway; also from New Germany to Grantsville.

"Garrett county being the best agriculture county in the State, there is nothing that would aid as much in the development of our county as these short spurs of good roads.

"I believe more good roads, better schools and modern conveniences in our homes will go far toward solving the problem of keeping the boys and girls on the farm.

"I have in the past supported all legislation that was for the betterment and for the development of our county. With the accumulated knowledge and experience in legislative matters for the past eight years I will be in a better position to serve you than I have ever been before, and it shall be my highest aim to serve you to the best of my ability and judgment.

NAVY WANTS MEN

Several Thousand Short of Full Strength.

Despite the fact that the operation of the Selective Draft Law has considerably diminished the number of young men available, enlistments in the Navy from Maryland place this State well up in the ranks of the Eastern Naval Division.

Lieutenant M. A. Leahy, Navy Recruiting Officer for the Maryland District, is somewhat disappointed, however, with the more recent results, and believes the falling off in applicants is due largely to the erroneous impression that the Navy's complement has been filled. Lieutenant Leahy is anxious to correct this impression.

There is still need of several thousand more recruits before the Navy will be completely filled to its recently authorized strength of 150,000 men.

The ratings in which men are needed most urgently are apprentice seaman, cooks, bakers and mess-attendants.

Full particulars of Navy enlistments can be obtained from the nearest postmaster; directly from the Navy Recruiting Station, Calvert and Lexington Streets, Baltimore, or from the Navy Recruiting Sub-stations at Cumberland and Hagerstown.

New Highway Proposed.

The West Virginia State Road Commission has given tentative approval to a movement in the Eastern Panhandle for a state highway to connect Cumberland and Hot Springs, Va., passing through Mineral, Hampshire, Hardy, Grant and Pendleton counties in West Virginia. A conference of delegates from the several counties interested has been called to be held in Moorefield August 25, at which Chairman A. D. Williams of the commission has been asked to be present. "Class A" roads in the five West Virginia counties have been established along practically the route indicated, and it is expected in that way to secure both state and Federal aid in building the highway.

WHISKEY MAKING TO STOP SEPT. 8

Ban On Its Manufacture Effective That Date.

Not another drop of whiskey will be manufactured in the United States after 11 o'clock on the night of September 8. All other distilled spirits for use as beverages will cease to be manufactured at the same time.

This ruling was made Thursday by the food administration at Washington after it had been bombardee for several days with a ceaseless flow of telegrams from distillers asking for specific information. The food control law provided that the manufacturer should continue 30 days after approval of the measure. The bill was approved August 10 and consequently its provision would go into effect midnight, September 9. This being Sunday and as the internal revenue law prevents operation of distilleries on the Sabbath a question was raised in the minds of the distillers.

The imitation is placed in Sec. 15 of the food control law:

"That from and after 30 days from the date of the approval of this act, no foods, fruits, food materials or feeds shall be used in the production of distilled spirits for beverage purposes."

The food administration has been informed that distilleries were planning to continue manufacture up to the minute, that is to place the grains in the vats and allow the process fermentation to continue after the limit prescribed by law.

The President has approved Edwin G. Baetger, Baltimore, as food controller for Maryland.

Lawn Fete and Supper.

The ladies of St. Matthew's Episcopal Guild will hold their annual lawn fete and supper Wednesday, Aug. 29th on the lawn of Mr. J. L. Pollock, Second street.

CANDIDATE FOR HOUSE OF DELEGATES

MR. E. A. WEIMER.

The many friends of Mr. E A. Weimer will be much pleased to know that he has consented to make the effort to secure the nomination on the Republican ticket for House of Delegates.

The necessary papers were filed with the Board of Election Supervisors Monday, upon the urgent solicitation of a number of his friends. Mr. Weimer is peculiarly well qualified to serve the people of the county in this capacity.

In addition to being energetic and intelligent, he has already served one term in the House, and made a splendid record. He was absolutely straight on every party and moral question that came up for consideration, and by his gentlemanly deportment, and sincerity won the admiration and respect of all his fellow members. As all are aware, he was born and reared in Garrett county, and has always been a staunch supporter of the principles of Republicanism and of the temperance cause.

DISTRICT NO. 9 FOR SPEICHER

To the Editor of the Republican.

Appreciating the importance at the time of having a man in the State Senate who has had wide experience and poseses in a high degree ability sufficient to secure such legislation as will be for the best interests of the county and state at large and commending Senator Speicher for the record he has made as our representive in the State Senate, we the undersigned urge that Senator Speicher again become our candidate and pledge him our support in the coming primaries and election.

New York Firemen . . .
. By Frederick J. Haskin.

The recent national embargo on exports has thrown New York harbor into unkempt disorder. Long rows of tramp steamers, freighters and ocean liners crowd the docks and block the channel. The wharves are piled with idle cargoes, the city warehouses are bulging with merchandise that was to have gone to Europe, and every hour or two another line of freight cars arrives bringing many more tons of goods.

This crowding of the harbor has increased the city's fire risk about 75 per cent. Much of the cargo is extremely inflammable stuff, some of it munitions, and shipments are arriving so fast that there is no time to sort the goods. Furthermore, several small fires have occurred on the upper river as the result of collisions, it being difficult to navigate through the mass of craft.

The city has nine fire-boats for the control of fires in the harbor, but these are now inadequate, and the railroads and steamship companies have had to form their own fire brigades along the wharves, as well as to appropriate 143 tug boats to guard their cargoes. New York itself, of course, also shares this new fire risk. Its safety depends more or less upon the wind. If a large fire broke out upon the wharves and the wind happened to be blowing landward, the hazard would be great, especially since numerous munition plants and high explosives factories would lie in its path.

In normal times New York is one of the greatest fire risks in the world. On an average 35fires a day, or 12,700 a year occur. The greatest accumulation of wealth in the world must be protected, the highest skyscrapers and the lowest slums. Hence the New York Fire Department is one of the most efficient, in spite of being one of the most overworked, fire departments in existence.

There are 310 fire companies, employing 5,000 men. They are distributed throagh 13 districts, with a chief at the head of each district, who is responsible to one chief executive in charge of the whole organization. Fire-fighting is a difficult problem in each district, some of which lie in suburbs of clean detached houses, others in crowded business districts and congested foreign quarters.

New York has recently made some important improvements in its fire equipment. It is replacing its horses with motor apparatus, for one thing—a change that has brought benefit not only to the city, but to the firemen themselves. Housing conditions are much better. The firemen no longer has to live in a stable and spend the greater part of his time performing the duties of a groom. A garage does not require nearly so much room.

The motor-drawn apparatus typifies the fire department of today. It is thoroughly modern and up-to-date in every respect. Moreover, the fireman himself has changed. No longer do you find him, large-waisted and double-chinned, lounging on the outdoor benches or playing pinochle in the upstairs corridor in a blue atmosphere of cigaret smoke. At least, not in New York. Instead he is usually to be found bending over a set of maps and a wad of white paper, laboriously marking various facts and directions with a blue pencil. For the modern fireman is not only a fire fighter—he is a fire-preventer.

Every day certain firemen are relieved of their duty in answering fire calls to make fire inspections; that is, they make the rounds of all the stores, theatres, garages, factories and public buildings in their district to inspect their qualifications for resisting fire.

This inspection serves a double purpose. It not only educates the firemen with respect to the city's requirements, but it makes him familiar with the physical features of his district. He knows the exits, trap-doors and stairways of every building—private residences excepted, of course—he knows where there are pitfalls that would prove dangerous at a night fire; he knows how many occupants are in each building and where the chemical sprinklers and other fire apparatus are located

All of this is very important, for fire-fighting is not an unskilled profession, but a very scientific one. For example, there is a fire in a tenement house. The first response to the alarm is a hook-and ladder company, which finds the building filled with smoke from a fire which is raging in the cellar. Now the first order of the chief of this company, before the ladder apparatus has been touched at all, is to open the scuttle on the roof of the tenement. This allows the fire to go up inetead of spreading out like a mushroom and imperiling the buildings on each side.

Or suppose the fire is in one of those innumerable stores which have side stairways that lead to apartments above. Instead of attacking from the front or back entrance of the store, the firemen start their firefighting from this side hallway, in order that the fire may be kept from ascending to the apartments above.

Various factors such as these must be taken into account. A fire chief has the lives of his men to think of, as well as the course of the fire, and his position is not always enviable, as, for instance, when it is the life of a trapped child against the life of one of his lieutenants. It must be said of New York firemen that they usually do not have to be urged to endanger their lives for others.

To this technique of fire-fighting the fireman also adds his physical strength, mental agility and courage. Sometimes a life may be saved by the fraction of a second, so that it is absolutely essential that the fireman should think quickly. A few months ago, for example, Richard Mangels of Hook and Ladder Company No. 3 saved the lives of two men by his quick thinking and sheer nerve. Scaling ladders had not been brought to the scene, when Mangels, looking over the roof of the burning building, beheld two men clinging precariously to the top of the fifth floor window shutter, immediately beneath him. Standing on the coping of the roof, the fireman braced a short wooden ladder found on the roof against his legs and extended it out so that it rested against the shutter and wall of the building. Then with other firemen holding him, he held the ladder in this position by main strength long enough for the rescued men to ascend to the roof. The physical strain of this act of endurance was so severe that the fireman afterwards fainted and for many days carried the imprint of a ladder on his body. Mangels received a medal of honor for this act of bravery—a distinction which is a great incentive to reckless merit among the firemen. There are 13 medals of honor distributed by the Mayor each year.

GORTNER

Mr. Lorenza Fike preached a very appreciative sermon in the Union church Sunday morning, his subject being "Gods care for the human family and our responsibility toward them."

Mr. D. J. Swartzentrrber is attending conference near Millersburg, Ohio, at this writing.

Mrs. Spriggs and daughters Juanita and Olive, of Westernport, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Wamsley last week.

Miss Leola Schrock is visiting her sister near Dobbin, W. Va., this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Bender, of Springs, Pa., were visiting there daughter Mrs. Noah Lichty the past week.

Miss Nellie Becker, of Lancaster, Pa., is visiting relatives at this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Eli Miller and daughter Eunice, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Miller and children and Mrs. Mintie Stauanus and children, of Springs, Pa., motered to this place Sunday and were guests at D. J. Swartzentruber.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Slabaugh and daughters, Thelma and Rosamond, of St. Louis Mo., are visiting Mr. Slabaugh's mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Bender, of Springs, and Mrs. Simon Baker and son Harry, of Loch Lynn, were Sunday visitors at S. J. Lichty's.
